GUIDE, 14,680, RECORD, 2:16 1-4, BY DIRECTOR, DAM IMOGENE, PROPERTY OF A. T. HATCH, ESQ.

GUIDE 2:16 1-4.

The Fastest Son of Director with a Trotting Record—A Brief Description of Some of the Well-Bred Trotters Belonging to A. T. Hatch.

The high value that has been placed upon the progeny of the "Black Tornado of the Turf," Director, 2:17, is not founded on the fact that he is owned by a thorough horseman who has bred and developed the very fastest of them, but because everyone acknowledges that for conformation, disposition, perfect action, speed and—what are considered the most valuable qualities of all—level headedness and gameness they are unexcelled. No horse can be considered a race horse unless he possesses these two latter traits. All the training, feeding and work on earth is of no avail when a horse lacks heart and is too fond of running when urged to trot. The son of Dictator and Dolly transmitted the qualities to all his progeny for which he himself was noted in many a hard-fought battle for turf honors. There never was a good mare bred to him that did not have a colt or filly faster than herself and have also the endowment of courage and good sense; the better the mare, the better the produce. This fact has become so apparent to the breeders and owners of large stock farms in the East, after they saw and heard what Director is doing as a sire, that his owner is now in possession of hundreds of letters from the very best class of horsemen begging him to send Director east, so that they can avail themselves of the opportunity of breeding their best mares to him. The prospects are that Mr. Salisbury will consent. Thus another great sire will leave the shores of the Pacific, but if he does, he will leave behind him one at least that is capable of "carrying on the business of the firm near the same old stand;" we refer to his son Guide, that received the lowest trotting record of any of his sons, 2:16¼. Besides this honor, he is a grand individual in every respect. Few better or more substantial-looking stallions are in America to-day. He is only seven years of age; in color a beautiful shade of seal brown with wine-colored flanks and muzzle; in height he stands 15.2 hands, and weighs 1,090 pounds. When it is said of him that he is like Director in conformation there can be but little added. From the points of his well-shaped ears to the coronets of his hind feet he is as near the ideal of a well-muscled, perfectly formed horse as one could wish. As a bystander lately remarked: "You cannot find a blemish or a weak spot about him; he has plenty of the right kind of bone, good joints and feet, fine barrel, sloping shoulders, strong quarters, good loin, short back and a head that one could almost hold a conversation with; in fact, he is a noble representative of both his sire and dam's families." His disposition is most excellent. In action, he moves like all the Directors that are natural trotters; he has that strong and bold, yet easy stride that always seems as if the speed was in reserve somewhere and could be brought into use when needed at any part of the mile. He is remarkably level-headed and seems to understand just what is required of him.

His pedigree is one that bristles with the bright names of many illustrious individuals. The five broodmares that are therein represented: Imogene, Dolly, Clara, Lady Fallis and Gretchen are a royal quintette of famous matrons, even if nothing was said of the sires. But let us look at it from the beginning and see if there are many better bred horses standing for public service to compare with Guide, and while doing so, let us not forget the fact that in breeding mares to him, the owners can almost pledge the service fee on getting a fast, game and reliable performer.

Guide was sired by Director 2:17, out of Imogene (dam of Del Win 2;26¼,) by Norwood 522; second dam by American Star 14; third dam by Harry Clay 45.

Director 2:17 (sire of Direct 2:06, the fastest harness horse on earth, Margaret S. 2:12¼, Guide 2:16¼, and six others in the 2:30 list), by Dictator 113 (sire of 25 trotters) out of Dolly (dam of Onward 2:25½, Thorndale 2:22½, Czarina 2:21), by Mambrino Chief 11, out of Fanny, grandam of Lady Majolica 2:25, by Ben Franklin.

Norwood 522, was by Hambletonian 10, (the patriarch of the trotting world), out of Lady Fallis (dam of Kisbar 2:27¾, Pickering 2:30, Gretchen, dam of Clingstone 2:14, and Clingstone II, 2:29½), by American Star 14, (the great broodmare sire); second dam Beck, by Long Island Blackhawk 24, he by Andrew Jackson 4, out of Sally Miller 2:37, by Tippoo Saib.

American Star 14, was the sire of Clara, the dam of Dictator 113, and Dexter 2:17¼, Alma 2:28¾, and Astoria 2:29½. Guide traces to him three times.

Harry Clay 45, record 2:29, was the sire of the dams of Electioneer, Bodine 2:19½, St Julien 2:11¼, and ten others in the 2:30 list.

Guide made a record of 2:28½ as a four-year-old winning that mark in three straight heats at Santa Rosa. Last year he lowered this mark to 2:24½ at Napa. Nothing further was done with him in the way of training until this fall when at the breeder's meeting Orrin A. Hickok won the first heat in a race in 2:24. Guide trotted to the first half in 1:09, but he had not received sufficient work to prepare him to carry that clip; however, he kept on improving, and at Napa he trotted second to Una Wilkes in a race in the following excellent time, he won the second heat in 2:20½. Time of heats, 2:22½, 2:20¼, 2:20¼, 2:24¼, 2:22. Mr. O. A. Hickok then sent Guide to the kite-shaped track, and on October 6th the horse lowered his record 2¾ seconds coming in under the wire easily in 2:17¾. He went to the half in 1:05. On October 24th, he lowered his previous mark to 2:16¼, and on November 3d he lowered it still further to 2:16¼, his present record. He trotted the first half in 1:10, last half in 1:06¼. He has never been bred but to few mares outside of those owned by Mr. Hatch, yet all his progeny show that they are trotters, and are of good size, solid colors and very intelligent. Before the Merry Christmas carols of 1892 are heard some of the youngsters by this horse will be brought prominently forward in the trotting world.

Mr. Hatch has a large number of stallions, mares, colts and fillies at his Rio Alto ranch, which consists of some 4,400 acres of rich, alluvial soil on the banks of the Sacramento river, about twenty miles above Red Bluff, in Tehama County. There are about four miles of a river front; some 500 acres of this land is devoted to fruit culture. On this farm Mr. Hatch has a large number of sheds, stables and paddocks where the horses have the very best of accommodations. At all times of the year feed is plentiful and the stock always looks well.

Not feeling content with but one choicely bred stallion, this gentleman purchased several others, one is called My Guy, he is by Guy Wilkes out of Gracie, by Arthurton; second dam Old Lady by David Hill Jr. My Guy is brother to L. B. McIntosh's handsome stallion Arthur Wilkes, (sire of Wayland W., two-year-old record, 2:34.)

Another promising stallion is Sidney Roy, by Sidney, 2:19¾. Miss Roy, by Buccaneer; second dam Ella Roy, dam of Allan Roy, 2:17½, she by Joseph (thoroughbred). When this youngster gets a little more age he will be a 'jim dandy." He trotted half a mile as a two-year-old over the Pleasanton course in 1:15½, and the second trial, same day, in 1:13½. Later in the season, John A. Goldsmith drove him a half in 1:10¾. As a three-year-old, he trotted quarters in 30 seconds. But he is one of those high-strung, ambitious trotters that needs plenty of work and careful handling.

Among the band of royal looking matrons, colts and fillies were the following:

Duxie, a three year-old, by Director, 2:17, out of Queen, by Hambletonian, 725; second dam by Jack Tremble, he by Williamson's Belmont.

Birdie, by Ulster Wilkes (son of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, and an Ulster Chief mare, second dam May Queen, 2:26, by May Day), out of Wren by A. W. Richmond; second dam by John Morgan (Reavis).

Lena is a bay mare by Admiral, out of Lenore, by Gladiator; second dam, Betty Morgan, by Vermont Morgan; third dam, Betsy Morgan.

Cressie is the name of a brown filly by Guide, out of Bonnie Jean, one of the best broodmares here; she is by Admar, out of Lady Jane, by Gladiator, etc. This horse Admar is by Admiral, out of Bruna by San Bruno, he by Easton's David Hill, second dam Truckee Jane by Grafton.

Genevieve is by Guide, out of Aldane by Wissahickon and a very promising filly she is, too.

Stella is the name of a well-bred, handsome filly by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Lady Fay, by Modoc Chief, he by Lexington. Stella is in foal to Guide 2:16¼.

Lolita, by Altamont, is out of Kate, by Perringer's Mike 3,403; second dam Mary Thompson, by imp. Glencoe; this is a very speedy mare and has trotted inside of 2:23 several times. She has a filly by Sidney called Lolita, that will be "going down the line" with the best of them next year.

As Imogene, the dam of Guide, 2:16¼ and Del Win, 2:26¼, died last year, her name will be perpetuated through her three-year-old daughter Imogene, by Admar.

Lady Gamble is another good-looking broodmare. She is by Steinway 2:25¾, out of the Tiffany Mare (dam of Gibraltar 2:22½). As Mr. Hatch is bound to be "in the swim," he has bred her to Simmocolon 2:18, and she is heavy in foal to him.

Electe, a fine-looking bay mare by Frank Malone's Electioneer colt out of Kishemcower (he by Hamlet, dam Jennie by Star Davis). Electe's dam, Jenny Lind, is the dam of Prince Allen, 2:26½; and the grandam of George Washington, 2:20. What a great mare this is to breed to Guide?

Imona, is a brown mare by Steinway 1808, out of Imogene (dam of Guide, 2:16¼, and Del Win 2:26¼), by Norwood 522. She has a beautiful brown colt by My Guy.

Black Guide is the name of a black colt by Guide, 2:16¼, out of Lady Jane by Gladiator; second dam, Truckee Jane by Grafton; third dam Betsey Morgan.

Ida, by Irvington 375, out of Young Peanuts (dam of Sweetbriar, 2:26½), by George M. Patchen Jr. 31; second dam Old Peanuts or, as she is now called, Grey Lize (dam of Billy Hayward 489, sire of two in 2:30), by the Morse Horse.

I. Guide is a bay colt by Guide, 2:16¼, out of Ida by Irvington, etc.

Light, by Sidney, 2:19¾, out of Ida by Irvington, etc, is a very handsome chestnut filly.

I. Direct is another filly by Director, out of Ida by Irvington, etc.

Briggie, by Brigadier, 2:21¼, out of a daughter of Signal and Jack Hayes, is a large roomy broodmare; she has a weanling filly by Corrector, son of Director, that is called Briggette.

Night is the name of a black filly by Guide, out of Mollie by Admar; second dam Kittie, by Hornbeck's Dave Crockett, (thoroughbred) by Billy Cheatham.

Primo is the name of another handsome yearling by Guide out of Primero, by Admar; second dam Lady Jane by Gladiator; third dam Truckee Jane by Grafton, etc.

Collette is the name of a bay filly by Guide, out of Colleen, by Artburton; second dam Cigale, by Admiral; third dam Betty Morgan, etc.

La Signa is a handsome bay mare by Le Grande out of Lady Signal. She was bred to Guide last year and the handsome filly Sygnette is the result.

Laura is a well-shaped broodmare by Admira, out of Polly Lincoln by San Bruno; second dam by a son of Argyle. Her filly this year by Guide is called Lurette. This horse, San Bruno, was by Easton's David Hill.

To enumerate all the handsome mares, colts and fillies we saw would take up too much space, even though we dislike to stop telling about them.

Mr. Hatch has started in right, and next year we will read of the performances of many of the Guides in seances on the turf when controlled by properly developed spirits of the sulky. Guide will be among the greatest progenitors of early speed, or we will be greatly disappointed. Everything is in his favor. His advertisement as to location, terms, etc., are in our advertising columns.

Kind Words for Dr. Hicks and His Horses.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Having just examined the catalogue of broodmares and fillies to be sold by my old friend, Dr. M. W. Hicks, at auction January 27, 1892, I am really astonished that the owners of the great breeding establishments of California should not have long before this purchased some of these grandly-bred animals. The wonderful youngsters developed by Giulio Valensin from the coupling of some of the same class of mares with his great Sidney are sufficient to convince almost any person that the mares in question would be a grand outcross for any well-bred stallion.

The first great success of Electioneer 125 was from his mating with May Fly, May Flower and Melinche, all sired by old St. Clair 16,675, a pacing stallion whose breeding is absolutely unknown. The mares to be sold at the Hick's auction should do at least as well, mated to the best sons of Electioneer, as those St. Clair mares have done. Why should not Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, Director, 2:17, Guide, 2:16¼, James Madison, 2:17¾, Sable Wilkes, 2:18, Silas Skinner, 2:17, McKinney, 2:12½, Stamboul, 2:11, Palo Alto, 2:08¾, Advertiser, 2:16, Arion, 2:10½, Hawthorne, Eros and Mount Hood do as well with these mares as Sidney has done?

Fernleaf by Flaxtail 8142, son of Bull Pup, by Old Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr. 12, sire of the dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, bred to Sidney 4770, produced Goldleaf, three years, 2:15, four years, 2:11½; Thistle, four years, 2:19¼.

Flight, a daughter of Prairie Bird, 2:28½ (the dam of Prompter 2305, sire of five in 2:30 list), bred to Sidney, produced Fleet, two years, 2:24, and Sid Fleet, 2:26¼, at two years, while Flirt, out of Manhaska Belle (a full sister in blood to Prairie Bird), bred to Sidney, produced the champion yearling Fron-Fron, 2:25¼, and Memo, three years, trial 2:20½.

Fernleaf, bred to Buccaneer 2,656, whose dam, Tinsley Maid, was her full sister, produced Shamrock, two years, 2:25, the world's record at that time.

Lightfoot, by Flaxtail, another full sister to Fernleaf and Tinsley Maid, the dam of Buccaneer, bred to that horse, produced Pride, yearling record, 2:44½, the fastest in the world at that time, and Pearl, 2:32½, the dam of Cora, two years, 2:44.

Posey, the poorest Flaxtail mare brought to California by Dr. Hicks, bred to Stamboul 5,101, produced Martha, yearling record 2:41¼, three years 2:30, four years 2:26¼, trial 2:18½.

Viola, by Flaxtail, out of Madam Buckner (the dam of Argent, 2:24½, and Acrobat, 2:18½), bred to Alcazar 5,102, produced Sacramento Girl, three years, 2:30.

Mary, by Flaxtail, out of a daughter of Bright Eyes, son of Boanerges, a thoroughbred, bred to Prompter 2,305, (whose dam Prairie Bird, 2:28½, was also by Flaxtail), produced Apex, two years 2:42, three years 2:31, and 2:26 at four years, and her daughter, Grace, by Buccaneer 2,656, whose dam, Tinsley Maid, was by Flaxtail, bred to Prompter, produced Creole, four years, 2:20, and another of her daughters, Letta, bred to Singleton (whose dam, Lightfoot, was by Flaxtail), produced Maud Singleton, 2:28½. Mary, bred to Egmont 1,828, produced Sterling 6 223, sire of five in the 2:30 list.

Prairie Bird, 2:28½, bred to Blue Bull 75, produced Prompter 2,305, the sire of five in the 2:30 list and the dams of two that each went into the 2:30 list at the age of three years, and her daughter, Flight, bred to Buccaneer 2,656, produced Fleet, yearling record 2:36, two years 2:24, and Sid Fleet, two years, 2:26¼

Five producing stallions—Prompter 2,305, Sterling 6,223, Singleton, Apex 8,935 and Buccaneer 2656, are out of Flaxtail mares.

Of the seventy-six animals named in the Hicks catalogue, but four do not carry any of the Flaxtail blood in their pedigrees.

A filly sired by Prompter 2305, son of Blue Bull 75, out of a daughter of Mahaska Belle, the grandam of the great yearling Fron-Fron, 2:25¼, will have one line to Blue Bull 75, two lines to Old Pilot, sire of Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Maud S, 2:08¾, two lines of Truckahoe (full brother to the dam of Boston, sire of Lexington), and six lines to imp. Messenger—a royal combination of great broodmare blood lines. Some of these mares, bred to Palo Alto, Direct, Guy Wilkes, Director, James Madison, Sable Wilkes, Guide, Hawthorne, Eros, Silas Skinner and Mount Hood, should produce record-breakers. Such an opportunity to obtain a grand lot of broodmares has never before been offered to California breeders. I am sorry that the Doctor's health is such as to compel him to retire from business. He should get good prices for the animals he is about to sell at auction.

Very Respectfully,
E. I. ROBINSON.

SAN FRANCISCO, December 28, 1891.

OAKLAND, CAL., Dec. 29, 1891.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN: I feel it is a duty to publicly (or privately, as you please) thank you for your great magnanimity toward Mr. M. W. Hicks in "taking pleasure," editorially, in setting forth so conclusively the great merits of Faxtail and his descendants and rising to the very pinnacle of kindness in so emphatically endorsing Dr. Hicks' superior judgment in equine matters.

I am personally acquainted with Dr. Hicks, and know of his present physical misfortune, an occasioned paralysis, caused by a severe fall, so that is the reason I feel so very grateful to you, and just here please allow me to thank the kind-hearted Samuel Gamble for his unequivocal indorsement of Dr. Hicks and the great Flaxtail and his descendants.

I well remember twenty years ago or more, while residing in Indiana, that any horse with Blue Bull blood in his composition found ready sale at a higher price than any other known stock or strain of horses; and it now seems from recorded facts, that instead of his progeny deteriorating they have and are adding lustre to his shining hemlet through Flaxtail and his descendants.

Mr. Editor, I think you display consummate wisdom in referring to Gold Leaf, 2:11½, at four years; Thistle, 2:19¼; Memo, trial 2:20½; Martha, 2:26, trial 2:18½ at four years; Fron-Fron, 2:25½ at one year, and Sterling, sire of five in the 2:30 list at ten years, and in saying, "Such a showing proves conclusively that for early speed due credit must be given to the descendants of Flaxtail," and again: "The above showing proves that Fron-Fron, Memo, Gold Leaf, Thistle, Sid Fleet, Buccaneer, Apex, Sterling and all the balance of the descendants from the mares brought to California by Dr. Hicks are related to royalty, and have something more back of their breeding than the 'soft' crosses that jealous breeders have been so fond of referring to in the past."

Mary, the dam of Sterling, with five in the 2:30 list at ten years, could not be officially recorded in the Table of Great Broodmares, as she is, unless her offspring were of sufficient merit to give her such title; and yet enough horse jealousy, as Mr. Gamble honestly puts it, has, it seems, been sufficiently potent to keep her son, Sterling, a known producer, and almost all of Dr. Hicks' royally-bred stock in the background. But, Mr. Editor, when I look around me and see the average of intelligence and business acumen on the increase in the ranks of horse breeders, I have faith in the ultimate justice that will be accorded Dr. Hicks.

Yours truly, L. GRIFFIN.

TALBOT STOCK FARM.

The Beautiful Home of Mount Hood 12,040, 2:22 3-4—A Sketch of Some of the Fashionably-Bred Broodmares, Colts and Fillies At This Well-Appointed Place.

There seems to be a desire on the part of horse breeders to have their stock farms as near San Francisco as possible, knowing that all who are seeking excellent stock must make this city their headquarters. Within a radius of 150 miles all the prominent stock farms are to be found, and can be reached in a few hours' ride. Buyers generally have but little time to waste when they reach here; consequently they confine all their transactions with the prominent places that are nearest to them and where they can ride to two or three of them in a day.

Some three years ago Mr. F. C. Talbot purchased a tract of land about ten miles from San Francisco, just over the first range of low hills northeast of San Leandro, beyond the Souther Farm. At that time the land was used as a wheat field and was barren of all improvements.

Hearing that Mount Hood, 2:22¾, was over there, your correspondent and a friend decided to visit the place and see where this game son of Eros was ensconced for the winter. Taking the 7:30 boat, which connected with the cars at the Oakland Mole, in less than an hour the train stopped at the pretty little town of San Leandro, where Mr. Wm. Kelly, the superintendent of the farm, was in waiting with a team to convey us to the farm by way of the smooth road over the bridge and through the lane that leads up to the Souther Farm. On one side the farmers were plowing, seeding and harrowing, on the other trainers were driving some Souther Farm colts around the track which enclosed a thrifty-looking orchard. Turning to the left over a newly-made road that was cut through a small hill, we suddenly came in view of the Talbot Stock Farm.

Nestled on a little knoll in the center of the valley which was surrounded on all sides by gently undulating hills, was the beautiful three-story residence of the proprietor; the large portico surrounding the edifice, with its smooth columns entwined with flowers, the sloping, red-painted roof and tall chimneys contrasting well with the whiteness of the building. The macadamized driveway surrounding the structure was bordered with lawns and gardens of flowers. The dairy house, the carriage house, reservoir on the hill above and the heavy growth of laurel and oak trees on the bank of the creek below the house all contributed to make the picture complete. To the right, as we rode by, we saw a large barn, wherein are kept the stallions and youngsters; behind it were the broodmare paddocks which were enclosed with high fences. The matrons had a fine field to run in. On the lower side was a creek that received its supply of water from a spring and little reservoir at the head of the gulch. This gulch was dammed just below the barn, and an eighteen inch cement pipe substituted to carry off the water. Parallel to it on the other side of the barn a pipe was also placed to carry off the surplus water that came from the hillside; openings at proper places were covered with grating, and last winter during the heavy storms these two long cement pipes were sufficient to carry all the water to the large living creek that runs below the residence.

The superintendent's residence is farther down the valley on the side of a hill above the orchard, which is planted between the house and the high hill where the reservoir is. A cow-yard, well stocked with prize-winning Jerseys, is farther up the creek, which flows through it, and chicken-houses neatly enclosed by a wire netting, are separated from the carriage barn and stables by a driveway. Neat white bridges cross the creek at various places. One of them is just behind the row of low buildings, in which are the blacksmith shop, the harness and carpenter shops. Beside them, in the same row, is the granary storeroom, laundry and drying room for the employees.

In front of the row is a novel arrangement for the broodmares. A house about 35x25 stands in the center of four little paddocks where alfalfa is growing. There are four doors and four partitions or box stalls in the house; each door opens into one of the paddocks, and every box stall and paddock is, therefore, made exclusive for the mare. Water is pumped to the reservoir by means of two Reagan Vapor engines, and from it is piped throughout the place. The dairy is fitted up with racks and tables, and its cemented floor, pure, flowing water and airy appearance looks most inviting. Mr. Talbot likes a good dog; in fact, he must like a good many, for the prettiest, neatest kennels imaginable are built around at various places for the comfort of the well-bred canines.

Looking in every direction, the "magic touch of wealth and taste is seen." The orchards that have lately been set out with olives, oranges, peaches, apples, walnuts, almonds, etc., look healthy and thriving. On every little bench or knoll the young trees that will soon bear fruit seem to be planted in rich, alluvial soil.

Crossing over the smooth road past a flag pole some hundred feet high, where the stars and stripes of our dear old flag were waving, we entered the large, white barn. It is three hundred feet long and eighty-five feet wide. The highest point of the gable roof is about ninety feet from the ground. The length of the roof is relieved by a pretty cupola in the center. The box stalls, which are fifteen feet by fifteen feet, are arranged along through the center on each side of an open space, in which there is room for about two hundred and fifty tons of hay. Around this long series of stalls is a miniature track for the exercising of the youngsters.

Everything about the place, from the finely fitted-up offices to the section set aside for the breaking carts, is indicative of neatness, solidity and usefulness. In the first stall was Mount Hood, the premier stallion of the farm, and, on being led out, by his elasticity of gait and general playfulness one could see that he was in the full enjoyment of health. He was foaled March 31, 1885. In color he is a beautiful seal brown, no white; he stands 15.3 in height, but one would have to step alongside of him to measure; he is so well-proportioned as to be very deceptive; in weight he is about 1,100 pounds; he resembles his sire in the perfect symmetry of his conformation with this good exception—he is larger; his limbs are strong, hocks well shaped, knees large and cannon bones short and heavy; his fetlocks are not lengthy and weak-looking; his hoofs hard and black; his arms, inside and out, as well as his gaskins, are well-muscled and well-shaped; his stifles stand out clear and strong. Looking at him from behind he has the regular Electioneer curve from the points of his hips to the straight, strong, rounding quarters supporting them. His shoulders are oblique, the withers on a line with the coupling. His head is well set on to his neck, the wide jowls permitting of plenty of throttle room. He has a quiet, mild-looking eye; the shape of the head and face denoting intelligence and determination combined with a good disposition. As it has been said of him by many prominent horsemen: "He is the peer of any horse in the State," it is almost needless to say anything further regarding the appearance of this game grandson of the immortal Electioneer.

In looking up his pedigree we find that it is not gilt-edged, but simply solid gold, being built up of lines of ancestors that are ultra-fashionable because they have proved themselves worthy of all praise that can be bestowed upon them. He is sired by Eros 2:29½ (sire of Wanda 2:17½, Mount Hood 2:22¾, My-My 2:25¾, Oro Fino 2:29, Maraquita 2:30 and Daylight 2.30), out of Alice, dam of Alfred (sire of Langton 2:26½) by Almont 33, (sire of 38 in the 2:30 list) second dam Norma 2:33½ (dam of Norris 2:22½, Lucy Cuyler, trial for Robert Bonner, 2:16½, Nellie Benton, trial for Chas. Marvin 2:18, and Norval 2:17½, sire of Norhawk 2:20, Novelist 2:27½ and the great yearling Norlaine 2:31½) by Alexander's Norman 25 (sire of Zula 2:14¾, May Queen 2:20 and four sires of 2:30 trotters) third dam a daughter of Todhunter's Sir Wallace out of Eagletta by Gray Eagle, out of Mary Howe by Tiger.

Eros is by Electioneer (sire of 100 2:30 performers, and out of Sontag Mohawk (dam of Sally Benton 2:17¾, Norhawk 2:20½, Sport 2:22¾, Colma 2:25½, Conductor 2:25½, Sonoma 2:28 and Eros 2:29½), by Mohawk Chief; second dam Sontag Nellie by Toronto Sontag 307; third dam the famous five-mile trotter Nellie Gray.

Almont 33, sire of the dam of Mount Hood, is the greatest son of Abdallah 15, and has founded a family that for size, conformation, color and speed is considered equal to the best, moreover it is a family that breeds on.

Mount Hood is a very speedy trotter, his sire is a trotter and a sire of trotters. His grandsire was one of the greatest sires of speedy trotters that ever lived, and he was by the great patriarch of the trotting family, Hambletonian 10. Mount Hood's dam was by a sire of campaigners, and she was the dam of a sire; his grandam also not only produced speedy sons and daughters, but one of them is considered by many of the most prominent of all Electioneer's sons. Therefore we can truthfully say of Mount Hood that his inheritance warrants extreme speed combined with the lasting qualities of a campaigner and the ability to transmit with uniformity his own individual worth. He was never bred until 1890, consequently his progeny were only weanlings. They are all solid colors—bays, blacks or browns.

Mount Hood made his first appearance on a track October 6th at the Stockton course. Orrin Hickok drove him in a race with Clarion in 2:26¼, 2:25¾ and 2:56¾, Mount Hood winning first and last heats and race. October 13th, on account of the high wind blowing which prevented Balkan and others from trotting within five seconds of their record, he trotted in 2:27. November 17th he trotted his mile gamely and finished strong in 2:22¾, his present record.

There is not a very large collection of broodmares or youngsters at present on the farm, but they make up in quality what they lack in quantity. Everyone is standard and registered.

The first weanling looked at is a bay called Tyee Hood 16,812, by Mount Hood, out of Sadie, 2:36, by Reliance; second dam by Billy Hayward.

Josephine Hood is a pretty seal brown weanling filly by Mount Hood out of Session Girl by Ulster Chief sire of Niles Beauty 2:25½; second dam by Signal.

Violitta is a chestnut filly by Kaffir 15,045, 2:30, a son of Alcazar 2:20½, out of Violette, by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; second dam Viola, by Echo; third dam Woodbine, by Woodburn; fourth dam Victress, by Williamson's Belmont. This breeding needs no comment.

Ruby Wilkes is a game-looking, strongly-built filly by Roy Wilkes, 2:08¼, out of Judy by Peacock 12,033, 2:23½ (by Hambletonian 725, out of Jane McLane, dam of Jim Mulvenna); second dam, Mary by Gray John.

A Sidney yearling of the same color and markings as Frou-Frou, the fast yearling, was next led out. She is called Sophia S.; when turned loose on the miniature track she threw her head and tail up and trotted away as free and easy as if she was all rubber. When hitched up, however, she paces, and paces fast. Monroe Salisbury says that these are the kind of youngsters that make the very fastest pacers. Her dam is Sadie by Reliance; second dam by Billy Hayward.

A two year old, low-sized, well-muscled, dark iron gray filly was inspected. She is called Molly R, and is by A. W. Richmond, out of Jessie C. (grandam of Ben Corbitt 2:30) by Ben Wade; second dam Lucy by Traveller, third dam Kit by John Morgan: fourth dam old Bally, s. t. b. by Tiger Whip.

Anita by Mambrino Wilkes, (sire of Balkan 2:15), out of Anna Magee, 2:27½, by Paddy Magee, he by General Taylor, second dam Winona by Whipple's Hambletonian; third dam Vanona Fee by Illinois Medoc. She looks as if she ought to be fast and, if she inherits her dam's disposition, the road will never be too long for her. She is a light gray in color.

A filly that resembles Wanda 2:17¼, and is called Tote, was then turned loose. She is a bay, two years old, by Eros out of Jennie by Elmo, second dam s t b by Chieftain, rather tall and delicate looking, but when she gets age and strength and fills out some of the record-breakers will have to trot to beat her. She has large, intelligent eyes, and resembles a thoroughbred in conformation. Her sister is used by Mr. Talbot in his buggy, but she is hardier and more substantial in appearance. They are both sisters to Iris, the sire of Rosiris, the two-year-old that got a record of 2:40½ this fall.

Nellie Hood also claims attention. She is out of Nellie by Ironclad by Hambletonian 725.

Anna Magee, 2:37½, a hardy-looking, clean-limbed, gray mare by Paddy Magee, the famous son of General Taylor, came over to us in the broodmare paddock. She is stinted to Sidney 2:19¾. This mare has a great reputation earned while being driven for eleven years on the road.

Sadie, 2:36, (dam of Tyee Hood, 16812) is a medium-sized bay mare that shows plenty of courage and resembles the never tiring road animals it is always a pleasure to ride after.

Maggie May by Brown's Volunteer 2:27, 1758, is a very good-looking broodmare, the shape of the loin and conformation of the coupling denoting the impress that her sire always left on his progeny. She is in foal to Simmocolon; she is out of Lizzie R (dam of Emma Temple, 2:21) by Emigrant, son of Billy McCracken.

Besides these, there are a number of handsome Shetland and Panama ponies on the place

Mr. Talbot will stand Mount Hood at this fine stock farm at a very low figure considering his breeding, record and conformation, and also offers the sum of $500 to the breeder of the first one of this horse's progeny that enters the 2:30 list. Mr. Kelly is a careful horseman, and we can truthfully say that no better care can be given mares than will be given to those sent to this well-appointed farm, which will some day be known all over the United States for the excellence of the horses raised there.

A Tale of the Turf.

William Amacker was one of the characters of the turf. Of age, 37, twenty-odd years of these had been spent "knocking about the world." He was born in a parish seventy-five miles from New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, and, although of American parentage (indeed, his pedigree went back several generations in the United States), his dark skin and coal black eyes gave credence to the general supposition that he was an Italian.

This gained in popularity by the actions of the man, who showed all the passions of the dark-skinned races. At an early age he left home for Texas, and located there and found, as did most of the men of his day, use for his gun, the handiwork of which filled several graves. Once he filled the office of deputy sheriff under a Republican administration, for Bill was a Republican to the backbone.

Twelve or thirteen years ago he fell in love with and married a Texas lady. Family troubles, consisting of constant altercations with members of her family, caused him to desert his wife and baby, and come to a more civilized community. But behind him he left property for the wife and child which to-day must be worth many thousands of dollars.

Brooding over his losses probably made of him the morose, sad man he was. A fine card-player, he would sit for hours and never speak a word, and there always seemed to be a vacant, far-away look in his eyes.

He was a hard man to keep broke, and every now and again he would turn up with lots of money. Drunk—and he was a periodical drinker—he was a terror, and not many years ago emptied his revolver at another sport in Calhoun place, his adversary likewise seeking to bore a hole in him. Both, however, were too drunk to hit anything, except, perchance, a passing sparrow, high in air.

Amacker seemed to take to horses naturally, and by reason of the fact that he usually pulled off his good things was fast gaining a reputation as one of the best of trainers.

Last year he took Worth down East and started him for the Toboggan Slide Handicap at Westchester. Engaged were the fastest sprinters in the United States, and Amacker got on at as long a price as 100 to 1 at the first betting. So heavily did he back his horse that he stood to win $75,000 on the race, and the post odds against Worth were only 15 to 1. The race was won by August Belmont's Fides, and Worth was unplaced. But Bill knew that his horse ran a great race for his money, because, getting off badly in the large field, he got through in the stretch and ran well up. So a few days later he entered Worth again, and his horse got the money. It was on this victory that O'Connor and Shaw of St. Paul made such a killing, and it was said that the party won about $60,000. This year Amacker has not been prominent on the turf. Near the track at Nashville he had bought a small farm for $10,000, and here he spent most of his time with his eleven head of thoroughbred stock. It is said he had a grand two-year-old filly which never started, it being Bill's idea that she would be a world-beater next year, and his theory was that animals are injured by racing as two-year-olds. He was just shaping the filly up to make another killing down East next spring.

But he took to Latonia this fall a two-year-old filly named Dixie V. and got off a good thing with her. This was the remote cause of his death, for, elated, he took to the bottle, and was drunk several days. Returning to Nashville in his inebriated condition, he shot and mortally wounded his protege.

Amacker and his nephew immediately took to the woods, but were caught by the officers forty miles from Nashville. Amacker was put in a cart and started for the railroad station, but almost as soon as the cavalcade moved (for the officers followed with their shotguns trained upon their prisoner) Amacker took from his pocket a vial containing poison and swallowed the contents. Medical aid was not to be procured, and upon reaching Nashville the poison had so fastened upon the man that all efforts to save his life were futile.

In the time that elapsed between the murder and the capture Bill had become himself. His strong common sense told him that there was no escaping the gallows should he be captured, and his reading told him the way the Roman escaped the executioner.

The wires told in Texas the tale of his end, and soon thereafter Bill's wife and heir put in their claim to his estate, which amounted to over $20,000.

St. Louis to Have a Spring Meeting.

Owing to the splendid outlook for a grand season of racing, the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association has decided to give (in addition to their summer meeting) a spring meeting lasting from April 30th to June 3rd, 1892. Owners of thoroughbred horses should bear in mind the fact that the value of the stakes at this spring meeting will range from $1,000 to $5,000, while the purses will be as liberal in character as the stakes. The entries to the stakes close on January 15, 1892. Address C. W. Bellairs, 509 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo., and do not delay, for there are many neat plums to be plucked at the coming meeting.

LOS ANGELES RACES.

Very Fast Time and Small Crowds the Leading Features.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Dec. 25, 1891.

The meeting opened to-day with a small attendance and fair weather. Acclaim, in the Electric Railway Stakes, made her mile in 1:40 4-5, the fastest time on record in this part of the State. Motto was a top heavy favorite, and came away with ease in the stretch and won by about two lengths. Acclaim beat John Treat as far in the second race. Ben H. was pulled up in the second race, thinking it was no go, and although he made up the lost ground, the effort was too much for Idaho Chief and Oregon Eclipse sailed away from him in the stretch, the lightly-weighted son of Partisan winning cleverly by nearly a length. Hercules won the last race by a narrow margin—less than half a length—The Jew and Duffy gaining at every jump. R. B Brown, H. McGregor and Capt. A. W. Barrett were the judges.

Again was there good racing and a poor crowd. John Treat, carrying a big load of money, captured the first race by about two lengths with ease. The good thing uncorked was at 8 to 1 in the betting, Acclaim at 1 to 6. Oregon Eclipse won the third and last race of the day with all the ease in the world.

Lovely Latonia.

Last week we published an article relative to the liberality of the Latonia association and the following from a correspondent at Covington, Ky., will also prove interesting:

"Our grounds are three and one-half miles from Fountain Square, Cincinnati, Ohio, and are reached by two steam railroads from the heart of that city and by drives over the beautiful suspension bridge spanning the Ohio river and through Covington and its environments. The course is situated within an amphitheatre of hills on rising ground that presents changing views of forest, pasture and garden, and is, with its own carefully-kept grounds and picturesque surroundings, pronounced the most beautiful race course in America. The grand stand is new and roomy, and is constructed of stone, brick and iron, and the pool shed of last year's building is of iron chiefly, and of immense size. The club house is beautiful and spacious, and the pavements inside the grand stand and the pool shed and through the grounds and in and among the buildings are of asphalt.

"The thing of most importance to the horsemen, though, is stabling and water. Our stables are built on high, hard clay ground, each one with a good fall in every direction from it, and have wide sheds all around and twelve foot box stalls. No horse disease ever originated in them. We have wells and cisterns among the stables and also water piped from a reservoir to each one of them, as well as a large and deep spring-fed lake in the center field. The track and roadways in dry and dusty weather are kept sprinkled daily. The California horses, if they do not come on earlier and race up to the line from further South to their Chicago engagements, can at least find at Latonia thirty days' racing and good, fat stakes and purses, and will have to go but little, if any, distance out of the line of travel to Chicago, as that city is only twelve hours' ride from Latonia over several lines of railroad."

DENVER, COL., December 26, 1891.

DEAR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—After my long silence it is a great pleasure for me to offer as a reason for this letter the announcement of the spring meeting at Overland Park to be given by The Overland Jockey Club Association. The Overland Park Club Association owns the grounds—a very valuable property, by the way—but The Overland Jockey Club Association is the organization conducting the races. Hon. Henry R. Wolcott, the older brother of the United States Senator, who is also a member of the association, is President, S. V. Farnum, Vice President, and Charles B. Rhodes, Secretary and Treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Hon. J. N. Carlile, State Treasurer of Colorado, and one of the owners of the Carlile & Shields string of thoroughbreds; A. H. Fowler, the President of The Overland Park Association, and C. B. Rhodes, who is the active Secretary of both associations. The names of the above gentlemen are a guarantee that the conduct of the race meetings will be above reproach.

Hitherto the Overland meetings have been what are known as mixed meetings. In the Spring of 1892, however, nothing but running races are to be given, and the programme is indeed an attractive and creditable one for any city west of Chicago. The dates claimed are May 28th to June 11th, inclusive, with five or more races each day. The first day is Derby day, that stake race having $2,000 added by the association. Here, it is to be hoped, we will see battle for supremacy those noble California colts Top Gallant, Centella and Honshell, belonging to Matt Storn, and Carlile & Shield's Prince Henry and Bob Weitbrec. The latter has never raced, but Prince Henry has met the Storn colts, who defeated him in the Spring. At the Fall Overland meeting, however, Prince Henry, on edge and not having been raced too hard during the season, made Top Gallant, the brave and beautiful son of Mariner, lower his well-earned, triumphant colors. This race, contested also by other California, Montana and Colorado colts, should be worthy of the notice of the whole West.

The Overland people, I notice, have extended the hand of courtesy and friendship to their neighbors on the West by naming the principal two-year-old event of the Spring meeting, "The Pacific Coast Stakes." This rich stake is for foals of 1890, and will have $1,000 added money. It is to be hoped that in this race we may see run the best youngsters of the West. Colorado and Wyoming have some good thoroughbred sires, and there should be in the result of this race a good opportunity to measure our strength as breeders against the Pacific Coast.

The other valuable prize to be raced for by the two-year-olds will be "The Montana Stakes," when will probably come together again the same lot of two-year olds to decide whether or not any accident helped the winner of the Pacific Coast Stakes.

Wednesday, June 1st, is set down for "The Equitable Building Stakes." Hon. Henry R. Wolcott, President of the Jockey Club is the resident director of The Equitable Assurance Society of New York, and I presume the stakes have been named out of deference to him, and well from Denver and Colorado does he deserve any honor within the power of the Colorado people, for he has probably done more for this city and State than any other one man.

"The Knights Templar Stakes," to be run June 4th, is evidently intended as a courtesy to the twenty-fifth triennial conclave of that body, to be held here in August.

The summary of the programme, as shown to me by Mr. Temple, contains two races of good value for two-year-olds, for three-year-olds and for all ages. The over night events and the Handicaps are by no means to be despised, varying in value from $400 to $700. We hear great reports of the coming two-year-olds of the Carlile & Shields stable, but it will be no easy matter to figure on the champion colt, for if Mr. Marcus Daly sends a contingent of his youngsters here and California contributes some young Lochinvars from the West, we Colorado people will have to draw in our horns.

We are in great hopes that your people, Mr. Haggin, Mr. Harper, Mr. Mulky, Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Williams and the others who have never raced with us (except Mr. Baldwin, who delighted us in 1888 with his great stable), will show their colors at the spring meeting. Mr. Storn, Mr. Ashe, Mr. Herzog and others who have been here, we think we made friends with, and we feel confident that no inducement, except liberal stakes and purses, is needed to have them, like the poor, always with us.

It would be a great delight to our people to have Colorado's favorite horse, Dungarvan, one of the best of Hindoo's get, meet Racine in a handicap at about a mile and a quarter. Should Marigold recover her own form it would not do to overlook her in such a race, even with such good-going company. Charles Johnson will be here from the southern portion of Colorado with some of the get of King Faro, and if report be true, his colts this year will be fit to race for a king's ransom.

While the Overland dates conflict with St. Louis, we have good reason to expect that California and Montana horsemen will deem it advisable and to their interest to stop here and race, and then go on to Washington Park, Chicago, returning, we hope, in August, when another meeting at Overland, even greater than the spring meeting, will be given, and as $50,000 Knights Templar will be in the city at that time, there should be a rousing attendance with spirited betting.

Mr. James H. Temple, the superintendent at Overland, and one of the best-known horsemen in the United States, having at one time been the owner of Harry Wilkes, J. Q. and Albert France, will go to California, he informs me, immediately after the first of the year, to obtain entries. He will probably call on you, and if you do not already know him you will find him a courteous and agreeable gentleman. It is to be hoped that you Pacific Coast people will aid the Overland folks in their efforts to show Chicago, St. Louis and the Eastern cities, that here in the West we know how to race horses as well as raise them, and that the mountain must come to Mahomet; in other words we want the Eastern people to come West to see our colts in return for our sending the horses East to fill up their races.

A delightful club house at Overland Park will offer, I am assured, visiting horsemen hospitality, and we trust that many of them will join the club, as Matt Storn has already done.

When Mr. Temple returns from California and the entries are made, I will write you fully as to the situation. By the way, at the last Overland Fall Meeting, the races of which I believe were not reported in your estimable paper, an omission which we will rectify in the spring, there was a race ridden by gentlemen riders. Mr. Ashe, who was here on his way west with Geraldine, rode one of his stable of horses in that race, and was second in a field of six. Another race of the same kind is talked of with a $500 cup as a prize.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I am

Very truly yours,

FUTURITY.

FIXTURES FOR THE FUTURE.

Jan. 14—Olympic Club, annual wrestling tournament to decide the championship of the Pacific Coast.
Jan.— —Acme Athletic Club, Ladie's Night, in the gymnasium, Oakland.
Feb. 22—Olympic Club, spring out-door handicap meeting, at theclub grounds.

AMATEUR SPORTS IN GENERAL.

The new out door grounds of the Acme Athletic Club wil be located at 25th Street and San Pable Avenue, Oakland. The grounds will run through to Market Street. Fifty new ockers were recently built in the gymnasium of the club, and in a few days they were occupied and some of the new members were obliged to postpone their exercise until fifty more are ready for their accommodation.

The aquatic boom appears to have died out, but it is thought that next spring we will witness some fine matches between Hanlan, Peterson, Teemer and other famous scullers. The cold weather is playing sad havoc with the local men, and last Sunday only a few boats were seen on the bay. The Ariel Club will not rebuild their boat house for the present.

The boxing and wrestling tournaments for the championships of the Pacific Coast will take place in the O. A. C. rooms next month, and both exhibitions will be very fine, as some of the best wrestlers and boxers on the Coast have signified their intention of competing for the honor and medals.

The Pastime "Amateur" Athletic Club is fast wandering away from the paths of amateurism. The P. A. A. A. U. will never sanction prize fights, and the members of the Pastime Club will be barred from entering all legitimate amateur sports as long as they strive to exist in the same manner as the Occidental, California and Pacific Clubs.

In bicycling circles everything is booming, even at this time of year, when the wheelmen are supposed to be taking their winter rest. The membership of the Bay City Wheelmen is increasing wonderfully fast, and the club house on Van Ness Avenue is being gantly fitted up. The Alameda Bicycle club has leased a piece of ground at Schutzen Park, and it will begin at once to build a fine racing track for the use of the members. The cricketers are anxious to go into partnership with the cycling boys so that they may be able to practice their pastime on the new ground when the season opens early next year.

Grant Bell, of San Jose, has been protested for winning the five-mile championship race at the Thanksgiving Day sports of the Acme Athletic Club. Young Osen, who took second place, will apply for first prize on the grounds that Bell did not belong to this district. The affair will be left to the discretion of the referee of the bicycle events, and his decision will be given before the medals are awarded.

The medals won at the late tournament of the Acme Club will be distributed at the "Ladies' Night" entertainment of the club, to be held early this month in the club rooms in Oakland.

The Olympic Club will give another of their popular "Ladies' Night" exhibitions in the gymnasium. As a novelty a musical comedy will be introduced on the programme this month.

The members of the Alameda Bicycle Club have no intention of linking themselves with the Alameda Olympic Club after their new grounds at Schutzen Park are ready for use. Some months ago the A. B. C. boys did make an effort to join hands with the A. O. C. but the members of the latterorganization could not see through the plan. Now that success attends the A. B. C. the members will not call upon any other club to help it out, and when Schutzen Park is fitted up the chances are that all the other cycling clubs around the bay will make application for the privilege of training on the new track.

The members of the Acme Athletic Club are rather surprised at the action of William Gallagher in wanting to become a professional fighter. As an amateur Mr. Gallagher is at the head of his class, but if he departs from the amateur ranks it is very doubtful if he will turn out to be a first-class professional boxer. The fact of his being defeated by McCann, a professional who posed as an amateur, should not discourage the Acme man. By laying his case before the P. A. of the A. A. U. he will get full satisfaction, and the medal which McCann won will be turned over to Gallagher, together with an apology from the Olympic Club for having allowed itself to be deceived into permitting a professional to represent himself as an amateur at one of its amateur boxing tournaments.

It is probable that Hanlan will not return to this city next spring for the purpose of rowing Peterson. There is but little money to be made in this part of the country on rowing races, and the clever Canadian will not risk losing his sack by again trying to put up a job on the 'Frisco folks.

The recent rain will prevent the wheelmen from taking their usual Sunday rides into the interior for some time to come. The roads in and around Golden Gate Park are always in fine order, and the cyclers will not be compelled to remain indoors for the want of good roads to practice on.

Under date of November 30th, the attention of the members of the Olympic Club was called to the following resolution passed by the Board of Directors on October 27th:

"On motion, it was resolved that a Junior Olympic Club be at once formed, to provide for the physical education of young men between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one."
"On motion, it was resolved that the members of the Junior Olympic Club be charged an initiation fee of $10, and that their monthly dues shall be $1.50, and further, that should a Junior member be elected to the Olympic Club, on his attaining the age of twenty-one his first initiation fee of $10 shall be credited."
"On motion, it was resolved that the membership in the Junior Olympic Club shall be in the first instance limited to the sons and brothers of members of the Olympic Club."
"On motion, it was resolved that if the applications for membership are sufficient in number, the off nights in the Gymnasium shall be given to the Junior Club."
"On motion, it was resolved that Messrs Stow, Treat and Elliott be appointed as a committee to form the Junior Olympic Club, with full powor to act."

The names of the first fifty or one hundred applicants will be passed upon by the committee, and those that come afterward will be elected by the Junior club members.

The institution of this club will not interfere in any way with the prerogatives of the members of the Olympic Club. In fact it will be an advantage to them, as the instructors will be in attendance at the gymnasium six evenings in the week instead of three, and the senior members can come when ever they choose, while the juniors will be there only on the present "off nights."

A Famous Track-Builder on Tracks.

The following interview was had with Mr. Seth Griffin, the noted track-builder, by a representative of the Tennessee Farmer:

Why can a horse trot or pace faster on the kite track than on the regulation track?

"I cannot see any reason why a horse can trot any faster on a kite track than on a regulation track, or why he should make any better time if he goes the same distance. I say the horse does not go as far on the kite track as on the regulation track, and gives reasons why he does not. We will suppose both tracks measure the same distance three feet from the pole. This is where the question arises. Every one is aware that not one heat in one hundred is driven at a high rate of speed just three feet from the pole. More times the pole horse will be found going from four to five feet out, and then when two horses are going side by side the second horse is going ten or twelve feet out, when on a regulation he has two turns to make and on the kite only one turn in a mile. Now figures show that the first foot out from the mile line on a regulation track makes six feet and about four inches, and the next foot out would be nearly thirteen feet, and so on. By the time we get out twelve feet the distance increases to about seventy-six feet, when on the kite track the horse goes only one-half the extra distance because he only has one turn to make. It is not because the horse cannot trot the turns as fast as the stretches, for there is no difference if the turns are thrown up in proportion to the rate of speed they are going. Maud S. once, in making a trial at Narragansett Park, Providence, R. I., trotted to the three-quarter pole and twenty-two feet over in one minute and thirty-five seconds, a trifle better than a 2:05 gait; that over both turns and the backstretch, and only for the gale of wind that was blowing down the homestretch good judges said she would have trotted the full mile in 2:07 or better. At Belmont track, Philadelphia, Sept. 4, 1890, Sunol, making a trial, trotted the first half in 1:04 with a break, and that is nearly all curve to the half-mile pole. Then comes the twenty-two feet grade in the next quarter, but she trotted the full mile in 2:11¼. It was a great mile for a four-year-old considering the heavy grade. Palo Alto trotted the same day over the same track in 2:12½. That was within one-fourth of a second of his best record at that time. Belmont track is two-thirds curve, but it is made of the best material. When Direct and Hal Pointer had their race at Cumberland Park there is no doubt Hal Pointer went sixty feet over a mile every heat."

What is the greatest factor that goes to make up a fasttrack?

"It is not so much the shape of the track as the soil and the track. The more fibrous matter, such as sod, humus and manure, will add to the elasticity, safety and speed of the track."

BELLOTA STOCK FARM.

It was only a few weeks ago that a correspondent of this journal paid a long-promised visit to the Bellota Stock Farm, owned by that prince among men, Charles E. Needham, one of the Directors of the San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Society, and one of its most zealous workers Ever since the building of a kite-shaped track at Stockton was broached and until the last trotting event of this year was over this gentleman has been one of its most faithful supporters and attendants, whether in the timers' or in the judges' stand.

STEVE WHIPPLE, 10,179, RECORD 2:23, BY CHRISMAN HAMBLETONIAN, PROPERTY OF C. E. NEEDHAM, BELLOTA, CAL.

But to our trip. It was a beautiful moonlight night when we boarded the sternwheel steamer J. D. Peters. The bay was soon crossed, and then the easy-gliding vessel steamed into the tortuous windings of the far-famed San Joaquin river. The myriads of wild ducks and geese that were disturbed while feeding were the only sounds we heard except the steady splashing of the wheel at the stern or the rippling of the waters at the bow. How the pilot kept the channel and did not strike the sharp corners of the dark-looking banks will always remain one of the unexplainable mysteries. the flickering of the moonbeams on the ponds that seemed Tiring of gazing on the windings of the river and so close to the main stream, and believing we could safely rely on our pilot's knowledge of the course, we retired to our stateroom and awoke at seven o'clock in the "City of the Kite-Shaped Track." Mr. Needham met us at the boat with a team of slashing black colts, and after a drive around the suburbs of the city we were soon on the famous stage road to Mokelumne Hill. In the days of old, the days of gold, this beautiful, wide road was thronged with teams and pedestrians "going to the mines." Five stage lines were at one time engaged in carrying passengers to "the diggings," over this thoroughfare. The only monument of those lively times which stands is the Twelve Mile House, on the right of the road; it is only a deserted house now; opposite it, on the left, the old tumbling down barn is seen, where the teamsters unhitched and stabled their horses.

In two hours from the time we left Stockton we were at the top of the hill overlooking the famous Bellota Stock Farm, which was bordered on the side nearest us by a row of liveoak trees; on the opposite side the Calaveras river flowed and separated this stock farm from the hills which could be plainly seen from where we stopped to gaze on the scene before us. There were the stacks of alfalfa hay, the three barns, the farm house, the orchard, the grainfields and the large alfalfa field that was showing the emerald tops of the clover like leaves which in a few days would cover the surface completely. A turn on the hillside brought us above a number of mounds of gravel beside the banks of a little creek; on inquiry, we learned that this was all that was le descendants of the stock which had been in his father's possession many years, the most prominent of which was the grandam of Steve Whipple, Jennie Lind, which mare reveived that name because she was foaled on the day that the famous singer landed in New York, May 1, 1851. Her sire was Vermont Blackhawk by Sherman, son of Justin Morgan; she was out of Old Stub. Jennie Lind was awarded first premium as a broodmare in 1859, and was celebrated for her appearance and the speed of her produce. Two of her produce are on the farm now, Stub and Twist. She died at the age of thirty-one years and six months; her last foal came when she was twenty-five years of age. Old Stub was one of the most noted mares in Vermont, and was foaled May 6, 1837. Her sire was Young Telescope, a son of old Telescope, her dam was by Justin Morgan. Old Stub died at the age of thirty-two years, her last colt came when she was twenty-four years old.

The pasture was reached, and it would repay any of our readers to see the excellence of the feed that grows on the rich soil of this little valley. All the stock were strong and healthy looking.

The first mare looked at was a dappled chestnut with light mane and tail, she was called Ze Etta, and was sired by Chrisman Hambletonian, out of Flora Hill, by Chieftain; second dam Flora Hill by Flying Black Hawk; third dam, Old Stub. She had a colt by Steve Whipple at her side.

Kate Prentiss is the name of a chestnut mare by Echo Jr., a son of Echo, out of a daughter of Priam (sire of Frank M., 2:17), She is the dam of a fine-looking filly by Andy R., and is stinted to Voter.

When Twist was three years old she accidentally got a colt by a son of Joe Daniels and when the unlooked-for youngster came he was called Joaquin Joe. He proved to be a remarkably fast and stylish road horse, and, if he had received any track work, would undoubtedly have entered the 2:30 list. He sired a number of fine looking colts and fillies; among the latter was the large, rangy matron Jane; her dam was Old Jane by Blackhawk Charley. She has a filly by Steve Whipple which received the combination name

Janeve. Unless appearances go for naught this little miss will be a fast one. Her full sister, a golden chestnut, is called Auburnia.

Another one that attracted our attention was a coal-black, stoutly-built mare called Bessie Golddust, by McCracken's Golddust, he by McCracken's Blackhawk, out of Queen, by Williamson's Belmont. She has remarkably clean limbs, splendid shoulders, fine neck, good, intelligent head, and has proved a reliable matron. Her two-year-old seal-brown filly called Bessie Whipple, by Steve Whipple, is a speedy-looking youngster, and from her breeding she should prove a stayer.

There was a two-year-old by Voter out of Jane nibbling the succulent grasses beside her that would be a credit to Palo Alto.

Belle is rather a short, insignificant name for a very stylish seal-brown mare by Mike, 3403, (sire of Barney 2:25¼ and of the dams of Alta 2:23½, and Altena 2:26½) son of Vermont 322; her dam was by Index, 2856, out of a thoroughbred mare. She is a credit to the judgment of her owner in selecting her to help stock his farm. She is stinted to Voter.

Polly Perkins is the rhythmical name of a mare that resembles the Morgan family in every way. She is by Blackhawk Charley, and is stinted to Steve Whipple.

There was a son of Joe Daniels, the famous four-miler, in this part of San Joaquin Valley some years ago that sired a number of good mares. The matron, Dolly, that Mr. Needham has, is one of them; her dam was by a son of Gen. McClellan, 143, and her second dam was Old Dolly, by Williamson's Belmont. She is stinted to Andy R.

Blackhawk Charley, the sire that is spoken of so often here, was a very fine-looking horse, sired by Green Mountain Blackhawk, dam Pocahontas by Vt. Blackhawk, 5, second dam by Woodbury Morgan. Green Mountain Blackhawk was sired by Blackhawk Chief, (a full brother to Sherman Blackhawk) son of Vt. Blackhawk; his dam Old Stub. Blackhawk Charley was a typical Blackhawk stallion, and never seemed to show signs of being wearied, no matter how long the distance he traveled.

Brownie is a good-sized mare, by Joaquin Joe, out of Nan, by Blackhawk Charley; second dam, Siss, by Young Justin Morgan; third dam, Lady Ningo, by Green Mountain

This mare, Stub, half sister to Twist (dam of Steve Whipple; 2:23) is by Chieftain (sire of Defiance, 2:24; Cairo, 2:26; Onward, 2:24¾, Flora, 2:30, etc), stands about 15.1 hands, a bay in color, and a credit to her sire. She is the dam of a number of good ones here, and is now in foal to Voter.

Caddie R. is a racy looking, well proportioned filly, by Elect (sire of Elect Moor 2:27 and Voter) out of Flora Hill, by Chieftain.

In the barn there were three handsome weanlings by Steve Whipple. One was a bay filly out of Caddie R., by Elect, the next was out of Belle by Mike, and the last was a colt out of Colleen, the thoroughbred.

Over near the barn were seventeen weanlings, sired by Andy R., Steve Whipple and Voter, and a finer lot of evenly-built youngsters would be difficult to find anywhere. Not a curby-hocked, crooked-jointed, narrow-jowled, rat-tailed, roman-nosed, weak-kneed or spindle-legged youngster was seen. Orders have come for some of these youngsters from De Kalb, Ill., where the stock is known, and one young bay colt by Steve Whipple out of Stub, is going to Southern Dakota.

VOTER, BY ELECT, DAM TWIST (DAM OF STEVE WHIPPLE, 2:23), BY HAMBLETONIAN 725, PROPERTY OF C. E. NEEDHAM, BELLOTA, CAL.

There is a two-year-old filly by Dexter Prince, out of Stub, by Chieftain, and a three-year-old filly by Joaquin Joe, out of the same mare, that will repay to have trained.

A recent purchase is a sorrel filly, three years old, by Nelson Nutwood, out of a daughter of Joe Daniels. This filly has been bred to Andy R. Next year Mr. Needham will breed her to Voter and thus get the much-prized Electioneer—Nutwood cross. Her sire was by Nutwood 600 out of a daughter of John Nelson.

Mr. Needham thought it would be well to try a little experiment of his own in breeding, a la Palo Alto, so he purchased a very handsome chestnut mare, Colleen, by Culloden, a son of imp. Australian, out of Emma A., by Impeachment; second dam, Black Maria, by Blackbird; third dam by Captain White Eye, by Bonnie Scotland, etc. Colleen is stinted to Voter, the grandson of Electioneer.

Doras is the peculiar name of another broodmare by Bismarck (Haggin's), out of a daughter of Gen. Taylor. She is stinted to Steve Whipple.

Blackhawk; fourth dam, Old Ningo, by Kentucky Whip; fifth dam, Doll, by Hambletonian 10. She has a beautiful filly by Voter, and is stinted to Steve Whipple.

A seal-brown mare with tan muzzle and flanks is known as Tansy Blossom. She is by Joaquin Joe out of a daughter of Blackhawk Charley, and is heavy in foal to Voter.

Daisy Vernon, by Tom Vernon, (son of Hamilton Chief and Lady Vernon) dam by Whipple's Hambletonian, is the mother of three by Steve Whipple—a fine bay filly, three years old, called Daisy Whipple, the two-year-old bay colt, "Phi Pse," and a weanling colt also bay in color. She is a good looking rangy mare, and is heavy in foal to Voter.

Flora Hill, the dam of Ze-Etta, Caddie R. and of a two-year-old colt and a weanling colt by Steve Whipple is a fine-looking chestnut mare with light mane and tail, by Chieftain 721, her dam Flora Hill by Flying Blackhawk, second dam Old Stub by Young Telescope, third dam by Justin Morgan. She is stinted to Voter.

The artist had nearly finished the sketches of Voter an Steve Whipple when we returned to the large stallion barn, which is between the grain and the alfalfa fields. A little creek flows by it and empties into the swift-flowing Calaveras river. The first stallion led out for our inspection was Steve Whipple, 10,179. He was foaled in 1884; and is a beautiful brown in color with a star in forehead; in height he is fully sixteen hands. The first glance at him will leave an impression on the mind of the beholder that he is looking at a hardy, strong-limbed racehorse; a type of horse that looks as if he was designed to fight battles on the turf and to earn records in campaigns that would be hard to lower. He is a well-proportioned horse—a splendid model of the virtue of intelligent breeding—his well-shaped head—wide between the large mild eyes—shows plenty of brain development, wide jaws, neat compressed lips, large nostrils, active and delicate; his ears are like his dam's, about medium size, but in the right position; his long, well-shaped neck is firmly set onto splendid oblique shoulders. His barrel is deep, not too rounding; ribs broad and coupling strong; over the loins he is high and powerful-looking; his hips are not ragged, but very symmetrical; quarters heavy and the muscular development of the gaskins inside and out, as well as the forearm, is remarkably strong; the muscles being long, not bunched. His knees and hocks are straight, large, strong and bony; the cannon bones are short and the ligaments and tendons prominent, making the leg look broad and strong. The feet at rest, are perfectly straight. All these valued qualities of conformation he transmits to his progeny without exception. In disposition he is kind as a lamb, while at all times he is as courageous as a lion. When in action the lofty style of the Morgan blood predominates, and the unstrained carriage of the head and tail is noticeable. When trotting he is what is called a line trotter; he has that low, folding gait forward and strong powerful action behind that is characteristic of our greatest performers. The following is an account of his first race taken from the Stockton Independent:

The next race was for the Pacific Coast Stakes, for four-year-olds, best three in five, entrance $75, and $200 added. The starters were C E Needham's Steve Whipple and L. J. Rose's Dubec. Whipple was favorite in the pools at $40 against $30 for Dubec. The horses got a send-off on the second attempt, Whipple having the best of the start, and kept the lead to the quarter in thirty seven seconds and reached the half in 1:12½. The race down the homestretch was close, but Whipple trotted under the wire in 2:26 without a skip. Dubec ran just before reaching the wire, but could not head the favorite in any part of the course.

Whipple was such a favorite that no bids were made against him in the pools. He took the lead in the second heat, reaching the quarter in thirty-six seconds and the half in 1:10, and trotted home easily in 2:23 an open length in front of Dubec, who kept breaking down to the wire. The time was fast for a green colt. Steve Whipple trotted each heat without a skip, and when hard-pressed did not lose his head. In the third heat, however, he made a great showing, and astonished all the horsemen at the track. The horses got a good send off after scoring several times, Steve slightly leading when the bell tapped. Instantly the favorite went off his feet, while Dubec trotted ahead at a rapid gait. Pool-buyers who had gambled for a big winning shouted with delight while Parker was pulling Steve down to give him a fresh start. Dubec gained nearly an eighth of a mile on the favorite, and reached the quarter post in 36½ seconds, and the half in 1:14½. Whipple struck a rapid gait after passing the first quarter, and rapidly closed the gap until he was only a few lengths behind at the half-mile post. Dubec was being driven for all he was worth, but Steve, with the tenacity of a bloodhound, was on his track, and turning into the homestretch it was seen that there was only a little daylight between them. Parker drove him well, and already he could hear the encouraging yells of the excited people who saw that the pride of San Joaquin was in for a hard race. Near the wire they came. "Dubec a sure winner!" gave place to the announcement: "See Steve fly!" and sure enough, he almost seemed to fly past the Los Angeles horse just fifty yards from the wire, and came home winner of the heat, race and money in 2:24. Dubec trotted his best; in fact, he never trotted so fast before. Steve Whipple, according to the timers, trotted the three quarters of a mile at a 2:20 clip, and the last half in 1:10.

Thos. Keating took Steve Whipple this year to Montana, and after winning a race the horse was taken suddenly sick and were it not for the skillful treatment of his trainer and the veterinarians of Marcus Daly's ranch, at Helena, he would undoubtedly have died. Messrs. Holly and Keating had such faith in the remarkable speed and race-horse qualities of Steve Whipple that (in the hope that he would recover), they paid $1,200 in entrance money in different stakes. If he had recovered sufficiently to trot there is no doubt in their minds but that 2:12 would be his mark. Mr. Holly says he never liked a horse better or one that he was so confident of winning with than Steve Whipple.

It is Mr. Needham's intention to give Steve Whipple to some well-known trainer next year so that his record will be lowered. Prominent horsemen say that if he had been in condition during the period of record breaking this fall he would have trotted close to 2:12. He has a world of speed, and only needs rating and a little more work to enable him to carry his clip. As a sire his progeny have never had an opportunity of showing what they were capable of doing, his oldest colts being but three years of age. From the royally-bred matrons he was mated with last year, and the many that will be booked to him this coming season, there is no doubt but he will soon take a high place among the progenitors of speed.

The following is the pedigree of Steve Whipple, and as his dam is also the dam of Voter, Prindex and Andy R., her pedigree is given below. Steve Whipple was sired by Chrisman Hambletonian 10,178, (sire of Kate Agnew, 2:28¼) out of Twist, by Hambletonian 725 (sire of fifteen in the list, and nine sons and twelve daughters that are producers of 2:30 performers); second dam Jenny Lind by Vermont Blackhawk 5 (sire of three in the list); third dam old Stub by young Telescope, he by imp. Telescope out of a daughter of imp. Messenger; fourth dam by Justin Morgan.

Chrisman Hambletonian was by Hambletonian 725, out of Flora (dam of Chrisman's Hambletonian, is also the dam of Weatherhead's Woodnut sire of Rockwood 2:29, and of Chrisman's Patchen sire of Ed. Fay, 2:28¾) by Chieftain 721; second dam a remarkably fast mare that was called thoroughbred. Chieftain is the sire of Defiance 2:24, Cairo 2:26, Onward 2:24¾, and Flora 2:30; and also the dams of Tempest 2:19, Mount Vernon 2:18, Old Nick 2:23, Crown Prince 2:25 and four others in the list.

Hambletonian 725 was by Guy Miller (sire of two in the list) son of Hambletonian 10 (the great sire of trotters) out of Martha Washington by Washington 332 (Burr's); second dam by Abdallah 1. Guy Miller's dam was Sharpless Abdallah by Abdallah 1. Martha Washington was the dam of two sires of eighteen trotters and of the dam of two performers.

Andy R. is a full brother to Steve Whipple, a bay in color, 15.2½ hands high, and is a handsome a horse as a horseman could imagine. He resembles the Morgans more than his illustrious brother in appearance, but is even an improvement on them. He has never been trained for speed. His colts are all large, heavy-boned and handsome.

Voter, the subject of our other illustration, is a dark mahogany bay horse foaled in 1886, and is 15.3½ hands high To sum up his description, we will only repeat the words of Chas. Marvin: "He is an Electioneer all over, and if I stay in California I would like to handle him; he will make a very fast and reliable campaigner. His disposition and easy way of going fast suits me!" Voter is by Elect, out of Twist, the dam of Steve Whipple, etc. Elect (sire of Elect Moor, 2.27) is by Electioneer out of Inez by Nordale; second dam Lizzie, by Williamson's Belmont; third dam a fine mare brought to California from Kentucky, and represented to be a thoroughbred; Nordale, by Norfolk, dam Blue Dale by Owen Dale; Norfolk by Lexington, dam Novice by imported Glencoe; Owen Dale by Williamson's Belmont, dam Maria Downing, by American Eclipse.

Voter has never been handled for speed, but will be given to a good trainer next year.

The other stallion that will add glory to the name of Twist, the dam of Steve Whipple, is Prindex, by Dexter Prince. A fine-looking Dexter Prince he is, and resembles his sire in every particular: color, markings, size and beauty.

The last colt that Twist had was by Campaign, the Electioneer—Lillie S. (by Homer) stallion at Stockton. He is called Politician and resembles his sire in color and conformation. A description of the dam of these colts is now given. That she will appear in the great broodmare list no one who has seen her produce can doubt.

Twist is about 15:2 hands in height, a bright bay in color, fine neck, head, ear and eye, wide jowls, pretty muzzle, her limbs of the best shape imaginable. She has a short back, but beneath the barrel she is remarkable long; elbows and stifle stand out strong. There is no appearance of grossness about her; she is a splendid specimen of a typical broodmare. She was never worked for speed for, like Green Mountain Maid, Alma Mater, Minnehaha and other great mares, she seems to be possessed of too much of that nervous energy to be controlled long enough to make her useful as a road mare. That she is possessed of speed one can be convinced by driving the band of mares around the enclosure; with head erect, tail extended, she trots around like a four-year-old. One peculiarity about her is that her colts all resemble their sires with the exception of one, Andy R. Steve Whipple is a Whipple Hambletonian, Prindex is a Dexter Prince, Voter is an Electioneer while Politician is a son of Campaign from the coronets to the ears. She is now in foal to Director, and as Mr. Salisbury says, "she is the kind he likes to breed the old horse to," it is inferred that he must also have been charmed with her appearance.

This elegant farm consists of some 200 acres of rich sediment soil; 130 acres are set apart for the alfalfa field; sixty acres for pasture and the raising of oats (over ninety bushels to the acre were harvested from it last year) have been kept, while an orchard of ten acres is in full bearing every year. The Calaveras River flows along one side of the place, affording plenty of water for the stock and irrigation purposes. Mr. Needham is going to have a half-mile track built and new sheds constructed. His ideas are sound ones, and he shows that he thoroughly understands the business he has devoted his life to. If any of our readers desire to select choicely-bred, perfectly-formed individuals, we know of no place where greater satisfaction can be obtained than at this place where the youngsters will soon give it a prominent place in the history of the turf and render the name of Bellota Stock Farm imperishable.

Some Old-Time Races.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN—Having a desire to learn something of the latter history of a horse once well known in this State, especially in San Francisco, I had intended to make my wishes known through the "Answers to Correspondents" column; but thinking that a little "Turf Reminiscence" of "Ye Olden Time" might be of interest to some of the readers of the BREEDER, I will put this in the form of a communication.

The horse I wish to learn of was—as without doubt he has been dead a number of years—Peter Jones, alias Punch. As he was known in this State in all of his races by the name of Punch, I shall use that name in this article.

Punch was a bright chestnut horse standing 15 hands 1½ inches high, very solidly built, weighing about 1 100 pounds with tail "docked and nicked." He was foaled May 2, 1857, sired by Flying Black Hawk; dam Old Stub, (3d dam of Steve Whipple, 2:23), by Young Telescope, 2d dam by Justin Morgan.

Flying Black Hawk was sired by Black Hawk Chief (full brother to Sherman Black Hawk) a son of Vt. Black Hawk; dam Pocahontas, by Vt. Black Hawk; second dam by Woodbury Morgan.

Punch was brought across the plains to California among a number of other good horses—some 23 in all—(including Jenny Lind (2d dam of Steve Whipple 2:23), Pocahontas (mentioned above) both by Vt. Black Hawk 5. Young Justin Morgan, Black Hawk Charlie, Honest Abe, Flora Hill and Belle of DeKalb) by his breeder, C. E Needham, in 1862, and was sold to H. S. Hollinger, of San Jose, in the fall of 1863. Shortly after this he passed into the hands of Mr. Roe Allen, who kept a livery stable on Market street, San Francisco, where the Palace Hotel now stands, and was kept for livery the most of the time up to 1870 and probably later.

A mare called Kitty (I think a bay) was used as a mate for him, and Punch and Kitty were one of the best known teams in San Francisco. The team will be remembered by such old-time horsemen as J. S. Crittenden, Major Burdette, Mr. Bridges and others. Punch was a favorite driving horse in those days of Hon. L. U. Shippee of Stockton, whenever that gentleman visited San Francisco, Mr. Shippee has said that Punch was the best driving horse he ever drew a line over.

I should very much like to know what became of the horse and when and where he died. Any information that any of your readers are able to give would be very thankfully received—through your paper or otherwise. The last that any of the family heard of him was that he had been taken to the Kern County ranch of J. B. Haggin, and there kept in the stud; but as to the truth of this statement, I know nothing.

We have often thought it not a little strange that his name does not appear in the pedigree of any of the good horses of these later times, as I am certain that with anything like favorable opportunities in the stud, he would have left some stock far above the ordinary.

This horse was quite a noted trotter along in the sixties, and although he did not have a record of 2:08¼, nor yet inside of 2:30, the horses in California were very scarce that could out-trot him any distance from one mile to twenty miles or more.

The following accounts of two races in which he took part in 1869 are taken from a San Francisco daily—I think the Alta—the first from the issue of November 16th, the second from the issue of the 17th:

BAY VIEW PARK.

THE WILLIAMSOM BENEFIT.—THE TANDEM TEAM RACE WON BY PUNCH AND MATE IN THREE STRAIGHT HEATS—BEST TIME, 2:54—DOUBLE TEAM RACE TO-DAY.

The first day's races for the benefit of W. F. Williamson, Esq., came off yesterday at Bay View Park, and gave great satisfaction to those who were present. There were five entries, but only three of the teams started, as will be seen by the summary at the foot. Roe Allen, Harris Covey and J. S. Crittenden were the drivers, and won the admiration of all the spectators by the gentlemanly way in which the race was conducted—only two false starts, and no crowding, no taking advantage of the track no unnecessary shouting and no dissatisfaction with the decision of the judges. Covey's team, (Eily O'Connor and Lady Lancaster) were too rank, and the leader did not act well. Punch's leader also indulged in a little galloping, as might have been expected from teams that had been so little worked in that rig. Three heats decided the race. Punch and mate being first all the time. Eily O'Connor and mate second, and Lady Emma and mate third. Following is the

PUNCH and ROE ALLEN	1	1	1
EILY O'CONNOR and LADY LANCASTER	2	2	2
LADY EMMA and KITTY CLYDE	3	3	3

Time, 2:02, 3:02, 2:54.

DOUBLE TEAM RACE TO-DAY.

For the double team race to-day the following entries have been made: William Malone names Butcher Boy and mate; Roe Allen names Punch and mate, and Mr. Finnegan names Fred and mate.

BAY VIEW PARK.

THE WILLIAMSON BENEFIT RACES—THE DOUBLE TEAM TROT WON BY PUNCH AND MATE—TWO HEATS IN 2:56 EACH—THREE ENTRIES FOR THE FOUR-IN-HAND RACE.

The second day of the Williamson races, at Bay View Park, proved as pleasant and interesting as the first, and the prize was won by the same pair of horses. On Monday three teams were driven tandem; yesterday the same horses were hitched up as double teams to trot for a pair of dress blankets, mile heats, best three in five.

As on the first day, there were but few false starts, and no complaint of sharp practice in driving; the teams were sent off pretty well together every time, and the inside team kept the advantage except on the second heat, when Roe Allen passed the Finnegan team on the backstretch and never after lost the lead. The second heat was made in 2:56, and the same time was recorded for the fourth. Though the race was interesting, the issue never seemed to be in doubt, the Roe Allen team being the favorite from the start and coming out winner.

Barney Rice drove the Finnegan team after the first heat, but the weight of the road wagon prevented them from getting to the front. Following is a summary of the heats and time:

Bay View Park, November 16th—Williamson testimonial races. Double team trot for a pair of horse blankets. Mile heats, best three in five.

P. S. Finnegan's Frank and mate	1	3	3	3
H. R. Covey's EILY O'CONNOR and mate	3	2	2	2

Time, 3:00, 2:56, 3:01, 2.56.

The trot to-day is for a premium of a sewing machine; mile heats, three in five for four-in-hand teams. The entries are Roe Allen's Punch, mate and two others; W. W. Black's Humboldt, mate and two others; H. R. Covey's Paddy McGee, Little Mack and two others.

The only four-in-hand race ever trotted in this State came off over the Bay View Park course in 1866, when White Eye and Ingomar made a mile in 3:13 to a dog cart, with two men in the wagon—Roe Allen and John Wilson; they were, however, beaten by Billy Ware's and Lou Hamilton's teams, driven by Harris Covey. The teams will trot to-day close to three minutes. By the way, Roe Allen and Harris Covey will again be competitors in this race as they were in 1866.

I haven't the clipping from the paper giving the account of the race for four-in-hand teams, spoken of above, but according to the best information obtainable at present, the race was won by Roe Allen's team, in which Punch was the mainstay. Thus, on three successive days was Punch a winner, and at three different ways of going:

When it is remembered that these races were trotted in 1869—twenty-two years ago—when California was young in the trotting horse business, and that at the close of that year there were 158 horses all told—living and dead—that had trotted in 2:30 or better; also that Punch was not trained for racing, but kept for livery purposes, any one can easily comprehend that he was no common animal. Had he lived at the present time of improved tracks and superior advantages of training I have no doubt he could have obtained a record that would admit him to the "sacred sanctum"—and with several seconds to spare. Tennessee Letter.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—This is Christmas eve, and around festive boards to-morrow breeders, trainers and drivers will enjoy a feast of the great American bird (the turkey) and cranberry sauce. They will talk over the past, and "horse" will also be on the bill of menu. Younger ones will chime in in racing tales of yore, and good housewives will enjoy the accounts of success and bright forecasts for the future. The noble equines that have triumphed on fields of battle cannot conceive among themselves why the celebrations, but they are enjoying an easy life after a long racing season. Some have not had the smiles of fortune fall upon them beningnly, and maybe their accounts have not averaged up as well as they might have. But "all things come to those who wait," and we must keep trying until the "fates come their way." To all who watch the movement of the equines, and to those whom we have met on battle fields in racing days gone by, we send greeting, and may we march along through the corridors of time to better days and greater achievements on both the running and trotting tracks, a happy Christmas and prosperous New Year to all.

Down here in Tennessee we are having ideal spring weather, "blooming flowers and April showers" included. The winter has been so mild that our horsemen regret turning their horses out after our Tennessee meetings had been concluded. They could have been worked every day up to the present time, and the colt trotters could have reduced their marks materially. Our climate is surely very near that of California. We are greatly favored by the weather clerks. Here it is, Christmas eve, and everything is as green and growing as in spring time. The old time-worn saying that a "green Christmas makes a fat graveyard" certainly does not apply to Tennessee, for our Christmas comes when grass is plentiful and pastures are verdant. While cold blizzards are abroad in other lands, we are still enjoying good, warm growing weather.

In Tennessee there is more money hung up for trotters and pacers than in any other State in the Union, two associations alone hanging up $100,000 cash. It looks as though we are to have two of the biggest meetings of 1892, and yet all is not harmony between the two leading associations. At the meeting of members of the Western Southern Circuit, held in Chicago the first week in this month, both Nashville and Columbia joined the Western-Southern Circuit. Both associations had authorized representatives at this meeting, and each were assigned dates, which was accepted by both representatives. The Columbia Association was given the last week in October, and Nashville the week previous. The Columbia Association has already arranged its programme, and for several weeks it has been published in the leading turf journals. The people here got it into their heads to give a nine days' meeting instead of six, as was first asked for, and to do this they have to run over on the Columbia meeting three days. The Columbia people offered to exchange dates, but the Nashville folks would move neither way. The result is the meetings will clash three days, and how Nashville can expect to get any the best of it, I cannot see. Secretary Russwurm represented Nashville at the Chicago meeting but the Cumberland Park Association totally ignored his actions there, and yet he was their organized representative. "We have stripped to fight" said one of the leading spirits in the Columbia Driving Park Association, "and while it is forced upon us it will be a battle to the death. We give $75,000 in stakes, and on the most liberal conditions ever offered. In offering $100,000 in stakes and purses we hoped to promote the breeding interests of the State and of the country as well. This fight has been pushed on us, and we are in it for all that money, work and generalship will do." This is a bad state of affairs. Horsemen in the East who have been apprised of the state of affairs take sides with the Columbia Association, and I believe the Nashville people are already realizing the attitude in which they appear. For my part I think Nashville will not attempt to run over, and although this association has announced its dates, it is generally believed that six days' racing will be all that is given. Columbia has got the pull in the weights, and as they are conforming strictly to business, it appears that they will come out best in case a clash of three days should result. KENNESAW.

TRESPASSES.

A private letter from Sydney by the Monowai informs me that Mr. J. B. Haggin has done just what he should have done eight years ago, as soon as the double victory of Martini-Henry in the V. R. C. Derby and Melbourne Cup became known on this side of the water. He has purchased a son of the immortal Musket, and a great one at that. His purchase is no less than Maxim, a winner at all distances and one of the grandest-bred horses on the face of the globe. He is bred in sire-producing lines on each side of the house, and, although none of his progeny have so far appeared under silk, enough has been seen of them to superinduce the belief that he will be a fair rival to Nordenfelt, for whom $100,000 has just been refused. This is saying a great deal for, at the recent Melbourne spring meeting, the five richest stakes (outside of the great Melbourne Cup) were won by the get of Nordenfelt; and one of them was third in the Melbourne Cup, which third money is a richer prize intrinsically than anything else won by them. When I say, therefore, that I would as soon have Maxim as Nordenfelt, knowing what I do of the latter horse, it means a great deal.

The breeders of California must congratulate Mr. Haggin, to a man, on the acquisition of such a horse as Maxim. He is a shade above sixteen hands high (although I have not seen him since he was three years old), and about the color of old Musket himself. When I heard that Mr. Haggin let St. Blaise go by default to Mr. Chas. Reed, I knew there was some good cause for it. Meeting the superintendent on the street, one day in November, I asked him:

"He knewwhere he could get as good a one, much younger, for one-fifth of the money," said Mr. Mackey, dryly.

"Bah! He is always looking for cheap horses," I retorted.

"I'll make you take that back before you are two months older," said Mr. Mackey. "The horse for which he is now negotiating, is one you have recommended to me yourself, and I think you wrote to Mr. Haggin a letter about him also. At all events, you'll be as proud of him as anybody when you see him."

"What horse is it?" I asked.

"I won't tell you," growled old John, "but he is one of six horses that you gave me a list of when you came back from Australia and said a man couldn't go very far astray in paying a big price for any of them. That's enough for you to know."

If my Sydney friend is not misinformed in the matter, Mr. Haggin came near paying as much for this six-year-old horse as he paid for both Darebin and Sir Modred coupled. I did not ask Mr. Mackey the price, for I did not consider it any of my business and would as soon have asked the question of Mr. Haggin himself, with whom I have no acquaintance personally. But my correspondent names the figure at 4,000 guineas, and, if the horse lands here all right, he is a great bargain at that figure. For Mr. Haggin to pay $20,100 for a horse is a good deal like my paying two bits for a good cigar, rather than smoke a poor one. My only regret is that he did not buy Dreadnought also, but Maxim is glory enough for one day. He is bred in the purple, and as I have been eulogizing the dead Musket for the past eighteen months in these columns, I will content myself with saying now that Realization, Maxim's dam, is one of the Belgravian matrons of the South Continent. She is by Vespasian, who is by Newminster (St. Leger 1851) out of Vesta by Stockwell; and her dam is Hopeful Duchess, own sister to Brown Duchess, who won the Oaks of 1862. Next we come to Espoir by Liverpool, who produced Ethelbert, sire of Isoline, who won the Goodwood Cup; and Isoline was the second dam of Isonomy, the grandest-looking horse of the last half of this century.

When you get any breeding that beats this, just let me know where you find it. Of course a tried horse, such as St. Blaise, is always preferable to an untried one, and a good deal preferable to one that has been tried and found wanting, as is the case with some of the stallions at Del Paso—notably John Happy, Warwick and others of that ilk. But the purchase of Maxim means that, for the future, the Del Paso stallions will be fully the equals of the mares on that farm; and that means a good deal, if one will take the Haggin catalogue and study it down from title page to finis. With four such sires as Sir Modred, Darebin, Salvator and Maxim, the prices of the Del Paso yearlings will soon go back to the old standard of 1888; and Mr. Haggin will then be fully satisfied that there is no money in cheap stallions. His last sale in New York showed a lamentable falling-off from the prices of former years, and it looks as if he had begun to realize the fact already and set to work to remedy the defect. At least, his purchase of Maxim looks very much that way to an individual perched on the summit of a towering eucalyptus. Maxim is expected to arrive here Jan. 22d, by the Alameda. Smooth be the seas and favoring the gales, oh gallant ship, that bear you to the port we call our home.

The grand old Australian stallion, Chester, who was the first horse to win the Derby and Melbourne Cup at the same meeting, is a thing of the past. He died at Kirkham, the country-seat of his late owner, Hon James White, on the 14th day of November. Chester was a heavy winner. Hegave eight pounds weight to Savanaka (brother to Kingsborough) who was a year older than himself in the Sydney Cup and was beaten a head, carrying 126 pounds, in 3:34½ for the two miles. He subsequently achieved success at the stud. In 1888 '89 his get won within a few pounds of as much as the get of Musket, although the latter had twenty-seven representatives to Chester's nine. These were First Chester, Abercorn, Carlyon, Cranbrook, Uralla, Dreadnought, Titan, Victor Hugo and Ætna, of which Abercorn was by long odds the best, in fact, I deem him the best horse ever foaled in Australia. He was out of Cinnamon by Goldsbrough, and his fourth dam, Hybla by The Provost, was also the dam of Kettledrum, the Derby winner of 1861. So it will be seen that Abercorn is bred in the purple and fully fit to become the successor of his sire at the famous Kirkham stud. Chester was by Yattendon (sire of Grand Flaneur) out of imported Lady Chester by Stockwell, from Austrey by Herkaway, from Zeila by Emilius, sire of Priam, Sovereign and Sarpedon.

Several other deaths of less note have occurred in the Colonies not previously reported. One of these was the little English horse Somnus, by Orest, imported to New South Wales by the late Andrew Town, of Richmond. This horse was the sire of Del Mar, owned by the Hearst estate, and must not be confounded with the Traducer horse of the same name, who has proved so successful in New Zealand. Another death is that of that "gay deceiver" Locksley, whom I considered quite as handsome a horse as Abercorn. He was by Grandmaster out of Vesper by imported Hawthornden, her dam Ave Maria, by the Hermit. Vesper was also the dam of Sir William by Sir Modred, who ran second to Malvolio for this year's Melbourne Cup. Locksley was a great colt and was trained by a most rascally crew, who either pulled him or scratched him in the interest of the bookmakers, till the horse got to be cunning and would not win when he could. Locksley broke his leg at Maitland, and had to be shot. The old steeple-chaser Curiosity fell and broke his neck in November. In the Melbourne Cup, four horses fell over one another but none of the jockeys were killed. The only horse that died of his injuries was Cobham. He belonged to W. A. Long, who could well afford to lose him.

The Melbourne Standard tells of a well-known betting man who had got in his money on Malvolio at 100 to 5 last July, when the weights went up, and then laid half the amount off as the horse shortened in the betting quotations. On the opening day of the V. R. C. meeting he stood to win £8,500 with a risk of less than £250, but Malvolio made such a poor showing in the Melbourne Stakes, one mile and a quarter, that the punter went off and backed Pigeontoe (the favorite at 2 to 1) that, notwithstanding he won £8,310 on Malvolio, he was out over £3,000 on the race. The wisdom of the man who first said, "Let well enough alone" is just as apparent now as when he first said it.

The yearling sales in the colonies begin early in January, which is their midsummer month, and therefore equivalent to our July. I have on my table a catalogue of twenty head of the Wellington Park Stud, owned by Mr. Thomas Morrin, who was the largest owner in the Sylvia Park Stud, which was sold out and dispersed a year ago. Mr. Morrin has several choice mares in his paddocks, among them the dam of Maxim. He also owns Frailty, the dam of Trenton and Cuirassier: Onyx, sister to Robinson Crusoe and dam of the great Nordenfelt; the Jilt by Traducer, out of imported Fleur Ange by Consul; Yattacy by Yattendon, out of Extacy by The Marquis, and Ouida, dam of Strathmore the crack three-year-old of this year, also by Yattendon. Mr. Morrin's sale is to take place January 4th, so that no benefit can possibly be derived by him from this notice. He is the owner of Castor, an English horse that won the Liverpool Cup of 1889.

In spite of all of Messrs. George Hill and W. A. Long's efforts to purify the Australian turf by having old Jack Noud and his son Billy ruled off for the crooked running of Marvel, it would seem that he is a worse in-and-outer now than before he became the property of those Dii majores of the A. J. C. His rider, Harris, who formerly rode for Mr. William Gannon, has been summoned before the V. R. C. stewards for alleged crooked work, and is likely to be expelled. My own belief is that there is not a man in New South Wales who is fonder of money and less particular how he gets it than the two wool kings that I have named above. One of them is the son of a transport who was hanged on the hill above Petty's Hotel; and although I never knew him in the flesh, I am prepared to believe that the journeyman hemp-stretcher was the gentleman of the family.

The chestnut colt Gatthng, which sold at two years old on the strength of a great race against Titan, for the large sum of three thousand guineas, has been a great disappointment. It is now charged that he is not by Nordenfelt, but by the English horse Leolnius, who was a great performer himself, but whose get have proven notorious cowards when pinched in a hard race. His dam is the imported mare Petroleuse (dam of Hotchkiss), by Oxford.

The steeplechase at the close of the V. R. C. meeting was the greatest chapter of accidents ever known, nine out of the fifteen contestants coming to grief in the race. None of the jockeys were badly hurt and only one of the horses was permanently injured. The way that the ambulance, with a surgeon seated beside the driver, follows the horses around the steeplechase courses in Victoria and New South Wales robs the Australian stickjumping of all its attractions to me. Indeed, I should be just as well pleased if I knew that I was never to see another steeplechase from now until my dying day.

Sir William, out of Vesper, is the best son of Sir Modred on either continent. He won the Sydney Tattersal Cup at three years old, the Doncaster Handicap at four and at five he was second for both Melbourne Cup and V. R. C. Handicap. In the latter race he carried 129 pounds and was beaten a head by Portsea, who carried 99. The race was run in 3:04¼, which is within half a second of the Australian record. Sir William is a brown horse and looks very much like Volante. His share of the public money amounted to $10,500 for the week, and his owner, Mr. Keys, stands third on the list of winning owners for the meeting.

Mr. R. E. de B. Lopez, who brought over a load of Australian stallions about a year ago, arrived here on the steamer Monowai, on Christmas Day, with two thoroughbred stallions and a mare. One of these is Idalium, own brother to Sir Modred and Cheviot, a very handsome black horse thirteen years old and about as free from blemishes as any horse of his age could possibly be. The other is Merriwa, a brown five-year-old with three white feet, bred by Frank Reynolds, who bred Melos and Arsenal. He is by Goldsborough, out of Habena by Yattendon, from imp. Atholine by Blair Athol, from Habena (winner of the One Thousand Guineas) by Irish Birdcatcher. The mare is very choicely bred, being by Apremont, who has been the principal stallion of New Zealand since Musket died. His dam is Hammock (the dam of Somnus) by Orest, out of Mother Neasham by Buccaneer.

Common, triple winner of the year just closed, has to his credit £15,960, which is a large sum for a colt that did not start at two years. He retires to the stud to open his first season at 200 guineas, which is a larger fee than Newminster received till he was ten years old, Orlando fourteen and Stockwell twelve. In his victory for the St. James Palace Stakes, he started from 40 to 1 odds on, and 5 to 4 was his price in the St. Leger. His only defeat was in the Great Eclipse Stakes at Sandown, where he was defeated by Mr. A. W. Merry's four-year-old Surefoot, who won the Two Thousand Guineas of 1890. Common came near being sold by Lord Alington to go to the Austrian Empire, but Mr. Blundell Maple stepped in with his plethoric purse and paid £15,000 for him, thus saving to England the best son of the grandest-looking horse of the last fifty years. The history of Buccaneer is not likely to be soon repeated.

The best evidence of Electioneer's prepotency as a sire is not shown in the fact that he got one hundred performers as in the number of mares which he made standard and rendered eligible to registration as such, through the performances of their progeny by him. Just now it begins to look as if Nutwood, Alcantara, Red Wilkes and Onward would all have one hundred performers in the list at some day or other. But whether they will get Electioneer's number of 2:30 performers from non-standard mares or not, there comes the staggering question. Richards' Elector is to me the wonderful horse of all his sons in the stud—he has outbred every one of them with far less opportunities.

Of the thousand visitors who daily go to the Palo Alto stables, how many are there that fancy my favorite of all the "green division?" He is an enormously stout horse, a good chestnut called Norris, got by Ansel, 2:20, out of Norma (dam of Norval, 2:17¼), by Alexander's Norman. If the Senator was to tell me to go and pick a stallion out, with the understanding that Palo Alto, Arion, Electricity, Advertiser and Bernal were to be let severely alone, Norris would be the horse of my choice. I am watching the young horse very closely, and shall expect to see him away below 2:20 next season, whether the "tin cup" "records must go" or not. He has to me the air of a horse that is destined to become historical.

When the Bay District track is turned over to the bats and the owls and a new track is located somewhere between here and San Mateo, I am anxious to see whether racing will advance or recede in California. Unless there is more competition between bookmakers than there has been in the past no one will take any interest in the races. For instance, if the favorite is 8 to 5, and the second choice 2 to 1, the third highest should be at least 3 to 1, and perhaps 4, according to the size and frequency of the transactions made. If I could have my way about it, there would be at least thirty bookmakers on the ground every day. It is the only way to give good and liberal odds to the public, and we all know how hard it is for a man who is not a member of a combination to pick the winner of two races out of six. Give us more pencilers and we will have larger odds.

Getting up registration matter for the next volume of the American (late Wallace's) Register, is now the work on several of our leading farms. Palo Alto leads the van with over sixty head, of which a large number are such mares as have been made standard through the performances of their progeny by Electioneer. There are some others, however, not heretofore registered, that are standard under as high as three of the nine rules laid down. The blanks give four subdivisions, A B C and D,, the first being the sire's place and the other three for the three first dams. Now it is only on the most select farms that you will find mares having three dams; and yet under all these spaces you are requested to give the name and address of the breeder or state the reason why. Now, in a majority of instances, the third dam will be a mare that was brought here somewhere prior to 1865. Of such mares not one in twenty had anything like an authenticated pedigree, nor was the breeder's name known in one case in ten. So perhaps the easiest way to fill that portion of the blank would be to say "Dead, and present addresses unknown."

There are strong prospects of a great lot of two-year-olds next season. The Santa Anita stable is wintering four or five very handsome looking yearlings, two of which are by that most consistent performer, the Emperor of Norfolk, who was the only colt that ever won all of the three-year-old events at Washington Park at a single meeting. There are three yearlings by Cheviot (now owned in Tennessee) that are shaping up very nicely, but the pearl of all the Cheviots that I have any knowledge of is at Palo Alto. She is out of that most consistent producer, imported Fairy Rose by Kisber, winner of the Derby of 1875; and Fairy Rose is the dam of Racine, whose victory in the Oakwood Handicap at Chicago I shall always regard as one of the sensational performances of the year. Besides him, Fairy Rose produced Fairy by Argyle and she was a good deal better filly than her recorded performances would at first indicate. At the Hearst farm, near San Simeon, they have several Cheviots, and I should not be much surprised to hear that they had one or two as good as Osric, who won over $13,000 this year. The Maltese Villa farm is not to be left out of the calculations, either, for the yearlings there are enormous fellows, several of them being by the dead hero Alta, who looked more like old Norfolk than any other colt he ever got. Mr. Winters has a very likely lot also (although Marion is not represented among them) at Reno under charge of Mr. J. J Grant. He was in town the other day, and told me that he had never had a better lot of youngsters. "Our thin, dry air," said Mr. Winters," gives horses unparalleled lung power, and our soil conduces towards hard and firm feet. I live in the firm belief that I will produce as good a horse in Nevada as I ever did in California and you know that El Rio Rey outclassed all the two-year-olds of '89."

The question now is whether Santa Anita stable will reach out for Eastern victories next year, or whether its owner will simply content himself with selling his yearlings at auction and letting the other man do the betting. It is well known that, by the time all the bills are paid, there is not much profit for the owner of the horses, because the expenses are just as great when the horse comes in second, third or unplaced, as when he is deafened with the shouts of applause that always greet a gallant victor. Mr. Baldwin has won many valuable stakes in the past seven seasons, and is the only man that has ever won the American Derby three times. But in all this he was merely advertising himself as a breeder and getting ready to sell horses as the Belle Meade and Woodburn yearlings are sold. It would not astonish me to see the Santa Anita colors on the home tracks this year, instead of having them sent East to race. All those youngsters are by sires yet untried and, while they may be good enough to race here on our springboard tracks, they may not be good enough to meet the fast company that one is certain to meet at Coney Island and Saratoga.

Among other strange faces in town I notice that of E. J. Jeffrey, ex sheriff of Portland, Oregon, who dearly loves a good trotter and enjoys a hard fight at broken beats. Mr. Jeffrey bred Mantilla Jr., 2:19½, and sold her to Hon V. B. Lashmmutt for his Witch Hazel Farm. Mr. Jeffrey will make about a month's stay in this vicinity and will visit all the principal breeding farms before returning home. I bespeak him a cordial reception at the hands of my friends on whom he may call.

HIDALGO.

St. Clair Mares.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTTMAN:—My friend, Hidalgo in "Trespasses," in your issue of December 26th, is mistaken in his statement that Lady Gilbert was bred to the pacing sire St. Clair and produced two daughters by him, one of whom gave birth to Lot Slocum, 2:17½, and the other Richard's Elector, sire of eight in the 2:30 list. Lady Gilbert was never bred to the pacing sire St. Clair, She was bred to St. Clair 656 (formerly Fred Low), sire of Adalia, 2:27, and Clay, 2:25½, and by him produced Gilberta, dam of Richard's Elector, one bred to Mohawk Chief produced Glencora, dam of Lot Slocum 2:17½. The pacing sire St. Clair has recently been registered and given the number 16,675.

Very Respectfully, B.

THE OVERLAND PARK CLUB.

An Enterprising Racing Association That Keeps Up with the Procession.

[Written for the Breeder and Sportsman.]

HORSEMEN in laying their plans for the season's campaign should not fail to include in their arrangements the Overland Park Club races at Denver. This enterprising association will hang out liberal purses and offer inducements that will make it an object to horsemen to attend their spring meeting, which will take place in May. A programme and advertisements will be out in ample time to enable owners to make preparations to be present, and the inducements will be such as to make it profitable for all to attend and take their best colts and older horses with them. Among the advantages offered by Denver to be taken into consideration is its central location, being almost on the route to the principal Eastern tracks. The Union Pacific Railroad Company has offered the Overland Park Club a reduced rate on transportation, and promised to build a switch to the track which will facilitate matters and do away with the trouble that has been the case in shipping over the Denver and Rio Grande railroad.

The Overland Park Club never does anything by halves, and as every horseman knows who has raced his horses over the Denver track, under the management of the present racing association, his treatment will be all that could be asked for and his interests looked after by the directors and all the other officers of the association in every particular; and every one will feel that if anything is left undone, it is through mistake and not through lack of good intentions on the part of the management. The Overland Park Club has become one of the most popular and largest associations of the kind in America. Their spring programme will be confined to running races, and they intend to give a thirteen days' meeting with added money to the amount of from $35,000 to $40,000, some of the stakes being worth to the winner upwards of $4,000, and no purse less than $600; the entrance will be free, so as to give the owner of small means a chance as well as his more fortunate opponents. Every horseman who attends the meeting, whether he is rich or poor brings one horse or twenty, may rest assured that he will receive the kindest and most courteous treatment.

The Overland Park Club's track at Denver is most beautifully located on the banks of the Platte river, its surroundings being picturesque, the ground protected from high winds and graced by beautiful shade trees of the box alder variety, many of them majestic specimens of the natural growth of this tree, towering to the height of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred feet. The stables are commodious, substantial, modern in their appointments and are in every respect equal of any to be found. They are embowered amongst the beautiful trees, and near them are pastures which in the spring months are knee-deep with the succulent alfalfa, devoured with such a relish by our equine friends after the long winter months of dry feed. Another advantage that should be taken into consideration by the horsemen is the fact which has been so well demonstrated—that working their horses in the rare air of so high an altitude gives lung capacity and bottom, resulting in speed and ability to win hot races through the entire season

Now in regard to the track, club house, grand stand, saddling paddocks, betting ring, etc. The running track is a seven-furlong, seven-eighths track, and the soil is of the very best adapted for track building, it being a natural sediment which is well known among horsemen as making the very safest kind of a track, springy, easy for horses' feet and less liable to cup and break under the strain brought to bear upon it in a hotly-contested race I will say right here that in all my experience I never saw a better track, and have never seen a horse go lame or cripple on this course. It is not quite as fast as the mile track, although I have seen a horse make a mile in 1:41 over it, and several shorter races run in very fast time, but as you are probably aware many horsemen are prone to lay the blame of their defeat to Mother Earth, knowing that she cannot talk back. In consideration of this and the mile track being the fastest and equally as good in every respect, they have adopted the wise plan of giving their spring meeting on it, and as there will be no trotting at this meeting, the track will be put in the best possible condition for running races. It also affords ample room to start a field of fifteen or twenty horses without inconveniencing anybody, an advantage that will be appreciated by the spectators.

The Overland Park Club House is a handsome structure, elegant in its appointments, commodious, with ample room for guests on the balcony, and everybody who attends is made to feel at home; it is run in first-class style in every respect, and only the very best of everything is served.

The present grand stand is a very good one, but the Association has decided to move back and erect a large addition to it for the accommodation of the crowds of people who attend its meetings. The new grand stand will seat 25,000 people. Last season I saw over ten thousand people on the ground at one time, which goes to show that Denver is a racing town.

The saddling paddocks will be enlarged and placed away from the grand stand. The betting ring will also be enlarged and made more open, so as to give easier exit and access to the crowds that attend to lay their money on their choices.

The officers of the Association are all gentlemen, and take an interest in its affairs, each working for the good of the Society and doing all in his power to make things pleasant for everybody concerned. The Secretary, Mr. C. B. Rhoades, is a worker, courteous to everybody and a pleasant gentleman to meet either on the grounds of the Association or in his office. He possesses the esteem of everyone, and one thing that endears him to the horsemen is the fact that your check is ready every evening of the day on which your horse has made a winning. That is more than I can say for our home associations, as we have all had to wait sometimes two or three days. The cashier of the Overland Park Club, Mr. McIntosh, is always on hand to cash the checks, which he does with excellent grace, as becomes the cashier of the club and the National Bank of Commerce; he is also an enthusiastic horseman and a pleasant gentleman to meet under any circumstances. The vice-president of the club, Mr. W. Magette, is one of the most reliable and enthusiastic horsemen in Denver. Mr. Peter McCourt, nephew of Senator Tabor of the Tabor Opera House, is also a lover of the royal sport. The genial Du Bois Bros. can always be counted in with their horses and money when called upon. They are enthusiastic horsemen, extensive breeders and whole-souled gentlemen whom it is a pleasure to meet. They possess one of the finest farms in the neighborhood of Denver. It lies about six or seven miles outside of the city, and they have spared neither pains nor expense to make it up to their ideas of what such a farm should be. Their place is the home of that grand trotting stallion, Superior, 2:17, and there is to be found a large number of very fine colts and fillies, the get of Superior and other noted trotters. I regret that I am not better posted on trotting horses, for if I were I could write an interesting article on the grand stock I saw on this model farm.

Superintendent J. W. Temple, of the Overland Park Club, is conceded to be the right man in the right place; he is undoubtedly one of the hardest workers of the Association, keeps its interest at heart, is indefatigable in its efforts to make things pleasant for visitors, is prepared at all times to answer questions and put himself to any amount of trouble for the horsemen. He treats everybody alike, is a man of excellent judgment, and in my mind there is no question but if the Overland Park Club gave him complete control he would soon put it in the front rank with the largest associations in the East. And now, Mr. Editor, I will wind up this article by stating that I was highly delighted with my visit to Denver last year, and that I shall always remember with pleasure the Overland Park Club, its officers and their progressive methods. San Francisco, with its larger population should blush to see a town like Denver so far ahead of it in the possession of a Racing Association like the Overland Park Club.

To the officers of the Overland Park Club I would suggest that now is the time for them to come to the front with the programme proposed, and which will encourage all the horsemen who can to visit them and make entries at their meetings. To accomplish this I would also hint the advisability of placing their advertisement in the Breeder and Sportsman at an early date, as that is the medium on this coast to which horsemen look for information as to where to make their entries. Hoping that the Overland Park Club will prosper as is its merit, and that at an early date San Francisco will rejoice in the possession of as enterprising an association, I remain Yours very truly,

Matt Storn.

Thoroughbreds at Sacramento.

From a gentleman who had just returned from a trip to California's capital the other day we elicited the following in the course of an interview:

"I was surprised to see what a training-ground Agricultural Park is now-a-days. Thoroughbreds, and great ones, too, are flying around that track at pretty much all hours of the day. Haggin has thirteen in training there, two-year-olds, principally Sir Modreds and Darebins, and they are the finest lot I ever saw from Rancho del Paso. Ben Timmons is handling them.

"William M. Murry, the popular owner and trainer, has the next largest string, eight in all. In the lot the ones I liked best were a two-year-old Three Cheers filly, the imp. Cyrus youngster, Sir Carr, owned by Jesse D. Carr, and two fillies by Prince of Norfolk coming two years of age. One of these Prince of Norfolks is out of a full sister to the famous racehorse, Jim Renwick. This Sir Carr is a grand colt. Just imagine a youngster not yet two years old with splendid legs, neatly-turned body and of good length, and weighing 975 pounds. The Three Cheers filly is just as good-looking a two year-old as one would want to see, too. Sir Carr is entered in the American Derby of 1893 at Chicago. The Peer is in Murry's string, too. I never saw a two-year-old fill out better in my life. He is going to be a first-class race horse as sure as you're living, and he'll make some of them climb to beat him in the American Derby this year.

"Wilber F. Smith is handling that good colt Zaldivar, also a toppy-looking colt by Prince of Norfolk out of Irene Harding, and two colts by Ed Corrigan coming two years of age. I like the Irene Harding colt very much. Zaldivar, fit and well, ought to be in it next season with the best of them.

"The celebrated turf veteran, Cyrenus Mulkey, is on deck at Sacramento with Tim Murphy, whom he is preparing for a campaign at the East. Mr. Mulkey thinks Kingston or any short-distance flyer in the country will have to take Tim's dust when the old roan gelding strikes them in good condition. William Madden has been secured to ride for Mr. Mulkey when he begins operations. Madden was working for Mr. Murry, and is a promising horse pilot.

Dan Dennison is handling a promising colt, half brother to Guido (Boreslis), also three fillies two years old in the spring. One of the youthful misses is by Tyrant, the other two by Prince of Norfolk.

"Ab Stemler has Lodowic and Take Notice in training. I think Stemler has adopted a good plan in his training of Lodowic—working him at the end of a rope. The son of Longfellow is so big and strong that few men, let alone boys, can hold him, and Stemler's plan appears to be working to a charm and to be a marked improvement over last year's system.

"In my tour around the stables I saw a weanling filly by Three Cheers out of Margarita, and I believe I can honestly say that she is the most promising youngster I ever saw. John Mackey and others are just as enthusiastic over her as I am. I understand that Billy Murry refused a tempting offer for her from W. O'B. McDonough, of this city. Mr. McDonough said he thought her the finest youngster he had seen in all his travels, and he's a pretty good judge of horseflesh, too, I think."

A Great Production.

Clark's Horse Review (Chicago) of last week comes to us in a beautifully illuminated lithographed cover containing thereon a picture of a little child holding up to a happy-faced horse's nose a basket overflowing with holly-leaves and berries. As appropriate as this cover is as a Christmas offering, its contents within the cover is calculated to bring joy to the hearts of all lovers of fast trotters and pacers—to the owner, driver, trainer and rubber alike. In this magnificent issue (148 pages in all) are articles relating to the leading stock farms of America, the great families and their achievements, the complete 2:20 list; then there are race romances and race poetry, articles on training, on care and selection of broodmares, in fact, anything and everything pleasing to anyone interested in horses and horse history. There are some excellent likenesses of turf monarchs, some Californians among the number, and it would be hard indeed to excel the efforts of the Clark's Horse Review force as set forth in the issue of December 22, 1891.

Racing Sketches.

All the old-time turfmen in the United States will remember Mahoney Bros. and their famous horse Lute Fogle. The horse was undoubtedly the worst actor at the post that ever troubled a starter in this country, and his owners were two of the most remarkable characters the racing clubs of the country ever had to deal with. There was no middle ground with the Mahoney brothers. When Lute was a winner they were on the top wave of prosperity, and when Lute lost they were "flat broke." Nearly ten years ago the two brothers found themselves in Memphis, Tenn., late in the fall, without a penny in their pockets, and scarcely enough blankets to keep old Lute Fogle's sides warm. A winter meeting was announced in New Orleans, and the Mahoneys determined to go there. They went to a railroad agent, secured a car, and placed Lute on board, billed to New Orleans, with themselves as attendants in the car with the horse. How they were to get the horse out when they arrived at New Orleans without paying the freight, for they had not a cent, was a matter they discussed as the train rolled along towards the Crescent City. They had been unfortunate during the fall campaign, and their promise to pay was in everybody's hands that they could get money from, while Lute was mortgaged for several times his worth. Outside assistance could not therefore be counted on, and they had to rely on their wits to get Lute Fogle free, as he was their only prop to lean on. On the morning of the second day after leaving Memphis the train reached New Orleans. There was a blockade in the freight yards there at the time, and instead of the train of which the Mahoneys' car was a part being taken into the city, it was backed out on a side track in the suburbs and left standing. Charles Mahoney opened the car door after they had been standing still for an hour or so and looked out. He at once discovered that the car was standing in a shallow cut, and the top of the bank of earth on the side next to the open door was just level with the car floor. Mahoney jumped out and looked up and down the long row of cars, and there was not a trainman to be seen. Here was their golden opportunity, and the brothers were not long in taking advantage of it. The boards used to make the stall for Lute Fogle in one end of the car were torn down, and a bridge from the car door to the top of the bank of earth was quickly made. Old Lute was then invited to walk out, and with a few active steps he was clear of the car and safe on terra firma. The lumber was carefully replaced in the car and the door closed and fastened, while the two brothers triumphantly mounted on old Lute's back and rode away. A few hours afterwards an engine came out and hauled the delayed train into the city. When the car which started from Memphis with Lute Fogle inside was opened nothing was found but a pile of old lumber and some straw. The railroad people were dumbfounded, but as they could not find any trace of the horse or his owners they finally came to the conclusion that there was a mistake in the waybill, and the car had been hauled all the way from Memphis empty. In the meantime the Mahoneys had arrived at the fair grounds track, where the racing was going on, and after borrowing some oats from a friend there they got old Lute Fogle ready to race in a short time, and they were made rich again by his win.

Some years ago Father Bill Daly, "the sage of Brighton Beach," had several broken-down selling-platers that he considered of no value, and he desired to get rid of them at any price. He sold one of the most unlikely of the lot to a young trainer known as Brownie for the small sum of $400. Father Bill considered the horse well sold, and chuckled to himself over the bargain. Brownie took the horse over to the Sheepshead Bay course and began to train him. He soon found that he was a hopeless cripple, but by patient work and a free use of the soak-tub he got the old plug to feel as spry as a colt, and able to gallop at a pretty brisk rate. The horse went along so well in its gallops that a race was selected for him on a certain day. Late in the afternoon preceding the day of the race he was taken out for a gallop. A little inexperienced stable boy was put up, and he was told to gallop the horse a mile in about 1:50. The stable boy followed his instructions to the letter, but as he neared the half-mile post the old horse suddenly got a gay fit on him, and taking the bit in his teeth he ducked his head and sped away like a Hindoo in disguise. Just as the horse made his break for the run Father Daly drove up on the other side of the track in a buggy. He saw the horse move off, and thinking it was a private trial he whipped out his watch and set it to going as the horse flashed past the half-mile post. The further the horse went the faster he got and when he finished the mile out in 1:43 flat, under a hard pull, a sudden desire to possess the animal came over the spirit of Father Bill's dreams. He lost no time in driving over to where Brownie was sitting on the fence, bemoaning his luck, for he very well knew that the horse would be hopelessly broken down after such a run on the hard track. As Father Bill reached the disconsolate trainer the boy came up with the horse, who was blowing and snorting like a colt, and the "sage of the Beach" was horrified that the animal was the one he had almost given away a few weeks before. He hailed the trainer and asked what he would take for that horse. Brownie thought of course he was only jesting, and not wishing to show how sore he was over the runaway he said: "Mr. Daly, this is a very valuable horse, and he is not for sale." Father Bill meant business, however, and he blurted out: "I will give you $2,000 for him." Brownie did not wait to hear another word, but said: "Mr. Daly, he is your horse, and I will send him over to your stable at once." The horse was started off to Daly's stable at Brighton Beach, and he got there without getting cold and stiff. The next day, however, the poor beast's legs were as stiff as iron, and it took the united efforts of six men to get him out of the stall. The idea of racing him was preposterous, and it was said at the time that Father Bill went around behind the stable, took off his wooden leg, and clubbed himself for being the biggest fool on the Island.—R. O. R. in The Horseman.

J. A. & A. H. Morris have fifty-four yearlings in training. It is a great number, but it is safe to say not half of them will be in the stable by spring. Messrs. Morris' policy is to try them well and weed out those which are not up to the best form, leaving a moderate number to handle. Their lot are collected from various sources—some are bred at the Westchester farm, some at the Maryland farm, some at the Texas ranch, while some were bred at the English farm in Essex; the balance were purchased at sales.

Simmons Liver Regulator.

The principal cause of nearly all sickness has its origin in a disordered liver, the largest organ in the body, which if not regulated in time, great suffering, wretchedness and death will ensue. A little precaution taken in time in the shape of a reliable and efficacious Liver Regulator will in most cases prevent illness and fatal consequences. No medicine has gained a wider reputation than Simmons' Liver Regulator. This justly celebrated medicine regulates the liver, promotes digestion, and fortifies the system against malarial diseases.

NAPA SOD A is beneficial in all cases of kidney affections.

THE GUN.

The Southern California Wing Shooting Club Tournament.

This club was organized on December 2, 1891, in Riverside, Cal., with A. W. Bruner, President; M. E. Taber, Vice-President; J. Boemer, Secretary and Treasurer, and J. H. Goodhue, S. R. Smith and C. F. Packard, Directors. The purpose of the club is to promote the art of wing shooting and to maintain a club of sportsmen for social enjoyment.

The initial shooting tournament of the club occured to-day at their grounds in Riverside, and was a thorough success, both in attendance and sport. There were present among others as visitors and participants, Mr. A. W. Adams, of Chicago, E. Unger of Los Angeles, and T. J. Woodbury of Pasadena, who contributed largely to the enjoyment of the occasion. Mr. Chick, of San Diego, was expected here, but the death of W. H Francis of that city last week deterred him from coming, much to the regret of the members of the club.

This morning dawned bright and clear, but with a strong north wind blowing, which increased in force until at 9 o'clock it was blowing almost a gale, and directly in the face of the shooters.

The club grounds embrace about five acres, admirably situated a little west of town, and about half a mile north of Roubidoux Mountain. The club is to be congratulated on the selection of its grounds as it is safe to say that there are no finer in the whole country. The traps used were the invention of Mr. F. S. Ecker, our popular gunsmith, and were sprung by an electric button pressed by the scorer, who occupied an enclosed desk back of the shooters. They worked to perfection, and are the same traps which so pleased Mr. Elliot, the champion, when he was here. The wind storm which blew all day came directly from the snow-clad mountain range north of Riverside and was bitterly cold.

As the shooters faced the the traps, the wind blew directly in their faces and it was hard work indeed to follow a bird after it once took flight, although the birds were so cold, that the majority had to be flushed after the traps were sprung. The birds were a hard lot of flyers and afforded some fine sport and gave the numerous spectators a grand chance to "chaff" the unsuccessful shooters who endeavored to stop them, in their erratic flight, which it is unnecessary to say they took advantage of.

A harder lot of flyers after they left the ground was never shot at in California, as with the gale showing forty miles an hour, it afforded them a grand opportunity to double and twist as only a good "blue rock" can and don't forget that they just "everlastingly got up and got" when they once got started.

As will be seen by the appended score Mr. Bruner captured the medal by a score of 18 out of 20 kills, with Mr. Unger a close second.

The latter gentleman had the misfortune to step to the score and call "pull" twice with the "safety on" which materially affected his score as shown below.

Mr. Goodhue did some excellent work with his second barrel which was highly applauded.

Mr. Bruner's birds were a hard lot and his shooting in the teeth of the gale blowing as it was was remarkable for its excellence. The shooting of Mr Ecker on his last ten birds was remarkably fine as also was Messrs. Smith and Taber—as the frequent loud applause of the spectators should.

There is no question but that the terribly strong wind blowing directly in the face of the shooters as it did, brought at least one-half of the scores down away below their average. The score:

Accidentally Killed.

W. H. Francis was accidentally shot and killed yesterday while brant hunting on the bay, by a young man by the name of Henshelwood.

Francis was in a floating "battery," and the boy mistook him for a pelican and fired a shot at him from a rowboat with a 38-calibre pistol with the above result.—San Diego Union, Dec. 19, 1891.

IN MEMORIAM.

"Will Francis is dead."

Such was the greeting I received when I went into Eckers' Gun Store a few days ago. To say I was stunned would but faintly express my feelings.

Will Francis was one of God's own boys—one of Nature's noblemen—a young man whose word was his bond, a thoroughbred sportsman, a true friend and a man in every sense of the word.

How many times have we met in the field? How many times have the old crowd met in the gun store when Will was the life of the party?

How many times have we met at the trap in San Diego with visiting sportsmen from Denver to San Francisco, when dear old Will held them all level, and, with a cheery smile on his face, would greet each comrade with a hearty shake of the hand and the same old smile on his face, and say, "Now, old boy, go in and win." The news of his tragic death was a terrible blow to his many friends.

Will Francis had more friends among the sportsmen of Southern California than any other man in this vicinity.

Always the same, whether in the field, of which he was passionately fond, at the trap, or in business, Will was a gentleman, and there will be a feeling of sadness come over every assemblage of the boys when they miss the presence of that prince of sportsmen, W. H. Francis.

Many a brawny hand has dashed the teardrops from the eye during the past week when Will's name was mentioned, and a hush has come over many a gathering of the "boys" when his name was inadvertantly brought up as we thought of the many times we have met, when Will was the chief factor in each and every move to promote field and trap sport, and as the fact that he would never again participate with us at our gatherings forces itself upon us it seemed impossible to believe.

San Diego has lost one of the brightest lights in the sportsmen's circle she ever had, and there will be many a day elapse in the future before his place can be filled.

On the Western Plains.

Fortunately we did not encounter any of these red devils. Our hunt was for gold, and we didn't wish to be molested. Though we were well armed for defense we were not offensive, and used our rifles only to provide food. An antelope had been killed one afternoon and a portion of it eaten for supper, the balance was reserved for breakfast and future use. An average sized antelope dressed will weigh about sixty pounds, but it won't serve six mountaineers for any great length of time. Life in the mountains begets hunger, and we were as hungry as wolves, and would "get away" with an antelope in two days.

Well, the next morning we had fried and broiled antelope for breakfast. As much as the skillet would hold was fried and set aside for lunch. While squatted on the ground, resting on the glutius maximus and enjoying slap-jacks, antelope and coffee, there came down from the timber in the mountain two big wolves. They were gaunt and hungry. They showed no timidity and went straight for the meat in the skillet. In the twinkling of an eye it was all gobbled, though hot enough to burn out the intestines of the brutes, and they swallowed it with avidity as if it were a sweet morsel and delicatable to their palates. Then they lickad lean jaws and snarled and snapped at each other like two hungry children who quarrel over the division of a pie, each claiming that the other got the larger piece. In a moment, they turned their attention to us, and looked at us with glaring, hungry eyes, as though they intended finishing their repast with a dessert of raw man-steak. But they didn't have the opportunity. All this time, which was a very brief interval, of less time than it takes to tell, we were so amazed that we only sat and watched them. We were paralyzed by their mendacity. They were not more than ten feet away from us. But recovering from our surprise we grabbed our rifles and poured a volley into them that sent them to wolf Heaven or wolf Hades, whichever you please, in double quick time. These wolves were of a different variety from the gray wolf of the northern plain. They were black with the exception of a few reddish-brown hairs on the throat and belly. They were as big as Bismark's wolf-hound. It was a surprise that they should be so famished in a land teeming with game as to brave the hunter's rifle, but as the seven-up player said, 'There are times in a man's life when he can't turn a jack." I suppose there are times in a wolf's life when he can't run down a deer or an antelope.

We had enough of buffalo hunting for a time, and concluded to be off for awhile and enjoy the sweets of rest in the wilderness, and the wild, unrestrained life of primitive man in his hours of ease and idleness. For a few days we lounged lazily around and talked or bathed, as the spirit moved, or rolled in the grass and gathered wildflowers like little children.

We paid no heed to buffalo, antelope and wolf, though they were in sight every day. For the time being we enjoyed this vagabond, devil-may-care life with gusto. We were joyful and buoyant, and sang and told stale stories, at which we laughed as heartily as though they were the embodiment of all wit.

The ghostly flitting of the black and dismal raven could not damp our spirits, but as they noiselessly flew past like ebon spectres from the nether world, we wondered why the divine Creator had cumbered the earth with birds of such evil omen.

Those fowl harpies, turkey buzzards, often hovered over us, sometimes sailing on level wing, sometimes wheeling in great circles, searching with basilisk eye for carrion; and when found, they would swoop down on it in such numbers that they crowded each other at their horrible banquet, and would pick at and tear each other and fight furiously for standing room at the free lunch table.

They are unlovely birds, but useful as scavingers. Frequently sand-hill cranes flew over us, but at so great a height that it was futile to attempt to shoot them. In that pure and still atmosphere the peculiar rattling and grating of their voices as they called and answered each other could be distinctly heard, notwithstanding the great altitude of their flight, and sounded sweet to our ears; for, as "Distance lends enchantment to the view," so distance lent melody to their discordant notes. Sometimes they would alight to feed. Their food is grass and roots and seed, and while feeding it is easy to bring one down. There is no difficulty in approaching them near enough for a sure shot if there is any depression that will permit the hunter to hide from view while approaching them, for, though they have a vigilant and quick eye, they have no acute sense of smell and cannot detect the presence of an enemy except through the senses of sight and hearing. I am unable to say what family these cranes belong to, but think that they may be of the same genus as the stork. They are not waders, neither are they carniverous, but live on the dry land and are purely herbiverous and graminiverous. Their flesh is equal to that of the wild turkey. They are funny looking birds either walking or flying. With their long legs and long necks and long, strong beaks, they can stand by an ordinary fence, and, reaching over, pick grass on the other side. In flying they stretch their long legs horizontally backwards and their feet stick out beyond their caudal feathers, while their long necks and beaks are thrust forward on the some plane like a pike-staff. While looking at them in their flight I was reminded, though the idea seems incongruous, of a verse of Mrs. Sigourney's poem on the bob-o-link's song—"Linked sweetness long drawn out." One day several of them lighted a short distance from camp to feed. Rainbow took his rifle and succeeded in bagging one of them. When stretched out it was a bird of monstrous length, but of no great breadth, though it must have weighed at least twenty pounds. It was roasted, or at least broiled, over the glowing coals of the camp fire and eaten. It afforded a most delicious repast, and no Thanksgiving turkey nor Christmas goose nor New Year chicken pot-pie ever tasted sweeter. But then, living constantly in the open air is a great appetizer.

While taking our ease and indulging in dolce far niente day-dreams, sometimes fond retrospection or serious introspection would usurp the throne of thought aloud, and from thinking aloud confidences, hitherto withheld, were born and interchanged.

We talked of childhood's days, their joys and their sorrows; of the games and sports of youth and the heedless jollity and enjoyment of it; of the hopes and ambitions and aspirations of young manhood; of its dreams and illusions, and of the bitter experiences that had dissipated them. And, it was curious to note how all our experiences run on parallel lines, even in love affairs; for, as confidence became more firmly established through interchange, we told each each other of those sad experiences and bitter disappointments where high hopes of fruition were blighted.

Of course, there was always "A woman at the bottom of it." Ah, well! "Loves young dream," according to the novelists, has nearly always, since time began, been thwarted. Young love is only the fantasy of a dream at its best. Broken hearts are easily mended when they are young, and then—their owners dream again. During these conversations some one, indignant over his fancied wrongs, would burst into invectire against women in general, and his false and lost inamorata in particular. But, for the life of me, I can't see why women should be blamed in such matters any more than men, nor as much. Selfishness is inherent in the animal man as well as in other animals, and man has always used his greater strength to force woman into subservience of his will, his desires and his passions.

We, in America, think that we have arrived at a very high degree of civilization, and claim that we treat women justly; but this is true in a degree only. Woman is not fully emancipated even in enlightened America less so in Europe; while in the balance of the world she is still a slave. If she some times plays false and resorts to subterfuge it is because of her weakness physical y; they are her defense, her armour and shield. Women have as good a right to reject a suitor as man has to pass them by, especially if the man have no bank account. A pleasant circumstance showed that misanthrophy had not taken a very strong hold of us. Whenever mother or sister was spoken of, the one was referred to with deep reverance, the other with affection and admiration. What I have just said may be trite but it is true.

One morning, while we were at breakfast, two apparitions came crawling into camp. One a half-naked, half-starved man; the other a half starved dog. The dog, with drooping head and tail and a wolfish motion of gait, followed close at the heels of the man. We were so surprised that for a few minutes we could only gaze in open-mouthed wonder, while they, with lean and hungry look, stood and gazed longingly at the meal we had been eating, or what was left of it.

They were not welcome apparitions; we were keeping open house it is true but wished no callers of that ilk. But one was human and the other, man's most faithful friend. They were in sore distress and needed a helping hand. We took them in and fed and clothed them, that is, we clothed the man as best we could from our scanty wardrobes, each one furnishing some article of apparel. To the dog we gave a saddle-blanket for him to lie on near the fire and bask in its genial warmth. Both were shivering, but more from hunger than cold, as the air was balmy. Hunger engenders cold while a stomach full of good vituals generates warmth.

On the Great Plain and in the mountains, at that time, distress never appealed for relief in vain. In fact no appeal was necessary, other than the dumb appeal of apparent suffering. Relief was spontaneous and free, and no questions asked as to the worthiness of the recipient until after it was bestowed. The dog ate ravenously, but the man very sparingly. Long fasting had destroyed his appetite. Many persons entertain the idea that a starved man can "Eat a grindstone." The idea is incorrect. Hunger subsides after the third day; and, though the mind may be busy with thoughts of something to eat, and revel in imaginary banquets of delicious viands, the gnawing of extreme hunger has passed away. When food is obtained half of an ordinary meal will suffice to appease the appetite, and often the stomach rejects food altogether. I have passed through the experience.

B. T. C.

There is but slight choice in the duck grounds of this State at this time. From every direction come the reports that the birds were never known to be more plentiful. Some fine shooting has been indulged in during the past six weeks, growing better and better down to the present. The probabilities are that the hunting in this line will continue equally as satisfactory during January.

Snipe shooting has also been unusually fine during the few weeks past, while quail have continued plentiful, and the recent rains have added to the conditions, making them well-nigh perfect for the working of the dogs. No one has been disaspointed in field work this season, and as a result all sportsmen are wearing expanded smiles of satisfaction and frequently enjoying the finest of epicurean dishes, the fruit of a few hours sport a field.

No doubt but that many of our local sportsmen have been converted, owing to the experience and observation made during the past few weeks, to the idea that the sixteen guage gun is the most feasible and handy weapon for the purpose of quail shooting. The day for large bore guns and heavy charges is gone by. Why should one continue to fire three and one-half drachms of powder and one and one-fourth ounces of shot at a little bird that scarce weighs more than the charge fired at it? Why carry a gun one-third heavier than necessary or convenient when a weapon weighing that much less will do more and better execution?

If you do not believe that a 16 guage gun charged with 2½ drachms of powder and one ounce or a fraction less of shot, is not the proper gun and charge for quail, just try it and be convinced. Of course if you do not want to be convinced, do not try it, for there is no escaping the conclusion when once the experiment is made.

The American Kennel Club.

Refering to the difficulties arising in the A. K. C., Mr. James Watson of Philadelphia, appears in The Press of that city with the following:

"The resignation of the Philadelphia Kennel Club from the association of clubs known as the American Kennel Club, was accepted without comment by the executive committee of the A. K. C., at its regular meeting held in New York.

It has been said that the American Kennel Club was entirely at fault and the resignation of the Philadelphia club was forced upon it. The side of the American Kennel Club has not been published hitherto, but now that thematter has been settled it may as well be made public.

Some two years ago a question came before the American Kennel Club as to what should constitute a field trial record and it was decided that the club could only recognize wins in stakes open to all comers, that is to say in public competition.

Last Spring some of the Philadelphia club members desired to have runners at their private field trials recognized and at the May meeting of the A. K. C. the Philadelphia club delegate moved that a committee of five be appointed to devise or suggest a method whereby field trials and coursing clubs could be brought into closer association with the A. K. C

This committee presented a report entirely out of keeping with the object named in the resolution which created it, contenting itself with asking for the rescinding of the previous rule of the club regarding field trial records and proposing two resolutions in exact conformity with the desires of the Philadelphia club members.

The report was submitted at the September meeting of the A. K. C, at which not one member of the sub-committee was present to support it, but not wishing to be disrespectful to the committee by declining to accept a report so out of keeping with the object for which the committee was appointed, the delegates decided to hold it over until the December meeting. As before, there was no one present to support the report, and after the original motion creating the committee had been read and the report compared with it, the latter was, by a unanimous vote, referred back to the committee with the notification that it was not what sought to be accomplished.

The Philadelphia Kennel Club had endeavored to secure in this manner what it could not otherwise obtain, and because the A. K. C. declined to adopt the resolutions put before it, flew off the handle and decided on resignation.

An attempt to foment dissension through the press regarding an alleged clique controling the A. K. C. fell flat, and there was nothing for the parent body to do but accept the resignation, which it did.

The result of this step will be that no show will be held in that city this spring, unless as has been suggested a new club be formed and dates secured in good season. No club can make a success of a show now unless accorded the support of the A. K. C. for exhibitors want each win their dogs may secure to count toward attaining the coveted title of champion, and only wins at shows held by members of the A K C. are of use in this respect.

Mr. Wm. H. Staniels, of this city the well known fancier of the American Foxhound, has just received from Brownsville Michigan two eleven months old puppies, which are said to represent the finest strain of this family of trailers. Mr. Staniels is an enthusiast regarding this breed, and succeeded in carrying off most of the honors in the classes of this breed in the last bench show. He seems to be fortifying himself against all comers for the future, and will be on hand at the next contest, ready to grasp the honors.

The Field Trials.

The preparations for the Pacino Coast Field Trials Club field trials are, perhaps, more extensive this year than ever before. It has long been an open secret that some four or more kennels, besides several single entries, are preparing for this event with the utmost possible care. Every one of these enthusiasts are sure that they have a "cinch" on winning first in their respective classes. It will be, no doubt, one of the most closely contested events ever held under the auspices of this organization.

It is to be hoped that a goodly supply of rain will prepare the grounds for the trials and that the conditions which rendered the work of the dogs so unsatisfactory last year, may be fully overcome. With rain sufficient to prepare the grounds and place them in suitable condition there can be found no better point than Bakersfield for holding the trials. Not only are the grounds superb for the desired purpose, but the surroundings and facilities for enjoying the sport are unequaled by any other point in the State. No other place has better accommodations than Bakersfield. No other city possesses a greater number of genial and gentlemanly sportsmen who strive with sufficient energy to succeed in making every sportsman who may attend these events, feel at home and provide for every one the best possible means of enjoyment.

Then there is "The Southern," one of the most commodious hotels to be found in the State outside of San Francisco, kept by that prince of landlords, Col. John C. Morrison, who knows how to entertain and on all occasions puts this knowledge to practical use and as a result, when a number of persons assemble at his hostelry as on occasions of this kind, there is nothing lacking in attention which can add to the comfort and enjoyment of the occasion.

There is every indication that there will be a full attendance of the sportsmen of the State at the trials this year and as a result there will, no doubt, be a very enjoyable time for all who may attend.

Visits.

On the 19th of December, 1891, Mrs. C. P. Murray's Foxterrier bitch Too-too visited Mr. C. A. Sumner's Blemton Vesuvian (14,290) at Los Angeles.

Mr. Robert Liddle, San Francisco, Cal., has bred Nellie, foxterrier bitch, to J. B. Martin's foxterrier stud dog, Blemton Shiner, A. K. C S. B. No. 14 277 by Champion Blemton Rubicon, ex Champion Blemton Brilliant, at San Francisco upon Dec. 23d.

It has leaked out that about a week or more ago there was a great gathering of the foxterrier men of this city to witness a rat-killing match.

The pit was about 20x20 feet, and there were more rats on hand than the famous piper is said to have charmed away from the ro lent-famed village across the seas.

It is said that the terriers did themselves proud in the matter of the discharge of their natural office of executioners of rats.

The Irish setter men have every reason to feel proud over the outcome of their field trials. The workdone was of a very creditable nature and, no doubt, has been the means of placing the red beauties several points ahead in the estimation of the observant kennel men of the country.

The death of that grand St. Bernard Plinlimmon, has been recently announced. Perhaps, of all the dogs ever brought before the public, none have ever attained the celebrity won by this grand dog. "Our Fritz" would have failed to impress the public from the stage as thoroughly as he did but for the introduction of Plilimmon as a feature in his quaint and characteristic scenes.

The old dog had thousands of friends all over the country who will sincerely regret his taken off. The audiences remember him, no doubt, in his act of being "Fritz," the quaint German basket maker his lunch, carrying the basket in which it was packed by the handle, and, sating it down by his master and would walk across the stage surveying the audience with an irresistably amusing expression which invariably called forth a perfect storm of applause.

Let no one be shocked at the question for it is asked in all honesty: If a dog die shall he live again? If not, why not? Is not faithfulness one of the highest known virtues? If so, where can an exemplification of it be found that will equal that shown by the dog? No where, I venture to say, can it be found in the human race save in the breast of the mother. It is not desirable that the boon of immortality be confered upon all deserving life? Would not an eternity of existance become somewhat monetinous if there be but the companionship of man and angels.

As for me, let me revel in the so called unspiritual realm of mountains, fields and groves; meadows with purling streams and lowing kine; the singing birds and blooming flowers, reveling in their wealth of melody and beauty beneath the arching azure of summer skies and--dogs, yes, good dogs are, and ever have been and doubtless ever will be, far more deserving of immortality than many sordid, selfish, soulless men.

It is to be hoped that in the coming bench show that all personal differences will be thrown aside and that the very best element possible will be brought together to the end that the show may be a pronounced success.

There is a better feeling generally in dogdom at this time than there has been heretofore, at least for some time past. It is to be deplored that the two clubs did not reach a satisfactory basis upon which to consolidate at their recent conference meeting, but, perhaps, unity of action may yet be brought about, at least it would seem that one of the most potent factors in reaching that result would be for the entire membership or individuality interested in the kennel to take part in the coming show and exhibit their dogs regardless of past differences. It would seem that some features have been overlooked in this matter of consolidation.

Does not the membership of a club control its action? Very well, if this be so, why not join the organization and arrange minor details afterward, instead of bringing them up and making hinderances of them in the path leading to consolation?

This course seems feasible and entirely proper.

The New Jersey Kennel Club having been expelled from the A. K. C. by action of the last mentioned body at its last meeting comes to the front with an exhibition of that snap and energy for which it has ever been noted, and appeals to the courts to pass upon the question of the legality of their expulsion. The membership of the N. J. K. C. seem to be a unit on the question of maintaining their rights in this matter. Judging from their success in the past it would seem that they are still being guided by their aforetime able counsel.

The N. J. K. C. have secured one of the docks of the Pennsylvania railroad which adjoins the Jersey City ferry, for the purpose of holding their next show. By this arrangement the exhibitors and populace of New York can attend the bench show of this club with but little or no more trouble than though it were held in the Madison Square Garden.

The war goes merrily on and really increases in interest the older it grows.

The Occidental Coursing club held its first annual course ing meet at Newark Park on yesterday. A full report of the meeting will appear in our next.

Remarkable Bets.

The London Observer one Sunday recently contained the following: To-day is the anniversary of a very remarkable bet made 130 years ago between the Earl of March, subsequently fourth Duke of Queensberry, and one Mr. Theobald Taafe. The bet was that the Earl of March should find a four-wheel carriage, with four horses, to be driven by a man nineteen miles within the hour. Lord March won his bet, for the carriaga performed the distance in 53 minutes 27 seconds. It was a vehicle especially constructed for the purpose, and was so light that one man could easily carry it over his shoulder. So careful were the precautions of Lord March that the wheelboxes of this extraordinary conveyance were provided with reservoirs of oil calculated to drop at a given rate and to last for a day. The same Lord March was the one who wagered that he would send a message the distance of a quarter of a mile, and without the aid of a horse, faster than any horse could carry it. He won the bet by inclosing the message in the centre of a cricket ball, which was thrown from hand to hand by relays of professional cricketers. On one occasion, however, Lord March's proclivities for making wagers were nearly involving him in trouble. A man was found dying outside the step of Withe's Club. Lord March, having inspected him, wagered £100 that he would die within ten minutes. Another member of the club accepted the bet. As the man was obviously in extremis it was proposed to send for a medical man; but when the surgeon arrived on the scene of action Lord March objected to any interference on his part, on the ground that it would vitiate the bet.

Racing at San Diego.

The races and balloon ascensions at Pacific Beach Christmas afternoon drew a crowd to Pacific Beach Driving Park of nearly 1000 people. The free-for-all race resulted as follows:

Richellen	1	1	1
Torn Heel, Jr.	3	3	3

Time, 2:15¼, 2:36¼, 2:36¼.

The 2:40 trot was won by Supervisor Judson's chestnut stallion, Henry Clay, Jr., the following being the summary:

Henry Clay Jr.	1	1	1
Hattie Welling	2	3	2
Phœnix	3	2	3
Echo Chief	4		dr

Time, 2:40¾, 2:35¾, 2:40¾.

The third heat was declared a dead heat between Hattie Welling and Phœnix. The Judges were Captain Johnson, Phil Crosthwaite and F. N. Sdhofield of Phœnix, Ariz.

The balloon ascension followed the races, Prof. Romig and Hazel Keyes going up in one balloon and dropping with separate parachutes.

New Year Reflections.

By Charles Wesley Kyle.

One year older, one year more
Added to those past and gone;
Climbing toward the second score,
What a weight bears every one!
Time engulfs the joy and tear,
Plucks the thistle and the rose;
Knows no pity—knows no fear—
As it ever onward flows.

Every morr, however bright,
Is but fleeting as the wave—
Flashes of a passing light,
Guiding travellers to the grave.
Every step wherever trod,
Every pulse and every breath,
Nears our home beneath the sod—
Urn of universal death.

Mem'ry holds but pleasures few,
Sorrows with us long remain;
Joys fade like the morning dew,
Griefs engender lingering pain.
Thus through shifting of tire years,
Heap the burdens of distress;
Fall more freely Sorrow s tears
Heavier grows our loneliness.

"I am dying," spake the year,
Dimmed, uncertain was his sight;
Trembled oft the saddened tear,
As approached his final night.
"I have sorrowed, I have joyed,
I have felt my bosom glow,
With a warmth no fear alloyed;
But now drifts alone the snow!"

Curtained grows his failng eye,
Faint and fainter comes his breath;
Moans his last despairing sigh,
Now the Old Year meets his death.
Breaks the morning bright and clear,
Fresh and joyous, sweet and bright—
Time appears all hearts to cheer,
With the blessings of delight

May it be that for us all,
When our year of life shall close
We shall step out from the pall,
Bright as New Year's morning rose;
This life prove a training school,
Where the heart and mind are taught
Noble actions, and the rule
Learn'd that leads to higher thought.

A Day on the Marsh.

One day this week I was invited by a friend to participate in a duck hunt. Of course I couldn't refuse, in fact, I seldom if ever, do. It has become a chronic habit with me to invariably accept all such invitations. There are two reasons for this. In the first place I like to go duck hunting, It is a passion with me. and as I never derived anything more than a "ducking" by indulging this passion, I go on, and perhaps ever shall until the end of life's changeable chapter, tramping the marshes, sitting in the blinds and blazing away at the royal birds.

It is sport, this tumbling a fine large duck, that comes whistling by searching for the companionship of his fellows that have been previously scattered by some sportsman's salute. But I anticipate.

My friend and I took an early train from the city, and before 10 o'clock we were safely in our blinds on one of the most favorable marshes known on this coast, ready for whatever would chance to flutter along. We had not long to wait. In fact we were not given any chance to wait for anything during the entire day.

The weather was murky, not raining. Not a drop of rain fell all day, and the sky was just curtained sufficiently to shut out the sun and keep its annoying reflection off the water. The wind blew a stiff current from the bay and lashed the waves at high tide into breakers which snapped and broke with a viciousness which threw the white foam of their anger high in the air and drove the birds out into the quiet waters of the marsh. Here they were not out of danger, for they had jumped "out of the frying-pan into the fire," for several sportsmen were scattered here and there in the tules and sheltered behind bunches of the marsh grass with fowling pieces ready and alert for the bird or birds which should be so luckless as to pass that way.

The sport was very good, nothing remarkable as to number of birds flying, but the feature of the day was the large number of single birds in flight and the sport of dropping them. If they came in from the bay it took quick work and experienced judgment to down them.

There are cranks and cranks in the gun line, and many of them hold that the day is not good and the hunt a failure if they do not secure an enormous bag of game, but my word for it, the man who handles a close shooting gun and kills his birds clean and takes his chances at long range is the man who secures the most sport. The first game that came my way was a sprig drake, and the way he came down with the wind was only equaled by the pair of teal which followed him.

I earnestly invited them to rest with me, but they would not heed my invitation. In fact I spoke, using the "L. C. Smith" as an interpreter to the sprig twice, but he passed right on as did a number of succeeding birds. Now and then one would fold his flappers and fall limp and lifeless. No fluttering away in the cover to get lost in the dim distance.

If there is any man, save only Dr. Yorke, of English fame, who invariably knocks down his birds under all conditions, why I do not envy any such species of enjoyment.

To become so very proficient with the gun is to lose half the pleasure of overcoming the difficulties which beset and give zest to the average sportsman, and again such action is to provoke the laughter or contempt of the honest sportsman when reading accounts of such wonderful shots—so wonderful that the truth (!) can only be told in Munchansen language. Pitty, ain't it? Well, well, there was no Dr. Yorke; with us, all were "Joes" by a very respectable majority, the Joe quality being especially exhibited on the wind-assisted flights. Presently the flight changed and the birds flying against the wind presented easier shooting but not so "all fired" easy as one might suppose, for the wind had abated very much and the ducks mostly flew high, save the smaller varieties which skimmed along the watery stretches in the marsh and presented equally interesting sport to that of their larger cousins. Curlew and plover were plentiful but were seldom shot at as ducks were moving about constantly, and none cared to risk extra shooting for fear of scaring off the larger and better game.

At one period in the day, I had the pleasure of a bit of nice warm work, killing upwards of twenty birds in thirty minutes, and in some instances birds passed before I could re-load, though my cartridges were lying conveniently before me. Sport that, and I did enjoy it. When we figured up, I found that I had some forty odd ducks among which were five as fine canvasbacks as one could wish to see—sprig, spoonbills, brownheads, widgeon, butterballs, etc, but not a single mallard. They seemed to have removed entirely from that particular marsh. Each of our party did very well in the line of securing birds, though some of them, in fact nearly all, had the misfortune to fall into some one of the many treacherous cracks all too frequently found in the marsh.

The grass and tule cover them completely, and when least expecting it, down goes one or both feet into a pool of dirty water, frequently to a depth sufficient to render your hip boots of no service in keeping you dry.

The hunt was pleasurable to all participating, and whirling homeward each one expressed a desire to try it again some day.

The Fish Commission.

There has appeared some complaint against the Fish Commission because of the all-too-general and most deplorable slaughter of the game of this State in spite of the statutory provisions to the contrary. The Commission has been doing some good and effective work. They have not been trumpeting their achievements to the public, for such a course would not be conducive to the end sought—the enforcement of the law. This is the view of the Commission, but in this we cannot agree with them. We are inclined to think that if every arrest by them made of violators of the fish and game laws was published in every paper in the State, that it would have a salutary effect. "The guilty flee when no man pursueth," or words to that effect, is an old statement of a true fact, and we think it applies to such matters as appertain to the enforcement of the statue governing this question.

We do not believe in a still hunt. We would hunt the violators of the law with as musical a pack of hounds as could be selected for that purpose.

More men are governed by fear than are restrained by the prison bars or executed on the gallows.

This State is large, very large. The game districts are rough and mountainous. To detect and secure evidence sufficient to convict before the courts is no easy matter. A number of game wardens, who are true and earnest men, is essential to the protection of the game. Violations of the law we know are frequent; indeed, of almost daily occurrence, but we are satisfied that the present Fish Commission is composed of earnest, faithful men whose earnest desire is to enforce the law in every particular. We are not informed of the number of convictions secured under the present rule, but we have sufficient facts before us to warrant the statement that of the many cases pushed to trial on the charge of violating the fish and game laws, that a remarkable percentage of convictions have been secured, showing that the Commission is careful in its work, and are husbanding its recourses that they may be enabled to do some effective work during the period until the next legislature shall meet and a further allowance made whereby the work of enforcing the laws may be properly carried on.

It is strange, indeed, that our citizens generally and the several local civil officers of the districts wherein the majority of the game is to be found in particular, seem to have no regard for their duties either as good citizens or as officials in this respect.

The laxity of our laws and their enforcement has become a by-word in the mouths of most of the other nations of the world. This seems to be unavoidable when we look at the facts. The infringement of the laws—nay, the almost utter disregard shown them by many of our people—is a matter to awaken serious thought, and such thought should awaken an increased amount of activity and vigilance on the part of all our civil officers. Let the laws be enforced. In the light of all these facts it may easily be understood that the work of the Fish Commission is not an easy one. The honors bestowed can scarcely be said to compensate for the energy expended, but notwithstanding all this we believe that the present Commission will show a balance sheet at the end of their term of office, even if they should not be inclined to give it to the public by peacemeal, that will show a series of credits which will, in a large degree, exceed the expenditures.

A Word From Mr. Belmont.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—In your recent issues you take occasion to comment editorially upon an alleged article written in the New York Morning Advertiser, in which matters of the American Kennel Club are said to have been criticised, and alleging interviews with Mr. Vredenburgh and myself, as well as referring to strictures upon the management of the club by Mr. Peshall. I have no knowledge as to whether the interview referred to with Mr. Vredenburgh is true or false, but all that refers to me and what I am represented as saying is most unqualifiedly so. You will admit, therefore, that you have done me a serious injustice when I tell you that I do not entertain the feelings you attribute to me at all, and no one from the Advertiser visited me to my recollection.

While I am very busy at my office daily and not always at leisure to receive reporters, who I may say are not at all unfrequent visitors on many subjects other than the affairs of the A. K. C., I always receive them when possible, and most courteously, and recognizing to its fullest extent the importance of the press, I do not hesitate to give them any information at my command.

Were I guilty of the narrow and un-American conduct you attribute to me I should most certainly consider myself meriting the harsh things you say. I have said before, and say now, that I am at all times most ready to listen to and confer with anyone interested in dogs, whether he be officer, delegate, member of the A. K. C. directly or through a club, or an individual without club affiliation. I am not unapproachable at all, excepting inasfar as my very much occupied time restricts me. Even were I so and were the A. K. C. controlled by a clique so unpopular and detrimental to dog interests as you imply, the clubs throughout the country can between one quarterly meeting and another, through a change of instructions to their delegates, right any wrongs they deem advisable, and could, without any difficulty whatsoever, secure the resignation of the officers and change of management. But it must of necessity arise from a general wish, and cannot be effected at the instance of a few who have felt the heel of the A. K. C. for their wrong doings. The officers do and can only act through the power and dictation of the club as expressed through its delegates.

So thoroughly a representative institution as the A. K. C. has very quick and effective means of redress against arrogant or hot-headed officers who exceed their powers. I think I voice the sentiments of any and all officers and employees of the club, whether serving gratuitously or for pay, in courting most openly and publicly a review of all their acts, and their condemnation, if necessary, and request that you circulate this statement as widely as lies in your power.

I believe dog men are most heartily tired of Mr. Peshall's efforts at persecution of the A. K. C. and notoriety in the press, and do not desire to see me or any of the officers rushing into print to debate all the wild accusations and propositions he and his friends indulge in.

The proposition to reduce registration fees and cut off sources of revenue for the sake of lightening the tax they impose in various ways on dog men is good debatable ground, and should be discussed on its merits, and not be distorted and made to serve as a vehicle for personal warfare. It must be borne in mind, however, that whether mistaken or not, the officers and managers are trying to secure for the A. K. C. a revenue with the sole object, and no other, of furnishing dog men with an effective and thoroughly solvent and properly equipped organization to conduct their affairs. I firmly believe, moreover, that the majority of dog men throughout the United States—and it is not un-American to hold that the majority shall dictate—do not desire to have their central organization threatened with the menace of insolvency, for I do not care what useful principle the A. K. C. does or may represent, or who the men are who may be elected delegates and officers, it cannot run its appointed journey without money any more than the best-manned and equipped ocean greyhound can cross the Atlantic without coal.

I believe the present charges for registration and dues of associate members are only properly adequate for the maintenance of the A. K. C. as a useful creation of the dog men of the country. It is certainly in their power to change anything they like, and if it is desirable, then let those who believe in changes agitate the question and give good and sufficient reasons for a change. To harp on the very much-worn cry of "clique" to the intelligent men who own and breed dogs throughout the United States, and who are well aware that they have but to turn their hand over and out goes the clique, and indulge in nothing but personal references, is only calculated to create discord and bring no remedy. If the method is not good, fight that; men are easily found, while a good method requires thought and work. The delegates and officers have given both. The dog men want arguments and suggestions which will instruct and improve, and no one is better equipped than you, Mr. Editor, to present them. I remain very respectfully yours,

August Belmont,
President American Kennel Club.

The following is from the Ventura Free Press: Ramon Ortega lassoed a big black bear yesterday and choked it to death. He is the most noted bear hunter in southern California, and several days ago, when he began to lose some of his stock on his ranch at the head of the Sespe some fifty miles from Ventura, he started out to hunt for the thief. Early yesterday morning he discovered him in the shape of the bear, in a little narrow canon, and although without firearms, so soon as he caught sight of the monster he spurred up his horse and gave chase. It was a short race, for as soon as distance would permit, his lasso went circling about the head of the bear and caught him about the neck. A few dexterous turns of the horse soon choked the life out of the animal, and Ortega, as a trophy, cut off one of his paws and brought it to town with him. It measured seven inches across and eleven inches in length. He tells as a fact that in 1864 he and his brother killed fifty-six bears in one month about the regions where Bardsdale, Ventura county, is now laid out, and these were all killed the same way as the one yesterday.

Six years ago, while crossing the trail with his ten-year-old son, to this same ranch, he came face to face with a she grizzly and her two nearly grown cubs. He was armed with a Winchester, but had only five cartridges at hand. He succeeded in killing the three bears with the five balls, the last of which was sent through the enraged mother's heart as she reared to embrace Ortega's son, who had been dismounted by his frightened horse.

In all the valleys, save those of the upper mountains, winter, such as is known over the major portion of the States never intrudes. Here there is no white mantle to clothe the earth. No parean wreaths festoon the trees and shrubs and duplicate in crystal form all things of the outer and material world.

Of course the wind, at times is chilling, but only for a few hours at a time; and there the bright sunshine hastens to restore the comfort of warmth and cheer.

The lakes and streams are unfettered and the latter murmur on and on with all of springtimes freedom, yet with a more moderate flow for the upper mountain regions retain much of the clouds bestowal, for there the breath of Boreas turns their erst while mists to powdery flakes which weave over the mountain's brow a fleecy turban, winding the same about their heads with more than Turkish grace.

No mournful sound comes from the bosoms of the lakes; their cerulean mirrors reflect with striking faithfulness the flight of clouds and birds across the deep blue arching of the sky for a back-ground.

Few trees found here are leafless for most of those indigenous, are of the coniferous variety while the long rows of encalyptus cling tenaciously to their long leaves, now curling in their age, not unsuggestive of the efforts of the ancient maiden to appear to retain something of her youthfulness by curling her erstwhile straightened tresses.

To hunt all day with comfort, only known in New England for about one month in the year is a pleasure and advantage which every sportsmen can appreciate.

An exchange presents the following:

"A dog belonging to a French lady was seen the other day positively attired in stockings and some brown material several times darker than its natural coat, and to these stockings were attached leather soles, in which the pampered spaniel went pattering and clattering along the payment. The stockings came half way up its legs, and were fastened with elastic bands."

How shockingly vulgar! The idea! sending out the little beauty dressed only in stockings! Terrible, isn't it? It happened in Paris, probably, and that accounts for it.

Giulio Valensin has just returned from England where among other valuable animals that he secured was a fine Scotch collie and a pair of smooth St. Bernards of the very first blood. We shall take occasion to refer to them more fully later on.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Mr. T. J. Pinder, of 134 Sutter Street, offers for sale some excellent Irish water spaniel puppies. They are by King Marsh out of Nora P. and are beyond doubt of very superior quality.

Mr. E. K. Meyer, of Petaluma, has a Great Dane puppy, three months old which measures at the shoulders 20½ inches and weighes 47 pounds. Rather a phenomenal one, we should say.

The New Year.

A glorious year in the history of California, so far as it relates to the turf, has just waned. With its closing we can only drop a sigh that no more trotting records can be secured by our horses, for we possess every one worth having save the race record, the property at present of Miss Nancy Hanks. To the possessors of the three breeding theories—trotting-bred trotters, thoroughbred dams and thoroughbred second dams we say, "Shake hands, boys! It's a draw, and a good, hard-fought battle."

The name of Arion, when mentioned to the trotting purists, causes an angelic smile to chase over the face of this large class of gentlemen like the sunlight on a saucepan in some elevated place. When Palo Alto, 2:08¾, is the theme of the "sustaining thoroughbred blood in the trotter" advocate both eyes wink wisely and say unmistakably: "What will Mother Trotting Blood do now? How can they beat 'em?" And when the eye of the "thoroughbred second dam for trotters" believer rests upon the title, "Queen Sunol, 2:08¼," and he thinks of his opponents, his laughter floats merrily out upon the air and grates upon the ear of his old foes across the way. The records to the believers in the three theories therefore give a good-sized grain of comfort, and there is room for all. Let not your discussions carry you away, friends, but shake hands over the bloody chasm and breed this bright New Year in the lines than been tried and not found wanting. Experiment less, throw petty jealousies to the winds, and unite in a solid little army with the one idea in view—that of improving the California trotter and at the same time placing his fame so high on Fame's pinnacle that our friends across the Rockies will have to be content with a seat several inches below the representatives of this land of the Golden Gait. It can be done. We have the horses and the best climate to develop them on the face of earth. The ideas of our breeders have expanded wonderfully under the lessons of the past season, and let us say with truth one year from to-day: "Great as 1891 was for the fame of California, the work of 1892 sheds a halo of glory that will never be dispersed."

In the programme of the Capital Turf and Driving Club, of Sacramento, Cal., there is an error which we desire to correct In the running stakes for two and three-year-olds (entries to close February 1, 1892) the conditions should read: "Five to enter, three to start," to get added money, in place of "five to start."

The Wilkes Family in the Harem.

In another column of this journal is a list of fillies recently purchased by G. Valensin in the East, which he intends to have developed and breed to that sire of speed Sidney, 2:19¼. The union of Wilkes blood with that of all other strains has heretofore proved beneficial. As many horsemen have been very slow to realize its good effects in this State, it would repay them to pick up a catalogue of any breeding farm in the Eastern States and see what the sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters of the mighty George Wilkes are doing.

The idea has always been prevalent among our leading breeders, however, that the Wilkes blood is most valuable, but with the exception of about four large farms, no steps were ever taken to bring any representatives of it here. The commingling of the improving blood of George Wilkes with Electioneer and Nutwood has worked wonders. Why will it not do the same for the Sidney, The Moor, the Steinway, the Patchen and other families that are recognized as wholly Californian?

We have one of the greatest sons of the old horse in America in this State, and we know he has made a name for himself as a trotter and a sire that every Californian should be proud of. He is still in the enjoyment of good health, and occupies a stall near those of his sons, Sable Wilkes, Rupee and Regal Wilkes. One peculiarity about his colts is that after they have been handled a little, and then turned out, they prove much faster when taken up, showing that the trot is natural with them, consequently, all the labor of weighting, balancing and hobbling is entirely dispensed with. Every horseman who has ever looked at Guy Wilkes and his progeny at the San Mateo Stock Farm comes away fully determined to get one of the family if possible

Mambrino Wilkes (sire of Balkan 2:15), another son of George Wilkes, is now placed at the head of the Gerhard Lang farm, of Buffalo, New York. He left behind him in California a family of handsome, intelligent and speedy trotters. His sons and daughters have been bred to our fashionable California families, and they have all proved superior trotters. In ten years they will be considered of more value then they are to-day.

The Oakwood Park Stock Farm (formerly called the Cook Farm) has a royally-bred grandson of George Wilkes, no other than a son of the great progenitor of speed, Red Wilkes. He will prove a valuable sire to strengthen the weak spots in many a family.

All the above mentioned have plenty of the great leavening blood of Mambrino, and from the very nature of such a combination they must prove valuable.

The new infusion of Wilkes blood brought through the representatives to be mated with the Sidney strain will add more lustre to Mr. Valensin's judgment as a breeder.

Now let the good work go on. The Hobart Farm is getting good Wilkes blood. Let us see Palo Alto send a number of its youngsters east, that will soon be inbreeding if left here, and get a number of Wilkes colts and fillies to replace them not as an "outcross," but as an "incross" for speed and gameness. The Pleasanton Stock Farm and the Souther Farm might also add a number. L. U. Shippee's Stock Farm would profit by an infusion of Wilkes blood too. Rancho del Paso is about to have a few we believe.

All of the little or small breeders have representasives of the Wilkes family, and would not be without them. Though they may be only living in moderate circumstances and carrying on the business of breeding to a limited extent, they never feel as if they have losing capital invested in any of the grandaughters of George Wilkes.

Clark's Horse Review, in its Chrismas number, has an article on this horse which should find its way into every household in the land. As we have not space to publish it in this issue, we will merely give the recapitulation and believe there is a sermon in the figures and a benediction in the total for all who have ever taken an interest in this great family.

The Silver Lining.

The great improvement in the trotting horse industry and the amount of interest that is being taken in its spread can be seen by the amount of judicious advertising that is being done by all the leading stock farms and the number and character of the turf journals that are being published in the leading cities of the United States. The holiday editions that have been issued by these great disseminators of equine knowledge compare favorably with any other class journals published. There are instructive articles, anecdotes, historical facts, columns of information and illustrations of horses that have earned reputations as sires or trotters of note, and broodmares that have become famous through their produce. Many of the articles written on topics of the day are by leading lawyers, physicians, statesmen and farmers whose love for the horse is born in them, and to speak, to read, and to write about that "weakness" is always a pleasure.

At the late convention held in the East of our two associations, some of the representative men of the nation took part and proved that the day is fast approaching when such a thing as "ringing" will be almost considered as bad as horse-stealing, for nothing can be more repugnant to all classes of horsemen than the jobbery that for years dominated many of the greatest of trotting events of the last decade. The class of men who are in our National and American Associations are of the right caliber intellectually, and their sense of justice will not permit of anything that will reflect dishonor upon them.

The trotting horse industry is in a healthier condition now than it has ever been, and with the promises made by the leading journals and the work planned by our prominent breeders for the successful carrying on of its affairs, we have every reason to feel hopeful.

Founding Great Families of Trotters.

Many students of the breeding question believe that the equals of Electioneer and George Wilkes as sires of speedy trotters are not to be seen once in a century, and base such belief on the history of the thoroughbred producers of extreme speed. There may be, as claimed, many cases where grandsons of great sires in the male line were not such splendid factors in the stud, but again there are other cases to be cited showing this theory to be fallacious. In this country Lexington was a far greater progenitor than his grandsire, Timoleon—in fact, they are hardly to be compared in the same breath. St Blaise is a better sire than his grandsire, the famous Newminster, age taken into consideration, as is St. Simon, the leader in England this year, greater than Vedette, his good grandsire. Leamington was more successful than his grandsire in the male line, and great as Lexington was we expect to see El Rio Rey, Emperor of Norfolk or some other grandson overshadow him. The study of the problem of breeding fast trotters is getting to be a most interesting one, and the dark clouds of ignorance which hovered over the trotting world for such a long time are fleeting before the winds of knowledge and the lightning of intelligence.

Hambletonian 10 has a number of sons that far overshadow their sire as speed-producers, and the male line of Hambletonian appears to be such a vigorous one that we feel safe in saying that at least a dozen of "the old horse's" grandsons will soon have a longer list of 2:30 performers gracing the race tracks of this country. Alcantara, Onward, Anteeo, Simmons, Richards' Elector, Red Wilkes, Pilot Medium, Guy Wilkes, and many other grandsons of Hambletonian 10 are far ahead of Rysdyk's horse when age is taken into consideration, and not one of them had a better opportunity than their grandsire in the stud. As far as that is concerned, wonderful as was Electioneer, Richards' Elector and Anteeo have more representatives in the enchanted enclosure at their age than did their sire, one hundred of whose produce have gone into the list to date. Therefore, it is but reasonable to presume that any of the horses we have named above living to the age of Electioneer (twenty-two) should sire over one hundred "list" animals. Hambletonian 10, Electioneer's sire, lacked less than two months of reaching twenty-seven years, had 1,930 mares bred to him, netting 1,333 foals, and yet sired but forty-one 2:30 trotters. With what is known of breeding now, it would indeed be considered a poor horse that would not get more than forty-one 2:30 trotters if given the opportunity that Hambletonian 10 had.

Therefore, looking at matters in their true light, the breeders of to day with young stallions of the Wilkes, Electioneer, Nutwood, Patchen or other good families can but be encouraged at the outlook and say with truth: "Certainly my horse can do as well as Hambletonian 10 in the stud (of whom so much has been said). Maybe the youngster will prove another George Wilkes or Electioneer. Who knows? He is as well-bred, and we know more to-day about 'good nicks' than did the breeders of Hambletonian 10's time."

Another thing is quite noticeable. The attention given a trotting horse is as a general thing far better than that given the thoroughbred, for trotting-horse trainers, as a class, are more intelligent and painstaking. With the large increase in stakes for trotters and the increased interest in the light-harness horse in this and other countries, the future for the sensible, up-with-the-times breeder of such animals is bright in the extreme.

James Dustin of Palo Alto.

On Wednesday, Ariel Lathrop appointed this well-known trainer and driver to take charge of the horses in training at Palo Alto, in fact to carry on the good work commenced by Charles Marvin, who has assumed charge of Miller & Sibley's horses at the Prospect Hill Stock Farm, Franklin, Pennsylvania. Every horseman in California who hears of Mr. Dustin's appointment will be anxious to extend their congratulations. Since he arrived in California, not quite four years ago, he has had "ups and downs," but his reputation as a horseman has never been tarnished, nor has anyone ever doubted his ability as a reinsman and conditioner. He has devoted his life in the pursuit of knowledge that would be of use to him in the handling of trotters, and among trainers and drivers in the East he held a high position before he visited this Coast with Monroe Salisbury. A contemporary published an item some three weeks ago to the effect that he was going to Chicago, and the turf journals throughout the East all had words of kindness.

From their tone a hearty welcome was in store for him. Mr. Dustin denied the story of his departure in the columns of this journal. We believe that the era of phenomenal trotting has just dawned. Let us hope that Mr. Dustin will gain as great fame as his predecessor in his chosen calling, and when the sunset of life settles down upon him, may he be able to say: "I have done my best for Palo Alto and California, and contributed not a little toward making the Golden State the Mecca toward which the eyes of the horsemen of the whole world have turned."

That Mr. Dustin is a hard and conscientious worker in the field of developing and conditioning trotters is known to all who have watched him, and as a driver of races he has had a world of experience. It was Dustin who trained Charley Ford, the great old gray campaigner of the early eighties, Maxey Cobb, Lee and others known from one end of the country to the other, and Marvin's mantle has undoubtedly fallen on worthy shoulders. The work at Palo Alto during the year which has just been born will now go on with renewed zeal, and if we are to judge by its past, how much more glorious must its future be?

A Good Idea.

A number of racing associations at the East, some making a specialty of trotting and some of running races, have adopted a system which is meeting with great success. In stakes where the entrance fees are $100, only $5 to $10 accompanies the entry, the balance for starters. In this way, when a breeder or owner makes an entry and the animal is not in racing shape, $10 is the largest sum he can be out on the proposition. With the success this plan is meeting with at Latonia, Nasbville, and other places, that the associations all over the country will soon adopt it goes without saying. Nothing has caused as much trouble as unpaid forfeits, and the failure of associations to secure the sums due to winning owners has driven many a good man from the industry of racing horses. The plan outlined above seems to work out the vexed problem to a nicety, and the only wonder is that it was not thought of several years ago.

The Horseman, of Chicago, in its Christmas edition, re-prints a splendid piece of poetry entitled "A Southern Race Fifty years Ago." It was written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN by G. B. Robertson, of Yreka, Cal., and appeared in our issue of June 13, 1891. It is not often that a paper is favored with such a gem of poesy, and we do not think it fair that the author's identity should be buried under the pseudonym of "Anonymous," for "Mr. Anonymous" had nothing to do with this poem. It is not right that in a piece of such merit, and written such a short time ago, the writer's name should be lost sight of, and we trust that our esteemed contemporary will give credit where credit is due, at least in this particular instance.

Balkan 2:15.

Perhaps the most surprising event of the year to all horsemen except the owner and trainer of this horse was the ease with which he trotted to the above record. Everyone acknowledged that he might lower his record to 2:25, but to still further decrease it ten seconds was looked upon as marvellous. To show how rapidly such a performance wins many friends, it is only necessary to say that there are hundreds willing to wager that Balkan can lower this mark and can trot a two-mile race as fast as any horse that has appeared on the turf.

In the resume published in the advertisement of this stallion a typographical error occurs, and as the page containing it has gone to press we herewith present the statement as it should be: "Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed endurances and unceptionally fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000, and his service fee is offered at $200.

How the Old Trainer Died.

Three evenings before the race—the crescent moon hung low,
A white mist glided across the track while the distant frog sang low;
A sleepy cock crowed twice and a hound sent up his bay,
Then silence lay heavy across the row where the sleeping trotters lay.

Bay Prince, of the arched neck, slept still as a babe in its bed,
While his grizzled-haired trainer slept by his side, an old saddle under his head.
He guarded the prince of the stud, a prince of a noble race,
Whose sires nor dams had never seen the flag drop in their face.

The face of a thief as he enters still, in his hand a syringe small,
He has reached the Prince's side, who makes a sleepy lunge,
Then a snort of rage and he's on his feet in one tremendous plunge.

But the trainer is up as quick, and he mades a sudden bound,
With his wrinkled hands at the dastard's throat, then they both roll on the ground,
But the trainer is stiff and old, there's the gleam of a slender knife;
The Prince stands frozen, for into his straw there dribbles a human life.

Then oh, how the good horse cries! and it wakes the trainers all,
For a terrible thing in the dead of night is the frightened stallion's call;
Then they laid him gently down with the saddle under his head,
And many a brave man's eyes were wet, for they knew he was almost dead.

"I've driven my last race, boys," and the old man's eyes grew dim,
"And I tell you, now, with my dying breath, nothing can win from him;
Come and bid me good-bye, old boy, you're the finest in all the land,
You'll win, hands down," then his old voice broke, "with the lines in another's hand."

The stallion heard and knew, for he gave a hollow moan,
As he muzzled the breast of the dying man, for he knew he was left alone.
Thus the old friends said good-bye in the stable rough and bare,
And the men who stood in the stall that night believed there were two souls there.

"Boys, bury me inside the rail, as near to the wire's you can,
For all that the preachers may say or tell about any other land,
The day of the race I'll be right there, old boy, right by your side,
And I'll know your step and I'll know you've won—you've won"—and the old man died.

GEO. COMSTOCK BAKER, in American Trotter.

Souther Stock Farm.

If progressiveness in all that pertains to breeding, training and improving the trotter is looked for we believe that the only birthplace of new ideas, the home of well-bred horses, colts and fillies and the training school of fast youngsters is to be found at the Souther Farm. There are two Electioneers there that are hard to equal anywhere. One of them is El Benton, out of Nellie Benton, trial 2:18, by Gen. Benton; second dam Norma, dam of Norval, 2 17¼, etc., and the other is Glen Fortune out of Glenne by Messenger Duroc, second dam Glenella out of the famous Green Mountain Maid. Besides these two Mr. Tompkins also has Figaro by Hambletonian 725, Jester D. by Almont 33 and Moorland by the Grand Moor. All these will stand for public service this year. The training department is under the supervision of a competent trainer, and the curing of faults in the action of trotters is made a specialty. Mr. Tompkins is the patentee of the celebrated Souther Farm rasp for leveling the feet of horses. This useful invention is giving universal satisfaction wherever used. Read the advertisemants in this issue.

Oakwood Park Stock Farm.

This is the name adopted for the well-known Cook Farm. The advertisement of the stallions Steinway 2:25¾, Chas. Derby 2:20, Prince Red and Wildo, that are to stand there for the season of 1892, makes its first appearance in the columns of this journal to-day. It is complete in itself and gives a brief description oi what Steinway has done and the records made by himself and son while on the turf; the large stallion Prince Red, son of the great Red Wilkes, and the stallion Wildo with them form a brilliant quartette. The attendance given mares sent sent there cannot be excelled and a visit to this famous farm will convince anyone that for climate, pasturage and accommodations there are few to equal it in the United States. Careful and competent men are in charge:

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name an address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof o good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

To L. M. L., Martinez, Cal.—J. B. Chase, of this city, raised King Philip. He was sired by Whipple's Hambletonian, dam was said to be by imported Lawyer. He was taken to the Sandwich Islands several years ago.

To T. P., Plainsbury, Cal.—Write to Joseph Neal, Pleasanton, Cal.

J. A. L., Watsonville, Cal.—The curves of a mile track should contain 2,138.76 feet, (three feet from the inside fence), and each of the stretches 1,570 62 feet, which, added together, make a grand total of 5,280 feet, or 1,760 yards. Commencing in front of the point where the grand stand should be situated, you lay off a straight line of 1,655.52 feet from the wire to the center of the proposed curve. The little loop is generally about 200 feet at its widest point. Make it about 125 yards to the wire. This should give ample room for scoring the horses. The turns should be thrown up one and one-quarter inches to the foot.

To C. S. N., San Francisco.—I state for the benefit of C. S. N., San Francisco, that A. T. Stewart 1558, sired Lady Stewart, the dam of Addie E., record 2:22¼, got at Chico. C. K. RAGAN, Hanford, Cal.

To M. F. T., Alameda, Cal.—An answer to the question about the breeding of the horse Confidence, I bred him and raised him. He was sired by Walnut Bark, his dam was by a horse called Jo Johnston, sired by Post Boy, his dam supposed to be thoroughbred, brought to this country by the same parties that brought Pontiac here. The mare Cricket I don't know anything about

JOHN BORGEMAN, Hanford, Cal.

J. W. D., Oakdale, Cal.—Please inform a subscriber of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, through the columns of your valuable paper: 1. The pedigree of Fannie Howard. 2. The pedigree of Top Gallant. Answer.—1 Fanny Howard was by Illinois Meboc, dam Fanny Howard, by imp Biddlesworth; second dam Isabel, by Doublehead. 2. Top Gallant, now owned by Matt Storn, is by imp. Mariner, dam Lady Clare, by Owen Dale.

On looking through the answers to correspondents, I came across an inquiry, as to what had become of Clara E., by Rufus O., dam Taps, by the Duke of Brunswick. I will say to those making inquiry that I bought her at the sale known as the Underhill sale, and I still own her, and have a very fine stud colt out of her by Mambrino Wilkes, and the mare is in foal again to Magester, by Sterling

R. D. LEDGETT, San Francisco, Cal.

H. H. H., Visalia, Cal.—Please give pedigree of the dam of Peregrine and Joe Harding, Answer.—Irene Harding is the dam of the two horses you mention. She is by Jack Malone (son of Lexington), dam Macaria, imp. Glencoe, third dam imp. Heads or Tails, by Lottery, etc.

W. E. C., Moscow, Cal.—Give the breeding of Overland, the horse that L. J. Rose once owned. Answer.—Overland was by Bald Chief (Stevens') dam Madam Botts, by John M. Botts, son of Spaulding's Abdallah.

V R. E., El Paso de Robles, Cal.—We want a race track here, have good climate and good location in edge of town, but the width of the figure eight—that is the diameter of the widest part, is only 1,000 feet from out to out instead of 1240, as, in the regular kite-shaped track. Now by elongating would it answer the purpose of a first-rate track? Your opinion is asked for by the leading citizens of Paso Robles. Answer.—We think it would do very well, provided you turew up the turns one and one-half inches to the foot.

Ed Fay is a bay gelding by Clarisman Patchen, dam by Hambletonian 725. He got his record of 2 28¾ on the 21st of August, 1890.

A. E. D., Reno, Nev.—What is the pedigree of Robert Bonner, by Chieftain? Answer—Write to M. F. Noyes & Co., Stockton, Cal., was owned Chieftain. We find no trace of the horse.

T. W. B., San Jose.—Please state in your next issue how many 2:30 performers Nutwood has to his credit, also how many of them have records of 2:20 or better Answer—Seventy-seven. Seventeen of them have records of 2 20 or better.

To F. G. N., Santa Rosa, Cal.—Referring to the query of F. G. N. Santa Rosa, Cal., will say that Wm. Conn, of San Bernardino, Cal., owned a brown stallion called Edwin Booth. He was by George M Patchen 3d, and his dam was called a thoroughbred. Consequently he is not standard Booth was ugly in temper and hideous in appearance, but he was a horse of great quality He was a permanent cripple when I knew him, and in that condition could go in about 2:40. He was a very fast walker. This horse and all his stock have been semi-neglected, and he died in 1885. His history reminds me of the story of old Abdallah 1. This Edwin Booth made a season or more in the central part of the State. Respectfully, G. M. FRANK, San Luis Obispo, Cal.

T. W., City.—Can anyone inform us where Capri, Jim Lick and Homer were bred and where they now are, if living?

Constant Reader, Stockton.—Will you please state in the next issue of your paper when and where Elector 2,170 (Richards') got his record of 2:31, as given in Wallace's Year Book, whether he record was made in a race or against time, and by whom he was driven. Answer—If Elector 2,170, got this record we fail to find where he did the work. Write to L. R. Richards, Grayson, Cal.

I. L., San Francisco.—I would like to know the breeding of Belle Alta, also if you know of any mare by him known as Lillie M., her dam supposed to be Puss, by Langford. Answer—Bell Alta was by Williamson's Belmont out of the Mendenhall mare. We do not know of any such mare.

C. W. W., Santa Monica, Cal. How many has Stamboul got in the 2:30 list? 2. How many has L. J. Rose's Harvester got in the 2.30 list? 3. What was Harvester's dam? Give her breeding. 4. Please explain how Alcyone can be the sire of McKinney when he died in 1884? Answer—1. Stamboul has three in the list. 2. None. 3. Harvest Queen, by Hambletonian 10, dam the Peter Dubois mare, by American Star 14; second dam by Abdallah 1. 4. Alcyone died in 1887, the year McKinney was foaled.

G. W. T., Stockton, Cal.—Please give me the pedigree of Falsetto, also the of Calanthus, two-year-old, by Falsetto, brought over here by Thomas H. Williams last fall. Answer—Falsetto is by Enquirer, dam Farfaletta, by imp. Australian; second dam Elkhorna, by Lexington; third dam Glencona, by imp. Glencoe, etc. Calanthus we cannot find in the stud book or Guide. Write to Thomas H. Williams.

L. W., Milton.—At the meeting of the Stanislaus Stockbreeders' Association held at Modesto December 25th and 26th, in the three-quarter-mile-dash there were four starters, to wit: Lib, Big Davis, Tom Dwyer and Comet. After scoring for a long time, Comet acting badly, the horses were all under motion, Comet being behind. Her rider shouted "Let them go!" the flag dropped, and they got off to a pretty fair start in the following order: Lib first, Big Davis second, Tom Dwyer third and Comet last. They came under the wire: Lib first, Tom Dwyer second, Big Davis third and Comet last. The judges ordered the race run over again. I, as the owner of Lib, entered a written protest, claiming the race and the money according to the rules under which the race was run, I herewith enclose their programme of the meeting. What I want to know is, am I entitled to the race, or, in other words, is Lib the winner? An early winner in your valuable journal will greatly oblige an old subscriber. There was no claim of foul, only the Dwyer men made a kick because they said he did not get an even start By the way, he (Tom Dwyer) was the favorite in the pools. Answer—The judges have the right, when they see anything about a race that does not look exactly right, to declare it "no heat" and order the race run over again, and they can rule off offender or offenders besides. It seems to us that the only correct way is to abide by the decision of the judges, unless you have good grounds for believing that they were financially interested; in which case, if you have proof, you can appeal to the proper tribunal.

J. D. H., Tacoma, Wash.—1 Give breeding of grandam of Jefferson Mambrino 5206, and is he a sire of any in 2:32 list? By what horse was Kosciusko, the sire of Woodford, he being the sire of Woodbine, the dam of Woodford Mambrino 345; also give Kosciusko's dam if possible? 3 Has Norman Temple Jr. 619 any in the list, also Norman Temple, 4 Give breeding of and the dam of Norman Temple Jr. 619. Is the horse Tom Margrave a thoroughbred? If there is only one Tom Margrave, please give his breeding. Answer—The grandam of Jefferson Mambrino was given by Wallace as "a fine road mare," That is as far as he goes. He has not sired a 2:30 performer. 2. Kosciusko was a thoroughbred son of Shylark, and his dam was by St. Tammany. 3. They have sired no 2:30 performers. 4. Norman Temple 235 was by Norman 25, dam Madam Temple, the dam of Flora Temple. J. L. E., Rohnerville, Cal.—Can you or any of your readers assist me in identifying a horse that stood in Yolo county in the late fifties and called Old Rattler? He subsequently killed himself while playing in a corrall. What name is that horse known by now? What is known of his breeding, and could he trot any? Answer—The horse was by Biggart's Rattler, dam by Mars, and made a record of 2:35 on September 6, 1860, at Marysville, Cal., driven by Fred Werner. In November, 1858, he beat old St. Clair, 16 675 (pacer), for a $1300 stake. He also beat Glencoe Chief and Vermont at different times. He was called Werner's Rattler, and was the sire of Napa Rattler.

F K. L., Merced.—1. Give the breeding of Black Boy and record, if any, and is he registered; if so, what is his number? Has he any 2:30 performers? 2. Give breeding of Hambletonian King, his record, number of 2:30 performers, if any; is he standard and what is his number? 3. Is the enclosed card of Geo. S. Evans correct? Answer—Black Boy was got by McCracken's Blackhawk 767, dam Muggin's (dam of Sisson Girl, 2;28¾), by McKilty Messenger; second dam, Lady Brown, breeding not traced. Black Boy is registered number 2921. He has sired no 2:30 performers. 2. Hambletonian King was got by Florida 482, dam Olive Logan, by Logan, 127; second dam Kittie Clay, by Little Cassius 398. He has no 2:30 performerms to his credit, but is standard and registered number 2693. 3. We have no means of knowing. Write to Palo Alto Stock Farm.

The Christmas Kentucky Stock Farm comes to us replete with articles that have a freshness and originality about them that is most acceptable. The best of writers and artists have contributed to fill its columns, and it is with reluctance that one is compelled to lay it aside for another reading. The spirit of enterprise of our friends in "old Kaintuck" is most commendable, and these "speaking evidences" of the growth of the trotting horse industry in the Blue Grass regions is something that was undreamed of twenty years ago.

Since Miller & Sibley decided to sell some of their surplus Electioneer stock they have found many eager buyers, and within a few days have aggregated nearly $100,000.

A breeder that cannot recognize the merits of the various strains of blood and the good qualities of any animal, whether he owns it or not, will never make a success in the business.

Don't think because your neighbor has bought a stallion that he has been necessarily cheated and has bought a failure. Give the horse a chance to show by his progeny what he is.

Dave Hill Jr. has been registered number 17,139 in Volume XI under rule 4 of the standard. This will be pleasing news to a number of owners possessing some of this horse's sons and daughters.

Lazgard, one of the Fairview stallions and somewhat famous for his defeat of Hanover and Firenzi in 1887, is dead. He was seven years old, by Tom Ochiltree, out of imp. Dawdle, and a full brother to Sluggard.

As Nutwood mares are getting very costly, what is the matter with securing matrons by Nutbourne (full brother to Nutwood) to mate with sons of Electioneer? Our breeders will do well to think this matter over.

Pastime is justly prized by her owner, J. Shafter, of Marin This mare is the dam of Silky, 2:22½; Antevenio, by Antevolo; Secret, 3:03, as a yearling, and is now in foal to Leo Wilkes, full brother to Sable Wilkes, 2:18.

There is a large demand for trainers of ability and sobriety from all over the country. There seems to be increasing desire on the part of hundreds of owners to develop their horses, a fact which must be extremely gratifying to breeders.

Gen. Jackson, of Belle Meade stud, will breed his recent purchase, La Dansense, sister to Los Angeles, by Glenelg, out of La Polka, to Tremont, the cross being Virgil and Glenelg, which gave the world that grand mare Firenzi.

Don't go off into the next town or county to breed your mare if an equally good stallion of the same breed and style is owned on the next farm. You may own a stallion some day, and then you will need the patronage of your neighbors.

It is needless to add that the filly will be expected to win the great event.

William M. Murry, of Sacramento, with his eyes ever open to the work of securing coming "cracker jacks," has purchased of H. C. Judson, Wildidle Farm, Santa Clara County, the very promising two-year-old colt by Wildidle; dam Fedora IV; second dam, Lady Clare, by Norfolk; also a weanling by Wildidle, dam by Monday.

Trotting seems to have taken a firm hold in England. The Trotting Union of Great Britain has decided to institute a stud-book for trotters for the purpose of stimulating breeders. The members point to the increased interest in trotting and the fact that the Alexandria Stakes in 1889 were only £500, while this year they were £1,625.

The purity of trotting pedigrees is a matter that should have deep concern with all who have the care of equine genealogy at heart. So many are there that seem to live in false glory. So many are there that would steal the coronet of aristocratic blood. Few horses and few men stand the searching test. With both we must discriminate.

Will S. Barnes, of Lexington, Ky., has bought of Amos McCampbell, Louisville, the suberb horse Jim Gore, by Hindoo, dam Katie, by imp. Phaeton, for $8,000. Jim Gore was a great two-year-old, but broke down as a three-year-old after running second on the Kentucky Derby of 1887, and winning the Clark Stakes. He came in on three legs on the Derby.

A. H. Thomas, administrator of the estate of S. E. Hiskey, offers a splendid lot of trotting and pacing horses for sale, but all propositions looking to their purchase must be in the hands of the administrator not later than January 15, 1892. Inquiries should be made at 106 East Fourth street or at J. Willits', Santa Ana, Cal. For further particulars, see advertisement in another column.

In the matter of a mare's descendants Alma Mater, now owned at the Hobart Stock Farm, made a wonderful record in 1891. During the campaign just closed three of her sons were credited with performers that took records below 2:14, viz.: Allandorf, sire of Strong Boy, 2:12; Alcyone, sire of McKinney, 2:12½; Alcantara, sire of Nightingale, 2:13¾. Two of the three are four-year-olds.

As this gentleman has a number of other well bred young stallions at his well stocked farm, we heard that he would sell this grand-looking youngster.

F. A. Henrick, of Madison, Yolo County, Cal., has purchased the fast two-year-old trotter, Lucky B., of H. Hogoboom, the well-known Humboldt County owner and trainer. Don Monteith, bay horse, six years old, by Electioneer dam Mamie C., by imp. Hercules, trotted in 2:29½ at Point Breeze Park, Philadelphia, on the 19th of December, making an even 100 in the "list" to the credit of the immortal sire, Electioneer. (thoroughbred), now goes into the Great Broodmare Table.

A. McFayden and W. H. Underhill, of Santa Rosa, have decided to cast their chances in the business world of San Francisco, the great Western metropolis, and have accordingly purchased a livery stable on Golden Gate avenue. These gentleman have many friends in Santa Rosa, where they have been in the livery and blooded stock business for many years, and all hope they will be successful in their bay city business venture.

An English writer says: "A stallion should be so trained that he can be taken out in any company or driven on the road without squealing and prancing to show that he is a stallion. Stable manners and road manners can be taught to a horse as well as to a child. What he needs to be taught is that he is a horse, and should act like a sensible, tractable one. This can be done by his keeper having constantly before his mind this idea—that he needs to use all his faculties or the horse will beat him thinking."

A horse jockey in Aroostook County Me., repented of his sharp practices, joined the church, and announced that, if he had taken unfair advantage of any one in a horse trade he would be glad to square things by paying the difference in cash. It was scarcely daylight the next morning when a neighbor, who considered he had been "roasted" in a trade with the newly-coverted jockey, made his appearance at the latter's door, remarking that he had "come early to avoid the rush." The jockey promptly settled the case.

It should be the policy of a man who raises a horse to get as much for him as possible, and it will pay every man who has a horse to sell to fit him especially to please the buyer. The majority do not study the matter of selling horses advantageously, and in consequence of this the man who does is in a measure able to avoid their competition and to place his produce in a more commanding position. Then, too, the chances of securing a buyer are much better with the more attractive horse. Few men can see merit "in the rough," but everybody will see it when in attractive form.

It is an easy matter to overload horses. The incentive to get through quickly and make as few trips as possible often prompts drivers to load too heavily. The danger in this is in ruining the constitutions of ambitious horses, or more yet, making them balky. Very few horses are naturally balky. They generally acquire this aggravating habit through the fault of those handling them. Light loads and more trips is a good motto, especially when you have young horses. Study your teams and your roads. One hard pull on a road is enough excuse for careful loading.

Mr. Sim Buford, of Napa, Cal., recently sold a jack imported from Italy to W. N. Winters, of Crow's Landing, for $700. The exile from the land of macaroni and music is said to have a powerful baritone voice, cultivated under the rooftrees of some of the best old (and young) masters of his native land, and his register, both high and low, is declared to have been the envy of fish peddlers from far and near, and of the leading comedian of the Opera Comique, at Rome, who several times tried to assassinate the noble son that some other prize jack built. Hence, the coming to America of this artist.

It is nearly a year ago now that Mr. Quimby, looking at his handsome brown stallion, Phallamont Boy, said to John Sawyer, his trainer, "John, if you will put him in the list this year, I will give you a suit of clothes." Phallamont went into the list all right, and one of Mr. Sawyer's Christmas gifts was Mr. Quimby's fulfillment of his promise and a pleasant word from him about how he appreciated "Honest John's" faithfulness and reliability. Sawyer says he was much pleased to be able to put Phallamont Boy in the list, and that he will be as good a horse in his class next season as any on the Pacific Coast.

Old Driver, 2:19½, has finished his last race. The grim shadow has overtaken him down the course of time. Gallant old warrior, in his time he won 157 heats in 2:30 or better. We saw his fight at Prospect Park, L. I., when he got his mark, and compelled Wedgewood to make the best fight which he ever did. It was said at one time that he was away on a ringing tour. Geo. Leavitt, who owned him at the time of his death, and who knew of him and his ownership for years, says he will give anyone $100 to prove he ever started out of his class or under any other name than Driver. He was the boss of the road in Calais, Me., last winter, and that means that he was a fast sleigh horse, for down there are some which can go an awful clip on the snow.—Spirit of the Hub.

Hereafter when horses are sent to Stockton to be speeded over the kite-shaped track the owners will have to pay not only $10 for each start, but stable rent as well, and each driver will have to pay $10 for the season. These rules will be enforced against home people also, and no man can henceforth drive over either of the two tracks for pleasure unless he pays $10 a season for the pleasure.

Dan McCarty, "The Only Daniel," has again appeared in front. He went to Lodi last week and purchased Dexter Prince and eight of the best broodmares that L. M. Morse had. We did try to keep tally on the number of stallions Dan has, but we confess he makes us quit counting. He went to Pleasanton last week, and after seeing a young Director trot quarters in 35 seconds offered a figure for him that has set the owner busy calculating whether to take the offer or let the young trotter go East and come home with a record as fast as Margaret S. Dan has a whole farm full of royal-bred mares, colts and fillies, and says he is "done buying, and will pay any man a hundred that will catch him buying any more," but somehow or somewhere we heard him make this speech about two months ago.

The brown stallion Bronze Hal, recently arrived at Ewell Farm, Columbia, Tenn., having been shipped in by his owner, Mr. Colin Cameron, of San Gabriel Ranch, Ariz., to be broken and developed. Bronze Hal is own brother to Prince Hal, 2:16¼, and the experiment about to be tried with him is a rather interesting one. Mr. Cameron bought him as a yearling of his breeder, Captain M. C. Campbell, and carried him to Arizona, where he has been for the last six years, turned out on the ranch with a select band of mares. When taken up to ship East, he had never been ridden nor driven, although he showed a great turn of speed in pasture. He reached Ewell Farm early in November, is driving nicely, and takes kindly to his new quarters. Should he develop anything like the speed of his brother, the case will be unique.

Says an Indiana horseman about feeding: "I have a young horse, weight less than 1,000 pounds; is sound, yet a sluggish traveler ordinarily. Months ago a neighbor told me that I fed him too much hay. I replied that I thought not; that he got only half as much as my other horses. Lately I discovered that he should not have one-quarter as much. It came about thus: My oats having been all fed, I was buying. Oats were dear, and ground oats suspiciously full of hulls. I reasoned whether I could not compound an honest and cheap ration from wheat, bran, oil meal or cottonseed meal for all my horses. I wrote Prof. E. W. Stewart. He replied that for roadsters, oil or cottonseed meal, two parts, corn meal two parts and bran six parts, with ten parts of cut hay or straw, all by weight, was about right for twenty-four hours in three feeds. Well, I stopped buying oats and have saved money. But I have done more—the particular horse mentioned has improved as a driver, and continues to improve. He looks and acts more ambitious, and has a better disposition.

M. Dubarry, of the Five-Points Hotel, at Redwood City thought he was pretty good at telling the age of horses until Tuesday, says the San Mateo Leader. He then discovered that he was not, and is twenty dollars poorer because of the discovery. He sat in front of his place of business, and a San Mateo man who usually drives one horse and leads another drove up to the watering trough. Dubarry examined the horse's mouth, and with a belief that he was right told the owner he was eight years old. The owner feigned ignorance of the subject and said he didn't think he was more than six. Dubarry offered to back his belief to the extent of $20. The wager was covered in a twinkling. The San Mateo man wanted to raise it to $80, but Dubarry became suspicious and declined. He wanted John Stafford to decide the age of the horse, which was agreed to. A messenger took the animal to the above gentleman and returned with his statement that a little past five years was his age. As Bob Turner took the stakes he drove off in search of someone else who wanted to tell him something about horses.

"Bluegrass," in writing of the thoroughbred two-year-olds of the year, says: "As compared to 1887, 1888, 1889 and 1890, the present year shows a very material advancement, the $5,000 two-year-old winners this season having won $485,513 more than their rivals in 1887, while they beat the record of 1888 $288,478, overtop that of 1889 $149,376, and lead 1890 $92,549 in money won. The forty-seven this year won 236 races to 167 won by their thirty-seven competitors in 1890, to 142 won by their thirty five rivals in 1889, to 104 captured by the twenty-eight lucky ones in 1889, and to 115 which fell to their twenty-two rivals in 1887. The biggest winner this year also leads, as His Highness has not only beaten the records of the years named, but he as well holds the world's record as a winning two-year-old, having won over $27,000 more than Donovan, the biggest winning two-year-old in the history of the English turf. In 1887 the largest winner was Emperor of Norfolk, with $37,020 to his credit, while in 1888 Proctor Knott was first, his winnings amounting to $69,780. In 1889 Chaos beat his rivals home by taking into camp $63,550, while last year Potomac with $78,460 won, led all his competitors."

Since the sale of Wallace's Register to the newly-organized American Trotting Register Association the breach has been widening between it and the National Association of Trotting Horse Breeders, who were in one sense sponsors for Mr. Wallace and his publications ever since the Register was started. At the recent annual meeting of the latter association held in New York City there was no little feeling against the controllers of the Register for their failure to take the old association into their councils, says The Horsemen. Indeed there is an agitation afoot for the establishment of a rival bureau of registration. One of the Executive Committee, who is a leader of the extremists, says he is not registering his stock, but is waiting for the National breeders to form such a bureau. He further said that the Hon. I. V. Baker, of Great Meadow Farm, Comstocks, N. Y., in registering some twenty head with the American Association, preferred to pay $40 in fees rather than take $100 worth of stock, which would entitle him to a reduced rate. The advocates of a new bureau, or rather the revival of the standard under the auspices of the National, contend that there is room for two associations, and both would find plenty of public support, just as two trotting associations are in a flourishing condition and extending their lines. They reason that the monopolists of a business will grow autocratic, just as the ex-Registrar did, and that a good, healthy rivalry is bound to serve the interests of breeders, small and great. Developments are predicted by the inner circle of the National Association of Breeders, and will receive plenty of attention on every hand.

Happy New Year!

James Dustin thinks he has about as nice a team as can be found on the Pacific Coast in Vidette, 2:23¼, and Niles Beauty, 2:25½. They are of about the same size and shape, and the veteran Dustin thinks they will trot in 2:25 sure as soon as the rains let up and the track is good.

H. H. Helman, of Visalia, Cal., has leased the Tom Kelley ranch, which has a good mile track within its precincts, and which Mr. H. expects to keep in first-class trim. The gates of the Visalia race course were closed about two months ago, and a fine crop of grain is now growing on it.

Thomas Keating will take Frank M., 2:17¼, and a number of good trotters besides, through Colorado, Montana and Oregon this year. He thinks there is a better chance to win some money there than on the grand Eastern circuit. He has tried the Northern circuit, and ought to know.

"There is a filly by Sidney at the Souther Stock Farm that is trotting like Fron-Fron and two Glen Fortune colts that are not far behind her. One of them, Prince Fortune, is a daisy clipper," was the remark overheard at the Palace Hotel the other evening, where some horsemen were talking.

We were disappointed in not receiving the plan of the Stockton kite-shaped track from the directors, as promised. Many inquiring letters from the East have come regarding it; and what accommodations there are for the keeping of horses there! When the busy directors get around to it we shall present a diagram of the course as well as a brief description of the accommodations.

W. O'B. McDonough has purchased from W. Todhunter, Sacramento, two yearling fillies, both by Prince of Norfolk, (full brother to El Rio Rey). One is out of Haidee, the other out of the dam of Prince's First. From John Mackey Mr. McDonough purchased an Australian thoroughbred broodmare with weanling at her side by imp. Cheviot.

See to it that your colts have free access to good water, for they cannot thrive on a scanty supply, or if it is impure Impure water has the same effect on on a horse's system that it does on a man's. Every tissue of a horse's body contains a large percentage of water, ever the teeth being one-tenth water, and this element must be supplied or your colts will not thrive.

James Dustin has sold to Albert Wieland, the wealthy young San Franciscan, the good-looking bay horse Kilrain, 2:22¾, five years old, by Hawthorne (son of Nutwood), dam March Fourth, by Hambletonian 725 The price paid was private. They reached Bay District track in good shape, considering they had a rather rough voyage from Honolulu in.

At Lexington, Ky., recently, a sixteen-year-old mare (Namesake) by the great race horse Bay Dick, dam Anna H., by Lee Paul, sold for the ridiculous sum of $10 Isaac Hutchinson, of Lexington, Ky., was the purchaser. An imp. Australian mare, at the same sale, brought but $15, while two others—by Hurrah and Harry of the West—fetched but $20 apiece. Verily this is a sad state of affairs.

The splendid stallion Alex. Button has done exceedingly well this year. He got four in the list—Tom Ryder, 2:18¾; Lucy B, 2:27¾; Laura Z., 2:25, and Gen. Logan, 2:23¾ We are informed that there are at least twenty in Yolo county that would enter the 2:30 list if given a chance on the Stockton track. For gameness every one that has appeared so far demonstrates the characteristic to a remarkable degree.

If there ever was a more bitter enemy to the thoroughbred than John H. Wallace, when found there is a chance for such a man in a museum or a lunatic asylum. With an array of facts before him that should convince the greatest skeptic in the universe, Mr. Wallace still argues through the medium of the press that the pedigree of Waxy, grandam of Sunol, has not yet been cleared up. Lordy, how hard the old man dies!

An Eastern horsemen who recently returned from a visit to Haggin's Stockdale ranch says he saw five geldings there by Algona that he believes can pace faster than any other quintette of like age in the United States. When we consider that the wonderful untrained gelding that Captain Griffith drove a half-mile in one minute and two seconds over the Bay District track at the Breeder's meeting was by this sire, we are obliged to place credence in this statement.

An interesting operation was performed at Guttenburg recently by Dr. J. J. Maher, a Philadelphia veterinarian, on the two-year-old colt Benton, trained by W. Brian. It has been the custom hitherto to fire horses without the application of any anæsthetic, but Dr. Maher introduced the more humane method of applying cocaine to the leg upon which the operation was to be performed, and then applied the hot iron without eliciting the slightest sign of pain from the horse.

The London Live Stock Journal says of the celebrated stallion Mambrino: "He was a gray, bred by Mr John Atkinson of Scholes, near Leeds, in 1768, and sold at his decease in 1771. Mambrino's greatest son, Messenger, was sent to America and became the progenitor of the finest coach and trotting horses ever produced in any country. Before quitting England he begot some coach horses that were never equalled."

Now is the time for horse-breeders to select the stallions to which they must breed their mares. If they have stallions of their own and they have seen that the mares have nicked better bred to others, they should try and make arrangements to be on the safe side and breed back to the successful ones even if they are owned by rival breeders, and in turn try and give the services of his stallions in exchange. Breeders cannot afford to be jealous of each other in California.

In a fire at Sacramento last Saturday night four valuable horses perished in the flames. One of the trotters, called Clingstone, belonged to J. C. Boyd, another, Lem, considered very fast, was the property of C. H. Todd, while the barn in which the animals were lost belonged to Dr. L. A. McLain. It was situated on Eighth street, between G. and H. The structure once belonged to Charles Crocker, the railroad magnate, and in its day was the finest private stable in Sacramento. The loss—horses, harness, buggies—did not fall far short of $9,000.

The pink-eye of horses is an inflammatory bilious fever, closely akin to the malaria; that is, simply bad air. The pestilent atmosphere of the common stable, and much worse, of the close, damp, dark basement stable, is a prevalent cause of disease. Every farmer who cares for his own health by attention to his own dwelling ventilates his sleeping rooms, drains his kitchen and cellar, and keeps the atmosphere about him pure and dry and his clothes and person clean should think of his patient horses and their necessities at this exacting season.

The Holly catalogue is out, and it is neatly gotten-up and well compiled. The forty-seven head of horses offered for sale—trotters, pacers and runners—are bred in the lines from which game and fast race horses come, and horsemen should bear in mind that on January 14th, at the Hollywood Farm, three miles from Vallejo, Cal., on the Napa road, they will have a rare opportunity to purchase something that is simply gilt-edged. In another column will be found full particulars of this coming great sale, which will take place on the above date, rain or shine.

The old name, "Cook Stock Farm," has been changed to the pretty appellation, "Oakwood Park Stock Farm." Unless many horsemen who have been there lately are much disappointed, "Oakwood Park Stock Farm" will have a number of great trotters and pacers to its credit next year.

If Frank H. Burke sells Eros at $50,000—and he is certainly worth that sum if his brother, Conductor, with no performers in the list, is worth $35,000, the figure he brought—he will sell all the horses on his La Siesta rancho, from Wanda, 2:17½, down to the weanlings. Horsemen are now on the way to look at Eros, with a view to purchasing this good son of Electioneer, and it looks as if the breeders' ranks would be depleted to the extent of one at no far-distant day, However, Mr. Burke would more than likely rejoin the band ere many years had passed away.

The yearling colt by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Minnehaha (dam of Beautiful Bells and four others in the list), died at L. J. Rose's place (Rosemeade) last week. This is a full brother to Mascot, now owned by Marcus Daly, the Montana Copper King, and for whom $26,000 were paid as a yearling at auction. The dead youngster was a large and symmetrical colt, and his advent on the turf was being looked forward to with great interest by turfmen in all parts of the country. We understand that Mr. Rose had sold the colt for $10,000, and that a deposit of $2,000 had been made to bind the bargain.

Says a Vacaville, Cal., correspondent: The horsemen met again last Saturday afternoon at D. K. Korn's stable. The organization of the association was not completed, but probably will be at the next meeting. W. W. Fitch, the well-known surveyor, presented an original plan for a track to the association, which aroused considerable discussion, and may be accepted. It is a modification of the kite-shaped track now in use at Stockton, and it is claimed by some who have investigated the matter to be superior to that popular form. With a fast track Vacaville will not delay long in laying her claims before the horsemen, and before many months will be as famous for record-breaking as she is now for her early fruit.

Mrs. Maria L. Velasco, one of the oldest natives of San Francisco, died last Saturday at her residence, 1314 Powell street. Deceased was a granddaughter of Louis Peralta, to whom the famous Peralta grant was made, and was born in the year 1827 in the little Spanish settlement which stood on the site of the Presidio. Mrs. Velasco in 1850, married Ignacio Pacheco, a native of San Jose, and was therefore the mother of the popular horseman, G. Pacheco; of Marin county. Her youngest son, Benjamin Pacheco, was in Mexico, and the beneficent lady died with his name on her lips. Wealthy in her own right, Mrs. Velasco gave every year from $30,000 to $35,000 to charity, and no better woman ever lived than the lady who died last Saturday.

Our esteemed contemporary, The Horseman, errs in stating that Exchequer, full brother to Planet sire of Dame Winnie, was the only thoroughbred that ever became a standard sire of trotters Red Eagle is registered as standard, and his number is 872. Wallace casts a doubt upon his being thoroughbred by saying, "dam Lottery, said to be by Woodpecker, etc.," but is all wrong in this, as the horse is strictly thoroughbred and duly recorded in Bruce's Stud Book Imp. Bonnie Scotland is credited by Wallace only with Scotland, 2:22½. According to many authorities, he should also be credited with Dan Donaldson, 2:24¾, and Black Jug, 2:27½, which would make him standard. Chenery's Grey Eagle is another thoroughbred with two trotters and one pacer in the list. This horse is given in Bruce, Vol 1, as by Grey Eagle, dam Lottery Jr., by Clay Trustee. Wallace gives his breeding as unknown. He is standard, No 2061. Aaron Pennington has one of his get in the list, and many others are trotting well. Williamson's Belmont sired Venture, 2:27¼, and the dams of five in the list, but under existing rules, he does not get in.

It now seems that the Los Angeles public will have a chance to see the world-renowned Direct go against his record on the Los Angeles track. Mr. Salisbury recently wrote to J. C. Newton and expressed a desire to send Direct against the world's record at Los Angeles, says the Herald of that place. The local track is undoubtedly one of the fastest elliptical tracks in the United States. George Starr, the driver and trainer for Mr. Salisbury, is well aware of this fact. He spent several seasons here, and had Johnston in charge This distinguished knight of the sulky has apparently urged Mr. Salisbury to bring Direct to the Los Angeles track. Mr. Salisbury is anxious to pace during the holiday week, but the track has been given over to the gallopers and cannot be gotten into condition to go against a world's record. The local association will doubtless make arrangements to have Direct make a trial against the scythe-bearer about January 6th, if the weather permits. Starr will also bring down Monbars, the second fastest two-year-old in the world, and the fastest ever bred outside of this State. The record of Monbars is 2:16½. Thousands would go out to see Direct, the fastest horse in the world at either the pace or trot, by 2½ seconds, as he was bred by a Los Angeles-county man, as was also his dam.

Secretary Steiner, of the American Trotting Association, has received word that the cases of W. J. Officer, of Tracy, Minn., and J. O. (Red) Garrity, of Oshkosh, Wis., will not be tried at Oshkosh at the time announced some time ago. Officer and Garrity are charged with "ringing" horses on the tracks of both the American and National Trotting Associations. It is alleged that they worked the American Association for about $8,000 in purses and that they tapped the pool box quite heavily. In Wisconsin "ringing" is a penitentiary offense. The reason for delay is the fact that the witnesses necessary to prove the identity of the horses live in California and are unable to come at present to testify. The horses used by the ringsters, three in number, were J. R. (Josselyn) 2:24, a brown horse five years old, by Richards' Elector, who was trotted over the tracks in slow classes in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan; Allorita, a chestnut mare, 2:26¼, by Altoona, who made her record in Marysville, Cal., in 1889, made the tour of the same States as Lena H. A chestnut pacing gelding with a record of 2:21, made in Sacramento, Cal., in 1888, posed as Captain O. The horses were purchased from Byron Holly, of Vallejo, Cal. Officer is captain of a mine at Ishpeming, Mich., and the horses were handled by "Red" Garrity, a skillful driver with a reputation for irregular work. Secretary Steiner enacted the role of detective with marked success. Recently he had an interview with Officer and Garrity in Oshkosh. He told them all he knew, and his knowledge covered the case thoroughly. Officer was about to make a clean breast of it, when a lawyer told him to keep still, that it was a penal offense. That stopped the confession, and since then Officer has been as discreet as a clam.

Horse History and Lessons on Breeding.

SONOMA VALLEY, December 24, 1891.

In this little valley, nestled between the Santa Rosa and the Napa ranges of hills, was the first settlement north of San Francisco in California. Here it was that General Vallejo, born and reared in California, knowing every foot of the State, and having free choice for the location of a grant of land and settlement, selected his home. It must have been a beautiful spot then, with all the great, wide-branching oaks standing in the valley and on the hillsides. It is a beautiful valley now, even after the grand old oaks have given place to orchards and vineyards. General Vallejo's location here was some years prior to the building of "Sutter's Fort" at Sacramento, prior to the location of Sutter's old historical "Hock farm," on the Feather river, below Marysville. This valley was covered with horses, sheep and cattle, and it was a grazing ground till the Americans occupation. After that for a time it was the United States military headquarters. The old adobe barracks are still standing in Sonoma. In them noted men had their quarters—General Percifer F. Smith, General Sewell, Fighting Joe Hooker, General W. T. Sherman, General Charles P. Stowe and General Alfred Pleasanton. The military and the grazing are things of the past. Little attention is paid to fine stock. Once there was a race track at Sonoma, but that is also a thing of the past. Mr. J. B. Chase, of your city, is the only person in this part of Sonoma county who has high-bred stock. The grasses are of the best, there is plenty of pure running water, the climate is most favorable, and the valley is easy of access to the city. Two or three stock farms, such as those located around Pleasanton, would increase business and infuse new life into this section You see from the above that I can not offer you much local horse news, and although the Sonoma creek is a trout stream, and there are good hunting grounds all around, I am no hunter or fisherman. I did not read your State Fair edition till a few days ago. When it was published I was in Chicago, where a copy reached me, but I did not get out of the Palmer House rotunda with it, as a dozen strangers begged for it, and I gave it up knowing I could get another copy here. Your account of the "prehistoric horse" is very interesting, but it is hardly fair to Prof. Marsh, who made a collection of the fossil remains of these progenitors of our runners and trotters. Marsh identified the fossils and published an account of them eight years before Huxley delivered the lecture which you allude to. Why, it was from Marsh's specimens that Huxley was illustrating his theory of evolution in the lecture you speak of. There are facts about the discovery of the remains of the prehistoric horse which may interest your readers.

In 1868 the writer of this article was the surgeon of the Union Pacific Railway. The country through which that ironway was building was new and little known then. Everyone was on the lookout for minerals and fossils. At Pine Bluff, forty miles east of Cheyenne, a well was sunk, and at a depth of 340 feet bones were found; these were boxed and sent to me for identification. I was unable to tell to what species of animals they belonged, and they were in my office for months. I had written to Prof. Marsh of the finding of the skeletons of two mastodons, as I thought them to be. He asked me to get these supposed mastodon bones and send them to him, which I did. In packing the big box required for the big bones, I put in the little box of bones found at the bottom of the Pine Bluff well, more to fill up the big box than anything else.

In due time came an acknowledgment of the receipt of the big box of bones, saying that the supposed mastodon bones were those of two mammoths, and that they were as fine and perfect as any ever discovered, but, wrote the Professor, "the bones in the little box are much the more important, being those of a fossil horse about the size of a large Newfoundland dog." In about a month Marsh came from New Haven with a party of Yale students to hunt for more horses, and on the Loup Fork of the Platte River he found their bones in profusion. There he found the one, two, three and four-toed fossils, which have been the "mainstay and prop of evolution," so Huxley says.

These fossils prove that our horse was once a beast of prey, with claws to seize and canine teeth to tear his victims. Why he developed away from the claws and canine teeth is hard to guess, unless he found the pool-box and bookmaker more effective in that line.

What a year horsemen have had in 1891. More has been done with trotters and pacers to realize the possibilities of those two ways of going than in a decade before—yearlings pressing the twenty mark; two-year-olds close to 2:10, and three heats in harness in ten and below. What a wonder of speed, gameness and horse-sense the little "Black Phantom" is! More than a hundred heats trotted and paced at a high rate of spead, and not a break or mistake in them all. I think that fact breaks all records, too. With such phenomenal speed—a recorded quarter in twenty-seven seconds—determination and resolution to carry it to the end of as many miles as you want, and such a persistence in gait, he cannot fail to be a great sire. He comes of a long line of prepotent sires—Director, Dictator, Hambletonian, Abdallah Mambrino and Messenger. There is plenty of the hot do-or-die blood in him, too; from SaxeWeimar, Coeur de Lion, Star and Messenger. If he is mated with long, large, rangy mares of speed and resolution he will found a family of very near two-minute trotters or pacers. Let us hope he may be allowed to found that family here in California.

Right here it is relevant to refer to the letter of Mr. Gamble about families of quitters. I do not think he makes his position quite plain. If he means that there are or have been families that have been unjustly called quitters when they are not or were not quitters, then there cannot be any contention, and if he means that a quitting family with, time and money enough, can be bred up to be stayers and good racehorses, then no one can say him nay, as horse history is full of such instances. If, however, he means to assert that a man of limited means can afford to breed mares to a stallion of an irresolute and faint-hearted family, he will have to adduce more proof than mere opinion and assertion. There was a time when races were trotted and paced in the twenties and thirties, and then little gameness or resolution was required Now to go down the circuit, a horse, to win, must be able to go and stay every spot in the miles in 2:18 or better, and by the time the colts which we are now breeding get to the circuit they must be able to go the route in 2:15 or better, and do-or-die at the finish of every heat. In short, the time has come when a winning horse must have extreme speed and the utmost determination and resolution to carry that speed to the end of the mile. A faint-hearted alloy may do after ten generations of breeding out, but it will result in loss and failure ninety and nine times out of a hundred in the first and second generations. The Electioneers are not to the point, as they proved, years ago, that they were racehorses, and the proof would have been still greater if Gov. Stanford and Mr. Lathrop had desired to race them for money, which they never did care to do. Why they should not be resolute and game is not apparent: on the other hand, there is every reason why they should be. Hambletonian 10 sired game racehorses whenever he was bred to the right material, and the daughter of Shanghai Mary had good material in her. Shanghai Mary, if not a daughter of Lexington, was a hot-bred mare, and could go the route. She had the best of legs and the greatest resolution. Stout, game and resolute as I hold Electioneer to have been, his best produce were not bred on the lines of dilution. Palo Alto, the King, has hot blood close up. Arion, the wonder, has it in his dam—on both sides of her sire. Pilot Jr. had a hot-blooded dam, and Miss Russell was full of the most resolute blood in the world. I hold that there is no blood rich enough to bear dilution, no courage so high as to bear a mixture of cowardice, and no resolution and determination so strong as to admit the least alloy of faint-heartedness. Breed the courage, stout heart, level head and pure gait of Electioneer on the stout heart, high courage and do-or-die of the Mambrino Patchens, Stars or the strongest thoroughbreds, and you will have a better and greater than Electioneer. Breed them on to the faint-hearted and soft-legged "quitter" and you will get a horse which will make his owner tired and sick. What made Hambletonian's reputation? The stout Star cross. What made the reputation of George Wilkes? The stout, game, resolute Mambrino Patchen cross. That was breeding up; the other is breeding down.

I did not start out to write anything of this kind, however. I only wanted to tell you how the prehistoric horse was found; but as I have switched off, I want to say that "Eastern Sojourner," in your issue of the 5th, must have a heap of "gall" to pitch into Palo Alto and Mr. Corbitt the way he did. Where are his title deeds to criticise those exceedingly successful establishments? If some one has established a larger and better breeding farm than Palo Alto, let him show it, and then talk. If he has bought a better horse than Electioneer and given his produce more and better records and a greater and more enduring name, then he can find fault. If he has a better horse than Guy Wilkes with more in the 2:20 list, at the same age, and if they are gamer and more consistent performers, then his criticisms may be in good taste.

P. S.—After writing the above, I see by the Sunday Examiner that Dr. Wortman has discovered the fossil remains of a five-toed horse in the Wind River Valley, so I am not "in it" with my original four-toed horse. H. L.

Figures That Don't Lie.

The fact that the dead Electioneer was the greatest sire of trotters that ever lived is now being generally admitted almost without dispute.

Step by step, he, not slowly, but rapidly, ascended the scale until he was soon without a rival for the honors of first place. When the fact is taken into consideration that the period of his stud duty was limited to about twelve years (he having been brought to California at the age of ten, prior to which time he had sired but few colts, it may be said that his career commenced with his arrival at Palo Alto) and the showing made by his get seem all the more remarkable.

The greatest and almost unsurmountable obstacle that Electioneer had to overcome to reach the top notch of fame and popularity was that of envy.

"Thy danger chiefly lay in doing well;
No crimes so great as daring to excel."

Being owned by a very wealthy gentleman who kept the great horse for private service only, was, in itself, quite sufficient to draw forth the attacks of the envious and malicious. Had the horse been available for public service his progeny would have been more numerous and as a matter of course would have been scattered amongst people who would have been pecuniarily interested in their performances, and each and everyone so interested would have been wildly energetic in their efforts, proclaiming aloud the marvellous excellence of the Electioneer family.

Total number of foals sired	367
Number of same dying before reaching the age of three years	26
Number living at present and that lived to reach the age of three years and over	341
Number of performers in the 2:30 list at present date	100

Showing that over 29 per cent of foals sired and living at present and that lived to reach the age of 3 years and over trotted to records of 2:30 and better. There are living at the present time 37 two-year-olds, 25 yearlings and 7 weanlings. If the number of yearlings (25) and weanlings (7) are deducted from the number 341, we have 309 foals of the age of 2 years and upwards, and of this number nearly 33⅓ per cent have entered the list—one out of every three—certainly a most remarkable showing, and there is little doubt but what within a short time Electioneer's list will show that 3 per cent of all the foals he ever sired will be enrolled thereon.

The total number of foals (367) sired by Electioneer appears small when compared with the get of many other horses of less fame and possessed of no greater vigor and physical ability. It must appear ridiculously small to those who have been so loud in their proclamation of the statement "that where one 2 or 3-year-old Electioneer colt has trotted fast, hundreds of others have been spoiled at Palo Alto in the attempt to discover and develop the one successful youngster."

To the army of small breeders it should be a very great satisfaction that Governor Stanford, who so lavishly spent his money in cultivating and developing his theories of breeding and training the trotter, met with such unparalleled success, which to him must have been a matter of the most intense pride, and which to the smaller breeder makes the pathway to success well-beaten and more easily found.

CHALEN.

Palo Alto, the King of Trotters.

[Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

So much has been written pro and con, upon this famous trotting stallion that to a casual observer it would seem wellnigh impossible to add anything of interest to the mass of matter upon this subject that has appeared of late in many journals devoted to the interests of the trotting horse.

A careful perusal of these publications, however, especially those in which regret is expressed that Palo Alto is not bred in lines that warrant the prediction of his success in the stud, will at once convince any unprejudiced mind that the writers of these articles have not given the subject of Palo Alto's blood lines as much study as it deserves.

It is not intended to enter upon any encomium on Palo Alto. He needs none. There he is. The world knows his history by heart.

It would be well for all intelligent breeders of the trotting horse to carefully study the pedigree of the Trotting King.

His sire, the illustrious Electioneer, had he lived only to give to the world this mighty son, had not lived in vain.

It is needless to dwell upon the inestimable value of the blood of Electioneer. Sunol, Palo Alto, Arion, Bell Bird and that mighty host which shine resplendent in the immortal crown of the dead hero are living proofs of the superiority of his priceless blood.

It would seem that the dam of Palo Alto, the famous Dame Winnie, had received only a cursory glance from the sticklers for intensely trotting-bred stallions. They forget that Exchequer, full brother to Planet, the maternal grand sire of Palo Alto, is the sire of Lucille, 2:21, and Rigolette, 2:22, that the grandam of Dame Winnie, Fannie G., is also the grandam of Alma Mater, one of the brightest stars in the galaxy of famous matrons, whose great son, Alcantara, has perpetuated the fame of his illustrious sire George Wilkes; that Boston, the sire of Nina, dam of Planet, is also the sire of Sally Russell, dam of Miss Russell, the dam of Maud S. and Nutwood.

That Dame Winnie possesses a trotting inheritance both through her sire, Planet whose blood (through Exchequer) produced Lucille 2:21 and Rigolette 2:22, and though her grandam, Fanny G., whose daughter produced Alma Mater, is demonstrated by the fact that Dame Winnie has produced three trotters in the 2:30 list, two by Electioneer and one by General Benton. Electioneer's prepotency is unquestioned, but it will not account for Big Jim, 2:23¼, by General Benton. It is folly to argue that trotting inheritance can only be transmitted through what is commonly known as trotting bred blood, in the face of such proofs to the contrary as Palo Alto, Express, Azmoor, Whips, Cubic, Laura C., with records ranging from 2:08¾ to 2:29½, whose dams are strictly thoroughbred,

The thoroughbred theory of Senator Stanford is no longer a theory; it is an accomplished fact, and its signal demonstration is shown in the produce of the union of Electioneer and Dame Winnie, the incomparable Palo Alto, King of Trotters. That Palo Alto will prove a worthy successor in the stud to his mighty sire admits of no reasonable doubt. His pedigree is unrivalled in strong thoroughbred trotting crosses inherited from his dam, and his trotting inheritance from his sire leaves nothing to be desired. He is a natural trotter of wonderful speed and iron courage, the highest type of the modern trotting stallion and every inch a King. He fills every requirement exacted by the most intelligent breeders of the trotter in breeding, form and performance, and is destined to be the founder of a new race of trotters whose value will not only consist of their ability to trot fast miles, but whose indomitable courage will place them in the front rank of turf performers, the heroes of long and hotly-contested races, who, like their kingly sire will find no journey too far or speed too great.

In concluding this article a prediction made by the late H. R. Covey seems fitting and appropriate. He said of Dame Winnie: "That mare will produce a trotter by Electioneer that will make Mr. Wallace's head ache," and the prediction has been verified to the letter.

New York Letter.

NEW YORK, December 20, 1891.

Has it rained out there yet? I am getting a little anxious myself. Go after them though—the records, I mean. It matters little to me whether it is an Electioneer or a Sidney, or if it were the ghost of By. Holly's famous mule he once offered to match against any of the get of a certain well-known stud, I'll not mention his name—comparisons are odious, they say—and it was hardly fair to issue that challenge, anyhow. But keep at those records! Electioneers are "way up" here now—that is, good ones—and Sidneys are thought a great deal of, and always have been, it seems. The reason prices do not average up as they should at trotting sales here is that buyers are always saying they are afraid o buying "culls." Breeders who try their colts can't expect to sell them at high figures. Raise them till they are yearlings, sell them and let the other fellow try them is the only way to do the business.

Horsemen here, as a rule, do not like our horses, just on that account. They say: "It is funny you fellows out West can get them to go so fast and when you bring them East they can not go at all." It is rather bitter medicine for a Native Son to take, but it seems to be the rule, though, for of all the horses sold here in recent years you can count the good ones on the fingers of one hand. A gentleman well known here asked me how I accounted for the apparent deterioration of California-bred horses when brought East. I was reading or rather scanning over the pictures in an antiquated copy of "Puck" at the time, and, as luck would have it, I found portrayed there a carcature that helped me answer him.

The scene presented was that of a darky plowing. Drawing the plow was the poorest excuse for a mule I ever saw. He had evidently been fed like the Irishman's horse—"so high he could not reach it." The poor brute was hardly able to drag the plow along, and Mister Coon, anxious to get his plowing done, conceived a brillient idea. He procured a long pole, fastened a bundle of hay to the end of it, fastened the pole to the poor brute's head so that the hay was just beyond his reach, and then awaited developments. He had not long to wait. Gladdened by the sight of the hay, forgetting his weakness, the mule started after it. He followed that hay all day long, occasionally stopping to bray with joy, evidently in anticipation of the delight of a good feed. The heartless darky got his field plowed, and eventually the mule got his hay. "Now," said I "if you, in the East, only had some good, old California hay or a bag of oats to place before the horses they might, like the darky's mule, hustle a little bit." But like everything Californian, absence from her glorious shores but makes the heart grow fonder. I guess horses get homesick, too, only they cannot tell us.

Every man here, though, who has a Sidney or an Electioneer, no matter how much he has tried him heretofore, has taken them up and is "hazing" them again. I would like to see a good one crop up back here, but I guess we will have to get a new consignment of them, as those here, excepting the yearlings sold last spring, are nearly all known quantities. Occasionally you can hear of one showing pretty well. There is an Albert W. out of Hilda, by Nutwood, down in West Virginia that has taken all the premiums about that country, and is said to be a good one. There were a couple of California-bred colts in the recent Horse Show, but they were far from good specimens. By the way, I did not write you anything about the Horse Show. My reasons are—it was not of interest directly to Californians, though supposed to be a national affair, and again because it was, frem what I could see, hardly up to what a "national" horse show should be, it savoring in many instances of a personal or private affair.

Judging from the attendance every evening, the "horse craze" has surely come to stay. Think of fifteen thousand people turning out to see a lot of cobs and hackneys, mingled with which, to their seeming degradation, was the great "Bard" and Belle Hamlin. I saw there the mare Nightingale, who gave our Little Albert so hard a fight. She looks every inch as game and good as she is. She is a beautifully-formed mare, I think, from a trotting standpoint, but she cannot be called a "ladies' nag," as she is not of that queenly form the ladies so like. Now, while I think of it, the New York press in general raved over the beauty and grace of the New York girl as seen at the Horse Show! Why, they are not one-half as pretty, not near as graceful or as bright and rosy-looking as our own girls. Give our girls the records all round too! They have won—i. e, if I am a judge.

Of late much has been said regarding the proposed return of the great Ormonde to England. Every week we see the papers full of a lot of gush about the great unbeaten exile. I am in rather a favorable position to know a thing or two about this proposed purchase. I am prepared, too, to pronounce it a gigantic gamble from first to last. The horse was first "peddled" about England at a figure calculated rather to inspire awe. It was something like two hundred thousand dollars. Blundell Maple offered one hundred and twenty-five thousand, which was promptly refused. Then came the story of the syndicate being formed to purchase him. Things went on very quietly, a word was dropped here and there that it was a "go," and we all thought Ormonde was at last to be returned to England. Then "somebody" backed out, leaving a perceptible hole in the intended purchase price. Ormonde was then offered to American breeders for one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars—to one of our young breeders, I think it was. I guess he was like the Irishman who ate, or rather drank, an enormous quantity of good soup, and when the meat was set before him commenced to cry, saying:

"Begob, oi've ate all that soop and sorra's the bit of mate can I ate."

I think this young breeder got his soup at the Belmont sale, and has nearly enough of "cinches." I do not blame him. An English syndicate has an option on Ormonde, and, their time being limited, I fear we may soon hear of his transfer at some outlandish price, one-half of which (or the actual price) will be cash, the other half a note like Paddy Murphy's—"for thirty days—an' av I doant pay, yez can kape the note." As to the roaring of Ormonde, I guess we had better let our brothers across the water have it out about that. I can't see, though, as that would hurt him so much, as long as he could sire two-year-olds to go out and get the other fellow's money.

Coming back to our own horses, let me mention a few of the Californians showing up at Guttenberg, or "The Gut," as it is familiarly called. The Washington and Gloucester tracks having closed, leaves the Guttenberg track alone in its glory as the only upholder of winter racing. On Wednesday of last week Tormentor, by Joe Hooker, out of Callie Smart, ran a close second in a five-furlong dash in 1:03¾. The same afternoon the John Happy—Allanah colt (Joe Kelly), two years old, ran second to Esquiman, an old campaigner, a mile and an eighth in 2:01¾. Thursday saw the Kyrle Daly—Faux Pas colt, with 98 pounds up, win a six furlong race in 1:18¼, beating twelve very fair ones. Friday Tormentor again ran second. On Saturday Martha Washington, by Joe Daniels, ran a very fair third. In the sixth race, on the same day Natalie S., by Kyrle Daly—Napa, defeated a field of six very handily. Tormentor waltzed down the line leading half a dozen good ones Monday afternoon, he running five furlongs in 1:01¼. The Faux Pas colt was third in the next race. Tuesday saw the sensational colt of last spring, Eclipse, cut loose, and he made things very merry for the talent. He and the five-year-old mare, Dixie, ran a grand race, she only beating him a trifle. The time for the five furlongs was almost as goon as that of Tormentor on the day previous, Eclipse driving the mare out in 1:01¾. The dam of Eclipse is now owned by R. E. Bybee, of Oregon, who purchased her from her former owner, Mr. Haggin. He and Tormentor are two hard ones to beat at anything under seven furlongs.

I see there seems to be a kind of feeling out that way that the running horse business here is, figuratively speaking, running into the ground. The death or retirement of some of our most noted turf magnates seems to have conveyed the impression that, with their retirement, necessarily comes the handling of the reins of power by a class of men wholly unfit, at least morally so, for transacting the affairs of legitimate racing. Now, this idea should be at once dispelled. It will not do to lay back in the traces and groan over the weight of our burden, as it were, but as the oft-repeated warning, "The king is dead," rings out, let us, with the same breath, welcome the new-comer with the cry, "Long live the king." We cannot have the old folks with us always. They are but mortal, and must die, and we should not complain at the dictates of an all-powerful Fate, for our turn, too, will come—perhaps only too soon.

Scanning over the list of new-comers, we have a representative for each of the ones departed whom, though they may not be as game and as true as the "old boys" were, still they are going at it with a will, and "where there is a will there is a way." Young Jacob Ruppert, of brewery fame, has launched out in a manner that would indicate he was going to be with us "at the death." He is gradually coming to the front. Another advocate of the "get there" persuasion is Charles Fleishman, of Cincinnati. He seems, too, to be out for the money. He is paying good, big prices for his fancies, and is getting some good ones. Another little scheme that has leaked ont is that the representative brewers of St. Louis have been quietly racing all the year under their trainer's name. So, when you drink a good glass of St. Louis beer, just think that it is a nickle more in the horse racing slot. Young Fred Ehret, with F. C. McLewee, has been racing all year under the name of F. C. McLewee & Co. He also is a manufacturer of the extract of malt and hops. Young August Belmont I can say but little for, conscientiously, as he has made a beginning calculated to injure rather than add prestige to his name. But just think of that string of brewers! We'll all have to go to drinking beer now, for we each can thus give our little mite satisfactorily to the racing world. Don't give up and say racing is going to gamblers and the dogs. Why, we will have just as many good men in the business as ever in another year. Of course I know that it s much like the oft-told story or stale joke—we must tell it again, "just to be kind to the old folks, you know." So with the old pillars of the racing world. Be kind to them, and always be ready to hail the new-born talents of the coming millionaires, for a little flattery spurs them along, and once in action, with unlimited means, they will soon fill up the ranks, and what more can we ask? SALVATOR.

The Spirited Broodmares.

If you have a gamey, high-spirited mare and she has no bad tricks nor defects, she is the one to breed to a good stallion. Mares that are slow and lazy and of a passive disposition are not as apt to throw ambitious, prompt road horses as are those that are more fiery in their action. Some of the best and fastest track horses were from mares that were dangerous to drive because of so much spirit. Others of the famous broodmares could kick the points off of the stars and would trot until they dropped down. It used to be that any mare which for any cause was not fit to work was put to breeding. The result was that a great number of unsound colts were raised. At the present time breeders are more careful in this, and try to avoid using unsound animals.

What is demanded nowadays of a trotter is that he can go, and the faster the better. Size, color, disposition and soundness are all sacrificed to speed, and a look at any race track will show a mixed lot of horses of all sizes and colors imaginable. As many farmers are breeding to get a serviceable road horse with as much speed as possible, they must look first to soundness, then to size, next to speed and afterwards to color. A horse is nothing if not sound. For the road he must be of good size so as to be able to draw a carriage of four persons. He must have speed enough to get along at a comfortable gait and fast in a case of necessity. Color is merely an individual fancy, but the standard colors are always desirable.

Never breed to a poor stallion, and if you want good colts see that both the sire and dam are as good as you wish the colt to be. Go on the principle that a colt will not be better than its parents, although if you mate rightly there are many chances that he will be. Do not depend upon luck, but go in at a rational and well-defined way, and then good fortune may crown your efforts.

The Poor Man's Horse.

SAN MATEO, Dec. 13th, 1891.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I noticed in the last issue of your valuable journal a list of all the record breakers, over the fast toboggan slide kite-track at Stockton, the time of each and the owners of animals. You have made an error as to the ownership of the great horse Del Win, 2:26½. You have him as owned by me. As I never was lucky enough to own such a great horse, and have been trying for years to own a great producing stallion, I am in duty bound, with regret, to inform you that Del Win is owned wholly by Wm. Meese, Esq., Danville, Cal., and Mrs. S. Gamble, San Francisco. However, I have the honor in looking after the welfare of the greatest poor man's friend now standing for service in the State. I predict he will in time be another Sidney and Sable Wilkes, as a sire of early speed. Remember, I say to the poor breeders that Del Win is now your friend.

SAM'L. GAMBLE.

[The list of performers and their owners at Stockton were copied from the records now in the possession of the Secretary there.—ED.]

Pedigree of Dolly Spanker.

I notice that the Turf, Field and Farm, in a recent number, raked over the ashes of the old verson of the blood o the dam of George Wilkes. If an intelligent public had not already passed upon the evidence adducted by a most thorough investigation of the whole matter nearly a dozen years ago, and accepted the facts as then shown, or if there were a missing link in the chain of ownership connecting the breeder of this great horse with the breeder of his dam, or there were any questions concerning her identity, then there might be some reasonable excuse offered by the journal named for the attitude assumed.

New men are constantly joining the ranks of breeders, and are seeking information through our turf journals concerning blood lines and principles of breeding, who are ignorant of what has gone before. With all such persons the article named may leave the impress of a shadow of doubt as to whether the true breeding of this mare has really been ascertained.

Now, what are the undisputed facts concerning George Wilkes? They are that he was bred by Harry Felter and got by Hambletonian 10, and that his dam was a brown roan mare, which Mr. Felter obtained of one Delevan, who purchased her of Capt. Joseph Lewis, of Geneva, Ontario Co., N. Y.

There are two kinds of evidence that are accepted under certain conditions; one kind is what is termed hearsay evidence, such as is handed down from one person to another, and enters much into history and tradition. To be authentic this kind should emanate from the fountain head, and come down through an unquestioned channel of truthfulness and accuracy.

Experience has shown that another kind of evidence is needed where weighty matters are in controversy, hence the common law demands that testimony shall be limited to personal knowledge.

Let us confine ourselves, says John P. Ray in the American Horse Breeder, to the last named kind of testimony in tracing the breeding of Dolly Spanker. Under this rule Felter and Delevan are not competent witnesses, as neither of these parties were her breeder, or her owner until she reached mature years. Neither was Mr. Lewis her breeder, but his testimony covers several important hints in the case.

DOLLY SPANKER IDENTIFIED.

"GENEVA, N. Y., Oct. 31, 1891.

"JOHN P. RAY, ESQ:

"My Dear Sir—I purchased the brown road mare Dolly Spanker of a Mr. Gilbert of Phelps, N. Y. (now deceased), for John S. King, Geneva N. Y. Afterwards King came to me to find him a customer for her. I sold her to a man by the name of Delevan, who sold her to Harry Felter. Mr. Felter had her bred to Hambletonian, and the produce was George Wilkes. Felter wished me to trace her breeding. I sent John Dey to Bristol, and he found that she was a daughter of Henry Clay (Wadsworth's). I often visited Harry Felter, and identified Dolly Spanker in his possession, as the mare sold Delevan. I do not know who is the author of the statement said to be a Mambrino Mare.'

"Respectfully, J. S. LEWIS."

All there is of value in the statement of Mr. Gilbert is that he purchased this mare of Captain Joshua Phillips, Bristol Centre, N. Y. We now have the mare in the vicinity of her birthplace, and where she was broken and grew to maturity. Joshua and E. V. Phillips were uncle and nephew, guardian and ward, respectively, and lived under the same roof.

E. V. Phillips purchased Dolly Spanker when she was three years of age, broke her and sold her to his uncle, who sold her to Gilbert, previously named. Joshua Phillips died some years since, and E V. died last September. Several living witnesses, including the writer, have heard him relate the facts concerning her purchase and the general characteristics and disposition of the mare in question.

We now pass to the next witness, the breeder of Dolly Spanker, and allow him to testify as to what he knows:

"BRISTOL, ONTARIO CO., N. Y., Nov. 28, '91

"JOHN P. RAY, ESQ:

"Dear Sir—Answering your inquiries of recent date, I will say that I bred a brown roan filly which I sold when three years of age to E. V. Phillips of this town. He broke her and sold her to his uncle, Joshua Phillips. This filly was got by old Henry Clay (The Wadsworth Horse) when he was owned by Bailey Bros. Her dam was the mare Telegraph, bred by me, and got by Baker's Highlander.

"I do not know who bred her second dam or what horse was her sire. My brother Phineas traded and got her of a party whose name I cannot recall, that lived at or near Blood's Corner, N. Y. She was represented to him as being a running mare brought from England. English people who saw her told me that she resembled the English thoroughbred. From her make-up and disposition I always fancied that she might have been a thoroughbred mare.

"Telegraph inherited much of her dam's high-strung nervous temperament I paid $5 for the service fee of Henry Clay and the same amount for the service of Baker's Highlander. Telegraph could outrun and out-trot any horse in these parts. She would not draw heavy loads. She was an excellent saddle mare and single driver. At the time of her death she was owned by Orestes Case of this town, and was in foal to Gooding's Champion. She broke a leg and had to be destroyed.

"Both Telegraph and her dam had nice clean limbs. You gave me the first intimation that the brown roan mare first-named was the dam of George Wilkes, and you are the only one to whom I have made a statement concerning her pedigree since she left these parts. She was never known or represented hereabouts as other than a daughter of Henry Clay and Telegraph. Yours truly,

"CLARK M. PHILLIPS."

The characteristics of Telegraph were so wholly unlike the get of Baker's Highlander that I was acquainted with, that I conclude these were an inheritance from her dam, and goes a long way with me to sustain the idea that she was of thoroughbred extraction. Dolly Spanker was a wilful, heady colt to break, and would go into the air whenever restrained. Thus we see that there was no lack of nerve force or will power in George Wilkes' maternal ancestry.

*Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 11¾ seconds, in nineteen days, last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two mile heats

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16-1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the only horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure frictionless gait. His style and carriage are lofty, and it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of Geo. Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and others 5 in the 2:30 list Grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼, Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾ and Jay-Eye See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¾. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¾. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of Geo. Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side, to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes by Tochunter's Mambrino, has produced Gus Wilkes 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15 and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionally fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any son of Mambrino Chief 11, dam Lady Crisman by Pilot Jr., of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1000 -and his service is offered at $200.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

BREEDING ESTABLISHMENT

— OF —

Dr. M. W. Hicks, Sacramento,

(Sold on Account of Ill-Health)

— ON —

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1892,

AT 10 A. M., AT

SALES YARD, CORNER VAN NESS AVENUE and MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

The continued ill-health of Dr. Hicks compels him, reluctantly, to permanently retire from the business of breeding standard-bred horses. He has leased his stallions to parties in Indiana, and through the medium of the auction block proposes to dispose of his broodmares and young horses. His splendid array of broodmares, with their produce, collected and bred with such care and excellent judgment, will be placed unreservedly in the hands of the public, he feeling confident their merit will be recognized and fair prices obtained. His stock runs largely to the great speed lines of the country, and judicious crossing has produced broodmares which are invaluable to the breeding community.

Full catalogues giving breeding, registry, etc., together with breeding of stallions, for reference, may be had upon application to the undersigned, 22 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Cal.

When Your Blacksmith Tells You

that he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP; that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mis-taken. However, don't point out the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut; and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing on both heels and the entire wearing surface.

EL BENTON

(Three-quarter brother to SUNOL, 2:08¼; NORVAL, 2:17½.)

$200 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

GLEN FORTUNE

(25 per cent. of the blood of Shanghai Mary; the exact amount carried by Electioneer himself.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — Sunol, 2:08¼; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.

    - BY ROE'S ABDALLAH CHIEF
  - GLENELLA — Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.
    - WOODWARD STAR — Son of Seely's American Star.
    - SHANGHAI MARY — Grandam of Electioneer.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

DEVELOPMENT OF TROTTING.

With the gradual development of speed in trotters came also the progression in the equipment and character of the trotting turf. Performances of long distances and extraordinary endurance became infrequent, and phenomenal feats of that nature are no longer attempted. In England (1800) Phenomenon trotted 17 miles, saddle, in 56 minutes; in 1823 Boston Blue trotted 18 miles, harness, in 1 hour, and 8 miles, saddle, in 28:25; 1824, Silas' mare, harness, trotted 28 miles in 1 hour, 57 minutes; in 1832, Rattler, saddle, 154 pounds up, trotted 34 miles in 2 hours, 18 minutes, 56 seconds; and in 1869 Morning Star, harness, trotted 18 miles in 59:27. These performances in England were over ordinary roads. But trotting upon regular tracks and of single heats was not recognized as legitimate turf sport. Of American performances of long distances: In 1839, Top Gallant, 12 miles, harness, in 38 minutes; 1831, Whalebone, 33 miles, harness, 1 hour 58 minutes, 5 seconds; 1831, Chancellor, saddle, 90 pounds up, 1:58:31: Black Joke, saddle, 175 pounds, 50 miles, 3:57; Mischief- from Jersey City to Philadelphia, 84½ miles, harness—a hot day and sandy road—8 hours, 30 minutes; 1846, Ariel, Albany, 50 miles harness, 3:55:40½; 1845, Fanny Jenks, Albany, 101 miles, harness, 9:42:57—including stops of 18:27—with 101 miles in 4:25. Trustee, in 1848, Long Island, was the first to trot 20 miles, harness, in less than an hour—59:35½; but his record was lowered in 1865, at Boston, by Captain McGowan, harness, half-mile track, 58:25. In 1850, Long Island, Kate trotted 100 miles, harness, in 9:49¾—including rests of 25½ minutes, and in 1850, Long Island, went 100 miles in 8:55:53, including 15 short rests. 1867, at Boston, half-mile track, John Stewart, harness, made the 20 miles in 58:06½, and 20½ miles in 59:31½. A phenomenal performance was that of Mountain Maid, Long Island, 1865, of 1 mile, to wagon, 2058 pounds, in 3:24½. In San Francisco, 1854, match between General Taylor and Rattler, 30 miles, without rests of more than a few seconds for sponging nostrils, General Taylor won, in time not recorded, but the best on record for the distance.

Long distances are not attempted any more; they are too exhausting and cruel to the trotter, and of no interest except to the parties immediately concerned and to the curious in such performances. Likewise have been discarded the innovation of trotting with a running mate to make the team and the freaks of racing which proved endurance with speed without consideration for the horse. A corresponding change has occurred in running races—fewer of three and four miles, and the institution of fractions of a mile, which has made respectable the quarter races which were formerly held in such disrespect as to compel them to take to lanes and cross-roads adjacent to the convenient grocery.

In trotting it is the generally accepted practice to go mile heats, in which the best speed is shown and the endurance of the trotter is amply demonstrated in scoring and in successive heats of three in five heats. Moreover, in mile heats, there is better business at the pools, and more interest and excitement to the multitudes who gather to witness the races. The old method of wagers between individuals has been displaced by the pools and mutuels and bookmakers. It obviates the condition illustrated in the turf experience of John Randolph of Roanoke, in his wager of $500 with a turfman of dubious record. "Who'll hold the stakes?" asked Randolph. The other responded: "Colonel Humphreys." Randolph was aware of the Colonel's weakness, and at once cried out: "Who'll hold Colonel Humphreys?" The pool box is a sort of turf bank that pays pool-cards at sight, less the regulation discount, and buyers can purchase agreeably to their fancy, with chances of winning, as in a lottery, heavy odds upon the money invested.

In the early days especial training for the trotting turf was not considered essential, and ordinary hostlers, track help, and riders and drivers were employed as occasion required. Skilled trainers and drivers were few and rare. Dave Bryant, the old farmer who owned Lady Suffolk, the little gray mare, peerless trotter of her time, was accustomed to driving her between his farm and New York City, as an ordinary roadster to his old-style heavy buggy, and in matches he never allowed another to drive, but persisted in driving himself. As she was a natural, square trotter and never broke or went off her feet, simply a clever hand with the reins was required; but as Bryant was too heavy and clumsy under the saddle he usually entrusted the fleet mare to the skilled hands of Alfred Conklin. Breeding farms for trotters, of the kind or magnitude now owned in several of the States with the most renowned, largest and complete in California—were unknown forty years ago. In Vermont the breeders of Morgans and Blackhawks were most noted. In Orange County, New York, Rysdyk of Chester, Alden Goldsmith of Bloomingdale, Jacks of Newburgh, and others at Goshen, Warwick, Walkill, and different localities gave attention to the breeding and training of trotters: but in New Jersey, Tennessee and Kentucky trotters were neglected and the breeding was directed only to thoroughbreds and runners. Rysdyk's Hambletonian and Alden Goldsmith's celebrated Maid and others bred or owned by turfmen of note at length produced the horses which brought celebrity to themselves and gave the impetus to trotting which has since promoted the trotting turf to distinguished places in the North and West and Pacific States. The South still adheres to thoroughbreds and racers, but has materially deteriorated in the scale.

The rapid increase of great wealth since the civil war has wrought greatly changed conditions in the enjoyments and pleasures and habitudes of life. An essential accessory to the "establishment" of men of means and pleasures is a fleet roadster that allows none on the road to pass him. Money is no object in the purchase of these roadsters and trotters. Thoroughbreds are unsuited to the purpose. The elevation of the trotting turf to high respectability lifted with it the grand speed of trotting tournaments, "every gentleman driving his own horse" in the spirited contest. The construction and equipment of tracks appropriate to the changed condition and rank of trotting is a consequence. Racing meetings are attended by the ton, the wealth, the fashion, the beauty and the distinguished of society, and buildings suitable for the aristocratic, exclusive patrons and admirers of the exciting sport are provided on every well-regulated track. Later on the "long-felt want" was measurably supplied—the organization of a trotting association with the conceded authority of ranking turfmen to establish the code to govern trotting, establish the standard and award the status of trotters. The breeding of the highest order of trotters received an unexpected lift which brought it to the attention of thousands who hold turf sports in abhorrence and considered a trotter as a possession of evil. Robert Bonner, the strict member of the Scottish Kirk, the church of John Knox, bought the then crowned king of trotters, great Dexter, after his 2:17¼, and paid for him the unprecedented sum of $30,000, then retired him from the turf to his own private farm to race nevermore. Trotting rose in respectability as trotters leaped in value. It was a lucrative business to breed and perfect the kind of horse which might bring his owner a moderate fortune. Men of wealth embarked in it through pride and profit as well. Breeding farms were established in different States; and at length in Kentucky, the famous home of thoroughbreds, the principal land of blue grass and the bluest of equine blood and line, imported and native, the breeding of trotters was begun.

The impulse was general to further accomplishment and progression to the highest possible condition. The Trotting Association, organized in 1870, was inadequate to the advanced situation. Many had declined to recognize its authority, others questioned its usefulness and clung to the "old-fashioned way;" a considerable number ignored and derided its existence. But the intelligent turfmen and substantial breeders believed an organization of the kind commendable and necessary, salutary in government of races and beneficial in every respect to the breeding interest. By it authority could be exercised and force its recognition in eliminating the imperfections, in purging the impurities which affected the trotting turf, and by introducing the reforms which would bring to all concerned the satisfaction that is felt in association of the good with the enjoyment of exhilarating sport. Accordingly, in 1884, the National Trotting Association was organized and incorporated, and has since existed a chartered institution, for the purpose its title implies. Every reputable trotting club and race track in the United States is enrolled on its books, and its promulgated laws and regulations and rules are acknowledged and conformed to. It holds biennial sessions, elects its officers, and appoints its departmental Boards, apportions the several districts, and exercises authority in all matters appertaining to the trotting turf. Its Board of Review is modeled from the plan of the Supreme Judiciary of the United States, and its judgments are final. Impartiality rules its conduct and decisions and the investigation of every case is thorough. The uniform submission to its administration is the sufficient attestation to the just conduct of the Association. It dignifies the trotting turf and honors the purpose of its organization.

A very great improvement in the trotting turf is the careful and judicious methods of breeding and training in the selection of sires and dams, and the particular attention devoted to authenticity of pedigrees. Superior and favored lines, with crossings for best congenial effect and the infusion of choice strains are all the time demonstrating the study and intelligence of breeders in development of speed, steady progress and beyond the most sanguine expectations, of the highest authorities on trotters who held rank forty years ago. Dexter's astonishing performance in 1867, 2:17¼, made him then the king of trotters, and it was commonly believed that his record never would be lowered. A score of trotters have since gone the mile in two to eight seconds less time. Forty years ago the number of trotters of 2:30 and under was not in excess of a dozen; now there are over four thousand, and fully 200 that have gone better than 2:20. From the inconsiderable breeding farms of Rysdyk and Alden Goldsmith the number has increased to fully a hundred, and in area they embrace from the one hundred acres in the States eastward to the vast farms of California, which contain thousands of acres, with Palo Alto extending over 7,000 acres. Far down East Maine has the breeding farm which produced the great trotting stallion Nelson; Hamlin, of Western New York, has bred several famous trotters; in Pennsylvania are noted farms, with superior studs. Ohio, Indiana, Iowa and Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin are coming into class among the foremost breeders; and blue grass Kentucky, with the blue ribbon of the racing turf gracing her Lexington and Longfellow and peerless Ten Broeck, now has noted breeding farms of trotters. Oregon and Washington, Idaho and Montana, are likewise to the front with trotters, and the breeding farms of DeLashmutt and Tongue in the Webfoot State, of Daly in Montana, and of other breeders in the great Pacific Northwest, are producing trotters of highest grade.

The blood of the renowned of English thoroughbred performers courses in the veins of American trotters, and the lines of the families of the most famous upon the trotting turf, producers and fruitful sires and dams, are cultivated to the utmost. Leading are the Hambletonians and Wilkes, the Clays and The Moors, with Green Mountain Maid, Lady Thorne, Goldsmith Maid, Waxy, Dame Winnie, Columbine, Lady Maud, Lulu, American Girl, Boautiful Bells, Waxana, Maid of Clay, Sultana, on the female side. Governor Stanford, at Palo Alto, has established the breeding of thoroughbreds with trotters. Other noted breeders adhere to the selection of choicest trotting lines. To each are demonstrations of producing highest speed: Sunol, Arion, Palo Alto, Axtell, Nelson, Jay-Eye-See, Direct, Alcona, Frou-Frou and Fausta, are as proof to either system of breeding. To get below Sunol's 2:08¼ is the grand performance for the coming season. From it down to two minutes flat is held as the ultimatum of trotting. Thirty years ago the belief was that it could never be accomplished; but then very few expected ever to see the mile under 2:10. It is the last straw which breaks the camel's back; it is the remaining record which will strain the contesting trotter. Still many now believe the feat is possible and probable with trotters now living, and within this generation of men.

The improvement in the stabling, care and treatment, and in the training and discipline of trotters, from foaling to ripe age, from that of thirty years ago, is especially apparent. The invention of boots and bandages, of tips and other appliances, for protecting and strengthening the horse: the methods of working and speeding and the housing, are a long way in advance. Stables more comfortable than ordinary dwellings, roomy stalls and the absence of cribs and old style feed boxes, the exactness in food and drink, and care as to the quality of the one and the other, the constant attention bestowed by skilled hands and reliable attendants, the shoeing and grooming, and everything concerning the health and condition of the horse, is thorough. It is natural that it should be so. An animal valued at from $10,000 to above $100,000, is not to be neglected in the slightest particular involving use and life. Intelligence, judgment, sobriety and faithful devotion to duty are requisite qualifications to fit the trainer and driver for the employment. Ignorance or negligence, carelessness or inebriety, trickery and dishonesty, might cause the owner heavy loss and incalculable trouble. Vigilance in the field and stable, in the paddock and on the track is indispensable. As there are poisoners, likewise are "dopers" to be guarded against to disable the trotter for the race. The risk increases with the valuation of the horse and the performance.

On the Kindergarten Track.

I read an interesting article in the Christmas Horseman for the year just past on the miniature covered track at Palo Alto for development of colt trotters. This writer looks upon the kindergarten as the foundation of the great speed attained by our California youngsters. Not so. I look upon the kindergarten, or speed garden, with great distrust. The short turns which the colt reaches with a burst of speed from the stretch, unsustained by the driver's hand, means, unless the youngster is booted from heel to elbow, disaster to the colt.

As a winter nursery for the young, where, under a roof, secure from the storm, with good footing on which to extend themselves, arranged as a place of gentle exercise during stormy weather, I say good! But as a proper way, as the best place to develope incipient speed in the youngster and establish the same, I say no! Why, you say? Look at the great single turn on the kite track. Does not that tell why? I'll not sail my kite now; of that I'll write later on.

Let us premise. Commence at the beginning. What are the first absolutely essential things for a colt to have to trot fast? First, confidence in himself; second, confidence in his handler. These assertions I look upon as axioms, so with your permission I'll not debate them. Now the condition under which a colt is broken beget or impair confidence. Suppose the kindergarten as first made—flat turns and uneven stretches. Now as long as the colt jogs around this ellipse all's well. Start the baby up, extend his flying feet. Where is he? Running with puzzled look and uncertain gait. Why? He has lost confidence in his surroundings. If you do not let him stop and walk he loses confidence in you. I contend the colts reasons—he thinks, if he does not say, "Why does this man, who apparently thinks so much of me, not give me a chance to extend myself?"

Have you never, reader, been behind a youngster when something broke, or instant danger stared you in the face? If so, you have learned how the calm, assuring tone, telling your charge, "I am not afraid; why should you be?" comfort and bring back under your control an incipient runaway. The colt ring, as its use increased and it no longer was simply an exercising ring, became a miniature track in which to develop speed. Miniature tracks—yes, one-half mile tracks—where are they to-day in California or anywhere else? Where are the horses developed on them?

The kindergarten has had the advantage of the best and purest-gaited colts in the world to operate on. But with these nonpareils, the Electioneers, they had to be booted from elbow to ankle joint. Why, you ask, any more now than at any other time? Simply, I reply, because the colt has not got established in his gait, he does not know you yet, is not accustomed to a circular track, nor are his limbs and joints firmly established enough beneath his body to sustain the contrifugal jar he gets in making the sharp turns. Of course, rustic as I am, I know I assume the unpopular side of the development theory. Kentucky held all the fast colt records until Fred Crocker, Sweetheart and Wildflower commenced to take them away. In the blue grass country they worked their colts straight away, alongside a saddle horse. So did we until after Wildflower had trotted in 2:21.

Why did we, then, surpass the East? Ask Governor Stanford, L. J. Rose, Mr. Valensin, our great colt pioneers and record-breakers. They will say: "We put a bar across our track at the turns, so the colt is speeded only up and down the stretches—no turn to interfere or change the purity of his gait; no tired muscles permitted to endanger his even stroke."

I remember reading an article on track-making, in which L. J. Rose and Giulio Valensin were interviewed. All they pointed to or urged on the two was, make no less than a three-quarter track; never mind the length of your stretches. Make big turns; throw them up well. Here, in colt training, is where all the danger lies; here is where, coming with a burst of speed up the stretch, they turn, strike and break. The next time the colts make the turn with diminished speed and faltering strides. Their confidence is gone. Now, I write this article more to interest small breeders (those who love a horse and care to keep it) in a new way to handle youngsters introduced to my attention by Mr. Zane, of Healdsburg. A small breeder must have a good track to train successfully. This is his battle-field, on which all his victories must be won.

Take the mother and her colt when the latter is two weeks old. Put the old mare in a long-shafted cart with a collar on, halter the little colt, tie the halter rope through the ring on the hame to the mare's harness; cluck the mare and touch the colt with the whip, and off you go. Be gentle, but firm. Get assistance the first few times if you need it. Don't go too far; don't tire the baby. Accustom him to the sights of your town—the steam cars, if not too far away. In a short time he learns to go to your demand, to stop when you tell him, to be obedient, fearless and have confidence in you and in himself.

How can he be afraid with his mother next to him? When the colt is seven or eight months old, has learned to eat grain, is strong and lusty, get a wooden cross-bar with a spur on one end of it, insert this in a staple on the left hand shaft, opposite the single tree, fasten the middle of your stick in a strap around the right hand shaft. To the stick, which extends beyond the right hand wheel, fasten the traces which run from the breastplate on your colt. Put a bridle over your halter with a soft bit in your colt's mouth; put a surcingle and crouper on. Don't check him up yet. Do that by and by. Let some helper drive the mother, you drive the colt. Teach the youngster to trot straight away; establish the gait. In a short time he will put his mother to her trumps. When you want to hitch him or her up alone there is no breaking to be done. The colt has broken himself, has confidence in himself, and has learned to love you.

The Standard Rules.

The following excellent article deserves a careful perusal by every horse breeder in the United States, for just as sure as the sun shines the standard must be changed. Mr. T. S. Turrell has written this article for the Horse World, and he very pointedly refers to the holes in the fence that was built to enclose only the representative trotting horses:

It seems to me the time has fully come when the lines should be drawn closer around the standard rules. They should have been drawn closer when they were revised. Even the present rules let in many a horse that is not bred good enough to produce a good road-horse.

The pacer has been admitted into the trotting rules and the trotter has only five seconds the advantage: he ought to have at least ten seconds.

I do not think the pacer should be admitted, and if the standard rules had remained in Mr. Wallace's hands I do not think he would have been, at least for the present.

The pacer has got to go fast to be worth much money, and those that do not show extreme speed very young are not worth training. So the difference is the pacer has to go ten seconds faster than the trotter to be worth the same money: that is, the pacer has to go in 2:20 to be worth as much as the trotter that goes in 2:30; this is why I think the difference should be made in the rules.

Rules seven and eight should be taken out entirely; for instance, a full-blood Percheron mare has a filly from a standard horse and this filly, half Percheron, bred to a standard horse again and drops a filly, and it is standard-bred. Rule eight is vice versa; just think of it, a quarter-blood Percheron trotting-bred! There is enough Percheron in that filly to kill the best trotting blood in the world. A trotter to win any money nowadays has got to go three trips inside of 2:30, and such blood to back up such speed will choke them before they reach the three-quarter pole, and you could not drive them to the wire a three-minute gait with a cat-o'-nine tails. I would rather have a trotter that keeps coming than one that keeps going, for if you have a six, eight or ten-heat race you have all the horses to beat and sometimes the judges, and if your horse keeps coming faster each heat you are very likely to beat the party, but if your horse keeps going back each heat, you will quite likely be at the tail end the last heat.

Blood will tell, so in order to have the best we must breed to the best. I will send you the rules as I have revised them, and I would like to hear the opinions of the breeders in this matter through your paper. The standard as I would have it is as follows;

1st. Any trotting stallion that has a record of two minutes and 30 seconds (2:30), or pacing stallion that has a record of two minutes and 20 seconds (2:20) or better, provided any of his get has a record of 2:30 trotting or 2:20 pacing, or better, or provided his sire or dam is already a standard animal.

2d. Any mare or gelding that has a trotting record of 2:30 or pacing record of 2:20 or better.

3d. Any horse that is the sire of two trotters with records of 2:30, or two pacers with records of 2:20 or better, provided his sire or dam is already a standard animal.

4th. Any horse that is the sire of one trotter with a record of 2:30, or one pacer with a record of 2:20 or better, provided he has either of the following qualifications: (1) A trotting record of 2:30 or a pacing record of 2:20 or better. (2). Is the sire of two other animals with trotting records of 2:30 or pacing records of 2:20, or one trotter with a record of 2:30 and one pacer with a record of 2:20 or better. (3) Has a sire or dam that is already a standard animal.

5th. Any mare that has produced a trotter with a record of 2.30 or pacer with a record of 2:20 or better.

7th. Any mare that has a trotting record of 2:30 or pacing record of 2:20 or better, whose sire or dam is a standard animal.

As much talk as there is about the English running turf, the winnings in stakes and purses during the past season in this country far overshadow those of the English thoroughbred-owners. The stable of Michael F. Dwyer, the Brooklyn turfman, won during 1891 in stakes and purses something over $179,000, J. A. and A. H. Morris, $158,000 David Gideon $145,532 and T. C. McLewee $105,800.

The following is a list of the winning sires whose get in England won on the flat £4,000 or over during 1891. St. Simon for the second year heads the list with a total of £26,860, whose two daughters, Sidnorina and La Fleche, contributed between them £12,386. Galopin comes second with £21,019, Gantlet, Flyaway and Galeopsis assisting to the amount of nearly £14,000. Barcaldine comes next with £20,533. Isonomy with £18,992, Common, the winner of the 2,000 Guineas, Derby, St. Leger and St. James Palace Stakes, putting £15,966 to the credit of his sire. Wisdom comes next with £17,833. Robert the Devil ranks sixth with £14,628. Hermit stands seventh with £13,183. Bend Or comes eighth with £12,843. Ormonde ranks next with £10,867. Petrarch comes tenth with £10,385. Below wil be seen the number of starters and number of races won. The amounts are net to the winners after taking out the winner stake, as computed by Messrs. Weatherby:

PENN'S GROVE, Cal., Jan. 4, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Messrs. Killip & Co. sold at public auction on Oct. 14, 1891, the bay filly Violet S., by Sultan S. 10,329, and on the authority of Mr. Henry Scott, the breeder, publicly stated that her dam May Queen, by ABBOTSFORD, was also the dam of Directress, 2:28¼. Now comes Mr. Neal, of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, who states in your columns (under date Dec. 26, '91):

"The dam of Directress, 2:28¼, is Aloha sired by A. W. RICHMOND, out of Guadalupe, by Crichton, etc." Then adds: "There is a Directress, however, that got a two-year-old record of 2:42¼ in 1888, that I think is out of the ELMO mare."

Now will Mr. Neal kindly inform us whether May Queen, by ABBOTSFORD, ever was bred to Director, 2:17, and if so, by whom, and when?

I own Violet S., and I believe Mr. Frank H. Burke owns May Queen, by Abbotsford, her dam—both of them were sold and bought at public auction, and, in connection with the former, statements were publicly made which have since been publicly denied. Will Messrs. A. Young, seller, and Henry Scott, the breeder of Violet S., and the Pleasanton Stock Farm, owner of Director 2:17, kindly and publicly set this matter straight, so far as in their power lies?

TROTTING COLT STAKES

Several New Stakes Opened at Salinas—The Entries Therein.

The annual meeting of the Monterey District Trotting Colt Stakes Association was held Saturday, December 26th, at the City Hall, Salinas. The meeting was called to order by President M. Lynn. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The report of the Treasurer, J. B. Iverson, was read and approved. The report shows that for the past year the Treasurer had paid out for stake money to the several winners, $950, and that there is on hand $135, being the entry money for the 27 entries in the stake of 1892.

The election of officers being in order, the old officers were re-elected by acclamation, as follows: M. Lynn, President; J. B. Iverson, Treasurer; C. Z. Hebert, Secretary.

On motion of M. J. Smeltzer and seconded by J. B. Iverson, a stake for trotting foals of 1891 to be trotted for in 1893 was opened with the following conditions, viz: That the stake be open to foals of 1891 in Monterey and San Benito counties, the entrance fee to be $50, of which $5 is to accompany nominations, $10 due January 1, 1893, $10 on June 1, 1893, and the last payment of $25 due September 1, 1893. Upon motion the time for receiving nominations was extended to February 1, 1892.

J. B. Iverson then made a motion, which was seconded by William Vanderhurst, that the conditions of the above stake be the same as last year, but upon the suggestion of J. D. Carr the motion was so amended as to make the money four moneys divided in 50, 25, 15 and 10 per cent., and to trot according to rule, distance not to be waived as heretofore. The following entries were then made:

J. D. Carr, blk c Little Joker by Gabilan, dam Bertha.

J. D. Carr, b. f. Happy Thought by Gabilan, dam by Carr's Mambrino.

J. D. Carr, b. c. Examiner by Gabilan, dam by Carr's Mambrino.

J. D. Carr, blk f. by Eugene, dam Flossie by Carr's Mambrino.

J. D. Carr, br. f. by Gabilan, dam by Elmo.

J. B. Iverson, b. f. Jenneer by Eugene, dam Jennie by Kingston (thoroughbred.)

J. B. Ivorson, b. f. Altoorina by Altoona 8850, dam by Mambrino 1789 (Carr's).

M Lynn, b. f. by Eugene dam by Gladiator.

M. Lynn, br. f. by Eugene dam Junietta by Junio.

M. J. Smeltzer, gr. f., by Altoona, dam Bessie B.

C. C. Allen. blk f., Black Swan, by Altoona, dam Black Diamond by Erwin Davis.

A three-year-old stake was upon motion ordered opened, to be trotted in 1892 for foals of 1889, open to Monterey and San Benito counties, $10 to accompany nominations which will close February 1st, 1892, $15 due June 1, 1892 $25 due September 1, 1892, the moneys to be divided in 60, 30 and 10 per cent. The following nominations were then made in this stake:

M. Lynn, gr. f. Violante, by Antevolo, dam by Pirate.

J. D. Carr, b f. Lucky Girl, by Carr's Mambrino.

J. D Carr, b. f. Little Change by Carr's Mambrino, dam Stelle D. by Elmo.

J. D. Carr, b. or br. c. Morning Star, by Hawthorne, dam Lizzie by Carr's Mambrino.

Z. Hebert & Son b. c., Bruno, by Junio, dam Dolly by Mozart.

A four-year-old stake to be trotted in 1892 open to Monterey and San Benito counties, the conditions the same as for the three-year-old stake, was then upon motion ordered opened.

The following entry was made;

William Vanderhurst, b. f., Salinas Maid, by Junio, dam Mamie V. by Carr's Mambrino.

The meeting then adjourned to the call of the chair.

A Paid Judge in the Stand.

The subject of having a paid judge in the stand, which was first broached in the columns of this journal, has become one of great importance. Nearly every prominent turf journal has had articles upon it, and all of them are strongly in favor of this much-needed reform. That able daily newspaper, the Newark Call, in its last issue, takes up the gage of battle and endorses every word thot has heretofore been said. The experiences of the writer, and the observations made, are similar to those that have been noticed by hundreds of others in this State during the races last fall:

"Much has been said and written lately upon the advisability of having a professional starter, in addition to the three judges, at all races conducted under the authority of the National Trotting Association. That there should be a professional starter is beyond question. The racing is seldom satisfactory all around without one. With the professional starter there should be at least one judge well versed in the rules, and, by all means, a stranger to the community where the race is given. The reason of this will be obvious. Time and time again the well-meant and judicially correct decisions of the qualified starter have been rendered nugatory by the obstinate and ignorant opinions of the other two judges. All the judges should be upright and well qualified for the position. There should be no question about this. The fact of a qualified starter being necessary, the next question is, how should he be secured. The association or track having to pay for the service, the managers will not surrender the right to select the man. It is doubtful if a rule compelling the employment of a professional starter would water if put to the test.

It is absolutely certain that a rule placing the selection in the hands of the National Association would be a dead letter from the start, and there are too many inoperative rules now. A rule recommending the selection of a competent professional, leaving the choice to the association, is about as far as the National Association could go with any expectation of reaching the end in view. The moment the National Association takes ground trenching on the prerogatives of the associations which pay the money, that moment there will be opposition, and with opposition comes weakness. The writer has had considerable experience in the judges' stand, as is well known, both in the capacity of starter and presiding judge, and therefore speaks with some hesitation on this matter; but it is his belief, confirmed by what he has gathered in conversation with track and association managers, that a rule taking from them the right to select their own judge would be extremely unpopular, and in nine cases out of ten would fail of enactment. A recommendation to the effect that where possible a professional started be employed, leaving the caprice of that individual to the track or association, would be well received and almost universally acted upon.

Whether three judges and a starter are employed or a starter and two judges, there should be a rule, emphatic and absolute, that not more than one of the judges should be from the community where the race is given. As remarked before, the best opinions and most righteous judgment of the professional may be negatived by his associates who stand in dread of or desire to favor or placate some local owner or driver. A case in the experience of the writer comes to mind now where he was powerless to punish a flagrant infraction of the rules by a local driver owing to the adverse decision of the associate judges, who were from the same neighborhood. It was an offense about which there could be no doubt; the foul, purposely committed, was apparent to every one. Feeling ran high over the matter and culminated in the starter retiring from the stand. The president of the association happened to be one of those fearless, honest men, not afraid to take the right side of a question, no matter who is hit. He sided with the starting judge and upheld him in his decision. He stated to the other two judges that under no circumstances would he permit the offense of the driver to be condoned, and the track should not suffer by the outrageous conduct of one man or the temporizing attitude of those in authority. Men of that calibre are few, unfortunately.

The position of starting judge is a very important one, and not so easily filled as some imagined. A peculiar feature which attends upon the position of the starter is the responsibility which attaches to him in the minds of the owners and drivers. No other judge in the stand is held accountable. To him alone attaches the censure for everything that occurs, and he alone is damned. It sometimes occurs that the starter will incur the animosity of a driver who has been disciplined, when the former was his sole defender and was outvoted by the other judges. A starting judge should be thoroughly acquainted with the rules, he should be a judge of men as well as horses, he should be firm, yet courteous in his demeanor, and conscientious enough not to be influenced by the ties of friendship. A conscientious presiding judge will have no friends in a race whose faults he will condone when an enforcement of the rules is required. And here is where drivers frequently make a mistake. They think that for friendship's sake a little the best of the start will be permitted, or they may indulge in a little more running than is permissible under the rules, and when they are checked they forswear friendship forever and declare they never will start a horse where that man is in the stand.

A man who is known to be an inveterate pool-buyer should not be permitted to occupy the judges' stand at a meeting where there is a pool-box. It is true that there are men who can hold pools on a race and still be capable of giving a just decision adverse to their interests. It is equally true that drivers have very little confidence in a judge whose pool-buying proclivities are known to be in the ascendant. In cases of close decisions the loser by the judgment will, whether justly or not, attribute the decision to the influence of the pool-box.

The Year's Work.

In the battle for supremacy among the different trotting families the past season, the Wilkes family, through the sons and daughters of George Wilkes, has held its own, but in point of the number of 2:30 performers Electioneer has taken the lead, and now has one hundred in the list, and it is only a question of time when he will be credited with a score more, and his sons and daughters are breeding on with great uniformity. Nutwood occupies the high position of the greatest of living sires, having seventy-seven of his get in the 2:30 list, while his sons and daughters are breeding on with a uniformity that makes it certain that his family will become one of the greatest of all families. The Wilkes family has branched out into a score of branch families, each one of which promises to attain greatness, and in many cases greater then that attained by their distinguished progenitor. The positions attained by George Wilkes, Electioneer and Nutwood, show that scientific breeding of the trotting horse has resolved itself into a simple question of a survival of the fittest. Only those individuals that demonstrate their greatness by transmitting it to their produce will retain a place in the temple of fame. Besides the three sires mentioned above, there are many others whose families occupy exceedingly high positions, including Dictator, Happy Medium, Belmont, Almont, Aberdeen, Strathmore and Mambrino Patchen, the latter gaining fame more generally through his daughters, although his son, Mambrino King, is in the front rank of race-horse sires. The daughters of Mambrino Patchen have now produced sixty-four performers with records of 2:30 or better, and another season will see them take a position above those of Hambletonian as successful producers.

There were plenty of great races during the past season, but there are some that call for extra mention. One of the earliest great races of the season was at Detroit, in July, when Temple Bar won the $10,000 stake for 2:24 trotters, losing the first heat to Prodigal in 2:17¼, and winning the next three in 2:17¾, 2:19¾ and 2:19½. Another great race at the same meeting was the 2:30 trot, which was won by Little Albert after fighting for six heats and taking a record of 2:20¾ A much greater race, however, in which the same horse contested, was at Hartford, in August, when it took nine heats to decide the $10,000 stake for 2:20 trotters. Miss Alice was the winner of the first heat in 2:17¾; Abbie V. of the next two in 2:18¼ and 2:19. The fourth heat was a dead heat between Little Albert and Nightingale in 2:19¾; Little Albert got the fifth in 2:18¾, Nightingale the sixth in 2:21¾, Little Albert the seventh in 2:21¼ and Nightingale the eighth and ninth in 2:21 and 2:25¼ The race between Nancy Hanks, Allerton and Margaret S., at Independence, Iowa, will long be remembered as the fastest ever trotted up to that time. In this race the incomparable Nancy Hanks reeled off three heats in 2:12, 2:12¾ and 2:12, but Allerton was close to her, and forced her to go each heat as fast as she did. Two other great races were those won by Allerton later in the season, defeating Nelson in one and Delmarch in the other. The race which was won by Temple Bar, at the Cleveland Circuit meeting, will be another one to be long remembered, but for different reasons than the others mentioned, for in it a noble horse was used for ignoble purposes, and the discovery of that fact resulted in the losing of that horse to the turf, as well as the expulsion of his owner and driver. It is a pity, however, that the instigators of the fraud, or in other words the purchasers of the horses' intended defeat, could not have been brought to justice along with the owner and driver. There is altogether too much ground for believing that they could have been discovered and been brought to punishment, and the failure to do so will blacken the reputation of the American trotting turf. Chloroform for Horses.

That chloroform is now universally regarded as a most important factor in veterinary, as well as in other medical circles, was evinced by an operation performed yesterday at the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania, in which, probably for the first time, this anæsthetic was employed with success upon an animal. Hitherto cocaine has been extensively used in operations of this kind, and in many veterinary departments no anæsthetic at all is used, the animal suffering intensely meanwhile. It is claimed that yesterday's result changes the present practice completely, substituting chloroform for all other similar agents now in use, with great gain to both veterinarian and animal.

The mare operated upon was brought to the department from Trevose, Bucks county, some time ago, by Dr. Ridge, in a wild and mettlesome condition, and unable to be restrained. The operation was performed by Prof Hargean and Dr. Ridge, assisted by Drs. Conrow and Entrikin, of the department. Cocaine was at first used locally, but it was found to be ineffectual. The suggestion was then made that chloroform, hitherto considered too dangerous a drug for use, be brought into requisition. It was due to this chance suggestion that the discovery of chloroform's benefit was made.

After the operation the animal walked leisurely to the stable apparently in the best of health.

The veterinary department also dismissed yesterday as entirely cured, a well-known horse—the bay gelding Limestone, record 2:19½, by The King, and purchased a few months ago by Samuel Fritz, a prominent manufacturer of this city, from the Eli Kindig's estate at a good round price. Limestone, four weeks ago, trod on a nail in the street, and the wound festering, induced supuration of the foot. For some time the hoof threatened to drop off, but the crisis was averted by an operation and careful treatment.—Philadelphia Times.

Interesting Statistics.

It is obligatory each year on the part of race track managements in the State of New York to submit a report of the number of days of racing, with the amount of gross receipts, to the State Controller, and at the same time checks for the State's 5 per cent. tax on the same. The time allotted for sending in such reports has not yet expired, although a number of the associations have submitted them.

While the reports thus far submitted are decidedly interesting, they will be still more so when the others come in. Only about one-half have thus far been sent in. The fact that the Brooklyn Jockey Club stands so high on the list will be a surprise to many in view of the trouble they have had both during the spring and fall. A comparison of the gross receipts of this year with the one of last year will prove still further interesting. It is as follows:

	Gross Receipts.
Brooklyn Jockey Club	$156,520 00	$138,753 00
New York Jockey	123 432 00	136,959.50
Monmouth Park Racing Association	103,052.00	———
Delhi Driving Park Association	467 40	———
Coney Island Jockey Club	158 850 40	306,667.00
Saratoga Racing Association	34,238 75	32,627.76
Orange Driving Park Association	1,782.00	———

The amount of taxes paid by the Brooklyn Jockey Club is $7,825.02 this year, while last year they paid $6 837.32, a difference of about $1,000. The New York Jockey Club paid this year $5,671.60, last year $6,847.98. Coney Island Jockey Club this year $7,941 52, last year, $10,333 35. Saratoga Racing Association $1,611.94, last year, $1,631 35 this year.

How to raise a colt by hand. The writer lost a mare last year when her colt was only three weeks old, and found it necessary to raise the latter by hand. Fresh cow's milk was fed, at first deluted about one-fourth with water and sweetened at the rate of one tablespoonful of sugar to the quart of milk. It was difficult to get the little fellow started to drinking, or rather it was started to sucking, for the finger was used during the first month. In two or three days, however, he took the milk with a relish, and for the first couple of weeks was fed at 4;30, 7;30 and 10:00 A. M , and 12:30, 3:00, 6:00 and 9:00 P. M., a pint or less being given at the start. This amount was gradually increased and the number of meals cut down in proportion, until at the end of a month only three meals a day were given. The little fellow soon began to eat oats, and was given all he wanted from the start with a little oil-meal added. The milk was not diluted or sweetened after the first month. After it got used to its new diet this colt grew right along and is as good a colt as any of the others of same age that sucked. I believe Stewart recommends a flaxseed ration in a case like this. The seed is boiled into a jelly before feeding. This would likely be beneficial, especially in keeping the bowels in healthy condition. My colt did nicely and seemed healthy all the time, the oil-meal fed having the same effect as the flaxseed. There is one thing that must be watched. If the colt is kept in a stall by itself most of the time, like a boy with nothing to do, it is likely to contract bad habits. Mine almost got into the disgusting habit of sucking wind before I noticed it. It was immediately turned with the colts into the pasture, and having company to play with and something to eat always before it, stopped the wind-sucking before the habit became fixed. Keep a close watch on the bowels and have colic medicine handy.

A developed trotter who has shown that he is strongly trotting-bred in his own performance and that of his get is worth many shekels more than he of the purple robe that has never been developed and depends for patronage on the bone and sinew of his far-away ancestors. While the force of heredity may be weaker than many breeders are willing to admit, yet it has a close and direct relation to the profits of the horse-breeder. To it in the majority of instances we charge the multitude of defects and diseases that attach themselves to the equine body. It is well to remember that inheritance for good or evil has its source of strenght in repitition. If the growing prevalence of hereditary disease is to be checked a refusal to patronize any horse or use any mare so afflicted is demanded of all. More important still, do not breed from animals that have the conformation that gives use to these diseases. Type is undoubtedly one of the most hereditary fixtures of animal life. The narrow knee, the straight pastern, the hock with weak foundation and little breadth is more to be shunned than the disease given birth to by them. A horse may be spavined and yet be fit for breeding purposes, provided the hock is constructed on right principles. On a properly built hock such a disease could only originate through a severe accident. Our best advice is shun the horses with small knees, for splints arise therefrom, avoid those with straight, short pasterns, for the triple diseases, sidebone, ringbone, and navicular diseases originate with them; and, above all things, pass by the spongy and gross or extremely narrow and crooked hocks, for such rarely fail to give birth to curbs, bog and bone spavins.

George Francis Schrieber, a prominent photographer of Philadelphia, and well known throughout the United States as a photographer of fine cattle and noted horses, died on the 3d inst. of bronchitis.

Colonel Harry I Thornton's fine filly Emma Nevada, by James Madison, 2:17¾, is at Stockton, and as soon as the weather moderates and the track is placed in good order she will trot close to 2:23.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Stockton Mail, got out a splendid almanac on New Year's Day, which was given away to each subscriber. It contains much interesting matter, and is well gotten up.

It is claimed that Marvin paints the legs of young trotters with iodine in order to strengthen them until they are two years of age. Many turfmen and trainers do not agree with Charles on this subject.

Don't forget that the fourth payment in the Goldan Gate Futurity purse of 1893 falls due on the 15th of this month. The purse will be a large one, sixty-two entries having made the third payment last June.

Trinket Girl, the handsome weanling by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Trinket 2:14, died from la grippe at the Hobart Stock Form last week. A number of other well-bred ones there are also under the veterinarian's watchful care.

Among the mares booked to Faustino, three-year-old race record 2:14¾, is the great young mare Kitty Wilkes, dam of St. Lookout, two-year-old record 2:26. This mare is owned by R. W. Davis, West Williamsfield, Ohio.

W. F. Vann has a fine-looking stallion by Whippleton at Arcata, Humboldt county. His dam is by imported Lawyer, second dam by Vick's Ethan Allen, third dam the Chiles mare, a mare brought here from Kentucky.

A number of broodmares and colts belonging to Huntly & Clark, of Montana, were shipped home Monday from Pleasanton, Cal. The owners will be highly pleased with the youngsters, as they were perfect little beauties.

W. O'B. McDonough, of this city, has purchased of a Sacramento gentleman the Australian mare, Mary Anderson, by The Drummer, dam Dolly Varden, by Lord Lynn, with weanling filly at her side by imp. Cheviot (full brother to Sir Modred).

The owner of Pleasanton Stock Farm advertises a little news in our columns which should not escape the eyes of our breeders. He offers the services of Direct for five approved mares previous to shipping him to Kentucky on the 15th of February.

Four Montana horses arrived at the Pleasanton Stock Farm Co.'s track last week to be bred and trained. They consist of Vero, with a record of 2:26¼, Lady Maxim, 2:27, a full brother to Direct four years old, and a black filly by Direct, three years old.

When Manette, the dam of Arion, 2:10¾, was at the Coutts place, before Senator Stanford bought it with all the stock and improvements, she used to be always able to get out of the way of the men, who, because of this and on account of her miserable appearance, nicknamed her "The Louse."

At Phœnix, Ariz., on December 31st, Iowa Chief won the final heats of a postponed trotting race in 2:38½, 2:37¾ and 2:35½. Outward was the favorite, had won two heats, the third being a dead one, but came out Thursday quite stiff.

Now is the time for owners of stallions to send in their advertisements to this journal. Its columns are read by every horseman on the Coast, and everyone who has heretofore advertised, acknowledges that it has paid them well.

Major Campbell Brown, of Spring Hill, has bred more 2:30 horses than any breeder in Tennessee, his number being ten. They are: Argot Wilkes, 2:18; Storm, 2:15¼; Andrew Allison, 2:22½; Tosa, 2:19¾: Hal Dillard, 2:23; Amorata, 2:28½; Optimist, 2:27; Morena, 2:28; Morelia, 2:27¾; Patasco, 2:24¾, the majority being pacers.

It has been generally supposed that the trotter Maud T., by Hamlin's Almont, died from injuries received in a railroad wreck, but such is not the case, as she is in Tennessee, and in foal to Norval, 2:17½, and is owned by George Fuller, the trainer at Hermitage Stud.

Monbars, 2:16½, we understand, is just recovering from an attack of pneumonia that came within an inch of carrying off the great son of Eagle Bird. A gentleman who visited Pleasanton Stock Farm the other day informed us that the colt had a blister on his side that was simply immense.

The dam of Mark Medium, 2:24 (by Almont Medium 2133), is Rena G., by Alcona 730, which shows that Fred Loeber's horse is something of a broodmare sire as well as a producer of speedy trotters. Rena G. was raised by A. C. Goodrich, Jordan Valley, Or., and is now owned by Mrs. A. C. Goodrich.

Jesse D. Potter has a Guy Wilkes colt, out of Bloomfield Maid that paces very fast. He calls him Bloomfield Boy, and if he hitches him alongside of the Piedmont stallion Charley C., 2:18¼, his half brother, Mr. Potter will have the best matched, as well as the fastest team of pacing stallions in this State.

The will of the well-known horse breeder, Colonel R. S. Strader, was probated at Lexington, Ky., on Monday. He left all his property to his wife and two sons, they being named as the executors, and he recommends that they carry on the business for a year, and then, if they think best, to continue indefinitely.

The California State Citrus Fair begins at Auburn, Cal., on the 11th inst. G. W. Hancock is directing affairs. Cash premiums to the extent of $2,500 will be given. All exhibits must be in position at 12 M., Tuesday, January 12th. Exhibitors should apply to or address Wm. B. Gester, General Superintendent Citrus Fair, Auburn, Cal.

The American Horse Monthly, of Detroit, Mich., got out a very good Christmas number containing articles instructive to the breeder and owner, while the picture of Electioneer is pronounced by those who should know the best picture of the dead monarch ever published. That of Sunol, however, is not a very good likeness of the queen of the turf.

Mamie C. (the dam of Azmoor, 2:20½, and Don Monteith, 2:29¾), by Hercules, made her initial appearance in the first selling race ever contested at the Bay District track. Governor Stanford was present, and bought her for $500. When asked why he purchased her, he said: "Well, I have a few thoroughbreds, and I may use her to raise trotters from."

Major Campbell Brown, of Ewell Farm, has one hind and one fore foot of the grand old mare Mary M. by Bassenger mounted in silver, and uses them for paper weights for his desk. Mary M. was the greatest mare ever on a Tennessee farm. She is the dam of Andante, 2:20½; Annie W., 2:20; McEwen, 2:18¼, etc. Two of her sons are in the stud at Ewell Farm.

John B. Pryor, one of the oldest turfmen in the country, died Sunday at his residence, at the Phalanx, near Red Bank, N. J. He was in his eighty-first year, and pneumonia was the cause of his death. He was born in Mississippi, and the greater part of his life had been devoted to the training of running horses. Next week we will give a sketch of his eventful life.

John Morrow and J. W. Russwurm each received a shoe worn by little Direct in his great race with Hal Pointer when he made the three heats in 2:09, 2:08, 2:08¾ at Columbia. The shoes were a Christmas present from George Starr, the driver of Direct. The shoes were so light that a two-cent stamp was all the postage necessary to bring them from California to Tennessee.

The New York Spirit of the Times' New Year's edition contained a number of excellent racing anecdotes, a review of the year's work that was most interesting, the champion table (trotters and pacers), breezy correspondence and its usual amount of news matter and editorial besides. Its tables are very valuable, and in fact the whole number is more than readable.

In looking over the wonderful record made by Director as a sire, would it not be a good compilation to figure up the earnings of his get on the turf—similar to the manner in which the lovers of thoroughbreds value their sires—by the amount of their earnings through their progeny? We venture the assertion that for his age no other stallion can come near him in this respect.

"Whitehat" Dan McCarty has an option on seventeen thoroughbred yearlings of the Hearst estate, the get of imp. Cheviot and Jim Brown, the price being $10,000. This is an average of $588.23 per head—a very fair price for the lot—but that McCarty could take the Cheviots East, where they are very well thought of, and sell them at big figures, is a good betting proposition.

The well-known athlete, Malcolm W. Ford, has had a cut made of a race track down hill all the way. The judges' stand is made at a narrow, high part of the course, which is over a mile long. The start is made, and the judges rush down a long flight of stairs to the other side of the stand, which is at the finishing line. It's pretty tough on the judges, but how the horses could tobogganize!

Gilbert Tompkins, of Souther Farm, San Leandro, has purchased of Fred W. Loeber, Vineland Stock Farm, Napa, Cal., a three-year-old filly by Grandissimo, 2:27¾, dam Belle Thorne, a two-year-old filly by Alcona 730, dam by Vick's Ethan Allen, and a yearling filly by Grandissimo, 2:27¾, dam by Whippleton. Mr. Tompkins is gathering some choice matrons for Souther Farm, surely.

Carnall, Hopkins & Co. have some of the finest tracts of land, suitable for stock farms, on their list, and, as they have the agency for them, they are endeavoring to dispose of them at the lowest possible price. California is the cradle and nursery of fine horses. All who invest in lands for the purpose of starting stock farms will never regret it, for a safer and surer way of making money than this is unknown.

Sixty acres of land near Monmouth, Ill, have been secured for mile track driving park association that was organized last week. A kite-shaped mile track will be laid out and the first meeting held next summer. Among the outside horsemen interested are Henry Stant, of Berwick, James A. Graham, of Biggsville, Holliday Bros, of Kirkwood, and John J. Ivey, Ralph P. Brownlee and Charles Allen, of Little York.

Sumner county, Tenn., seems to be rapidly becoming one of the chief centers of racehorse breeding in America, there being no less than twenty-one thoroughbred stallions standing there for service next spring, viz.: Glenelg, Padisha, Kosciusko, Blazes, Long Fish, St. Blaise, Long Taw, Exile, Misery, Forester, Muscovy, Cheviot, Viking, Timothy, Phœnix, Aretino, Bishop, Cartoon, Casino, Vanderbilt and Glenfisher.

G. L. Swan has the following horses in training at Oakland, and they are all doing very well: Steineer (full brother to Charles Derby, 2:20); Chandelier, by James Madison, out of Bessie Trotwood, by Abbotsford; Richland, by Richmond; a fine young stallion by Linwood, out of an Electioneer mare; a Monroe Chief gelding four years old; and the fine stallion Grand Moor is trotting very fast, and will enter the 2:30 list this year.

Andrew Smith, the well-known breeder of fine cattle, sheep and swine, died near Redwood City last Sunday. Mr. Smith was a very popular gentleman, a native of Canada, forty-five years of age, and had a wide acquaintance on this coast. The funeral took place last Thursday at 11 o'clock from his residence near Redwood City, and the interment was made at Odd Fellows' Cemetery, this city, at 3:30 p. m., a large number of friends attending.

W. H. Graham, of Seattle, has purchased the well known Coombs ranch, contisting of 320 acres, and situated northwest of town, says the Napa Journal. The consideration approximates $50,000, and the sale was effected through Conklin & Wood and L. H. Trainor. Mr. Graham is a man of family, and will make Napa his home. He will turn his attention to breeding and raising fine live stock. Mr. Graham has also purchased a large orchard near San Jose.

E. E. Chrisman, Secretary of the Columbia Driving Park, was married last Tuesday to Miss Josie Hunter, only daughter of Dr. Hunter, of Hendersonville, Tenn. The bride is a beautiful little lady, accomplished, and possesses all the qualifications that tend to make a lady in every acceptation of the term. Mr. Chrisman is one of the foremost young turfmen of Tennessee, and is one of our most valued correspondents. The young couple will make their home at Columbia.

Colonel William H. Churchill, a large owner in the Churchill Downs, the grounds of the Louisville Jockey Club, and one of the best known men in Kentucky, died week ago last Monday at his residence in Louisville. Deceased was seventy years of age, and of one of the pioneer families of Kentucky. His great-grandfather built the first house in that part of the State. He was a brother of Gov. Tom Churchill, of Arkansas, and of Mrs. Luke P. Blackburn, wife of the late Governor of Kentucky.

M. Kemper, of Napa county, is very justly proud of Alwood K. and his weanling half-brother (by Election). The latter, Mr. Kemper tells us, is far ahead of any youngster he has seen, for he can already trot an eighth in twenty-five seconds to halter. The colt, which is called Will Justus, is entered in the yearling stakes at the State Fair, Sacramento, and the public need not be surprised if he carries off the prize. Mr. Kemper also owns a grand-looking weanling by Mountain Boy.

Some of last year's crack two-year-olds were purchased for very small figures as yearlings. Dashing Belle sold for $180, Lester for $275, Johnny Hechacker for $280, Huron for $400, Charade for $350, Gorman and Zorling for $450 each, Ceverton for $625, and Leonawell $675. The now famous Yorkville Belle brought only $1,200 and Merry Monarch $1,350. His Highness won over $100,000 more than he cost as a yearling, which was $3,400: and the $2,500 paid for Tammany came back nearly 15-fold.

George Starr, the genial driver for the Pleasanton Stock Farm, was the recipient last week of a beautiful cane which was made in the Montana State Prison. It represents the race record of the most sensational horses of California, and is a marvel of fine carving and workmanship. The cane is cut away from the horses, leaving them standing out in relief. Each horse has his name and record engraved, the whole showing an endless amount of patience and hard work. It is heavily gold-mounted and elegantly worked.

The oldest mare that has come under our observation was Tansey, owned at Millersburg, Ohio. She was foaled January 4, 1845, and died April 24, 1891, and was therefore forty-six years, three months and twenty days old. At the age of twenty-nine years she produced a foal, and at thirty-two gave birth to a pair of twins. At the age of forty-five years she was again bred and appeared to be in foal. This is about the greatest record ever made by a broodmare in the line of fertility and longevity.—Western Horseman.

Mr. Case used to say: "I came to own Jay-Eye-See in this manner: I was in Chicago on my way to Kentucky and met George Brasfield, who has been superintendent of Colonel West's farm, near Lexington. I asked Brasfield to tell me of Colonel West's young stock, and his first memorandum was, 'Black colt, by Dictator, out of Midnight.' That was Jay-Eye-See. When I reached Kentucky the little black colt impressed me wonderfully. He was my choice from the first. I bought him for $500 and named him after myself. I paid the same amount for Phallas, also by Dictator."

Edward Goff, who graduated in the best trotting educational schools of the East, says in the Horseman: "I've learned a great deal in the school of experience about colts' feet, and find they are harder to keep in a healthy state than those of aged horses. You can do more to make a horse travel true and clear with both hind feet and reach out pure and straight forward by putting his feet in proper shape than you can with all the sideweights, spreaders and other contrivances of the kind that were ever invented. But it takes time to do it, as the hoof grows slow, and so the change is necessarily gradual."

J. E. Ducker, of this city, is in receipt of a most interesting letter from M. E Ketchum, Brighton, Ont., regarding the celebrated trotting dog, Doc. This wonderful canine light harness performer, he says, is credited with trotting miles much faster than he really did. However, Doc did trot a quarter to harness in 44 seconds, and a mile in 3:14, driven by Willie Ketchum, his young handler. This dog champion earned last season a trifle over $16,000. Mr. Ketchum talks of bringing Doc out to San Francisco, if a suitable place could be secured for exhibiting the wonder.

The thoroughbred stallion Jim Gore, by Hindoo, out of Katie by imp. Phæton, has been sold by Amos McCambell of Louisville to W. S Barnes of Lexington for $8,000. Jim Gore was one of the high-class racehorses of his day in the West, having won the Harold Stake at Latonia, the Carriage Builders' Stake at St. Louis and the Kenwood Stake at Chicago in his two-year-old form, and the Clark Stake, the Boulevard and the Drexel Stake and the Latonia and St. Louis Derbys in his three-year-old form. Three of his get have started in races, and all are winners, among them Gorman, the two-year-old colt that could beat anything of his age in the West excepting Yo Tambien.

Messrs. S. Sanford & Son, Amsterdam, N. Y., have purchased in England and imported to this country, where he arrived on December 16th, the brown horse Laureate, foaled 1879, bred by Mr. Gosden, by Rosicrucian, dam Laura (dam of Petrarch, imp. Rotherhill, Lemnos, Protomartyr, Faulien etc.), by Orlando, her dam Torment by Alarm, out of a daughter of Glencoe, her dam Alea by Whalebone, etc. Laureate was a fine performer in England, winning the Craven Stakes, the Biennial at Stockbridge, the Singleton Stakes at Goodwood, and other races, and has sired among other winners, Lullaby, Queen Laura, Stokesley, Frank Patros, Dagunos and Guinevere.

With moderate care and good usage a horse's life may be prolonged to twenty-five, thirty-five or forty years. An English gentleman had three horses which died in his possession at the ages of thirty-five, thirty-seven and thirty-nine years, respectively. The oldest was in a carriage the very day he died, strong and vigorous, but was carried off by spasmodic colic, to which he was subject. A horse in use at a riding school at Woolwich lived to be forty years old, and a barge horse on the Mersey, on the Irwell Navigation Company, is said to have been in his forty-second year when he died.

M. Byrnes, Eatontown, N. J., lost recently at Belle Meade Stud, Nashville, Tenn., the brood mare Ontario, chestnut, foaled 1865, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, dam Lady Lancaster, by imp. Monarch, her dam Lady Canton, by imp. Tranby, out of Mary Randolph, by Gohanna, etc. The following is a list of her produce: Kilburn, by Ringmaster; McCreary, by Enquirer; Curiosity, by Enquirer; McWhirter, by Enquirer; McHenry, by Enquirer; Grayson, by Enquirer; McDonald, by Enquirer; Lizzie McWhirter, by Enquirer; McElroy, by Enquirer; Heva, by imp. Mortemer; Hypasia, by imp. Mortemer; Heyday, by Iroquois; Rincocas, by Iroquois; McKeever, by Iroquois.

The assignee's auction sale of the track and property o the Kentucky Association took place at Lexington on Tuesday. Milton Young, representing a syndicate composed off the old Kentucky Association, and Major P. P. Johnston, informally representing the Kentucky Trotting-Horse Breeders' Association, were the contending bidders. The last bid made by Major Johnston was $95,000 and then Mr. Young bid $5 more, and the property was knocked down to him. James O Rogers, J. Hull Davidson, Milton Young, Will S. Barnes, James E. Pepper, T. J. Bush, Sanford Lyne, B. J. Treacy, D. D. Bell, John E. Madden, Gus Straus, Clay & Woodford, and a number of others, compose the syndicate A meeting for organization will be held this week. It is proposed to give a spring running meeting and hang up a larger amount of money than ever before.

The food of colts should vary. If they are to be broken and used daily, good, sound oats should be the main feed. If not to be worked, give winter wheat bran and one-tenth in the bulk of old process linseed meal. Carrots or the red mangold beets should be fed daily. The amount of feed should be carefully looked to, as any food in excess of the amount digested is not only not wanted but an injury promotingindigestion, colic and worms. A good magnifying glass will, by an examination of the droppings, show if the grain is all assimilated or not. You can keep the colt in good health and fine condition with a little care and not be orowding him with grain and then condition powders to try and counteract the over-feeding. The difference between the two plans means years in the life and usefulness, and if speed is the result aimed at the excessive feeding will spoil all chances of success.

The domestic animals, no less than man, require a variety of food to make healthful and nutritious diet. Watch a horse or cow feeding in pastures with various grasses. It is rare that one alone will be eaten unless it is far better than the others. There will be a bite here and another there, making altogether a more palatable mouthful than could either be alone. In the stables this choice is not often given as the hay is generally purchased for its uniformity, while a mixture, which really makes the best hay, is considered inferior. But even in the stable some variety is now regarded as necessary by the best farmers. Winter feed is mostly too dry. It is wonderfully benefited by adding a few roots. Timothy hay needs grain with it to make a full, nutritive ration for horses. It needs more grain than does clover hay. With the more concentrated oil or cotton seed meal, good clean straw can be largely used as part of the ration. It supplies the carbon or starch and heat, making materials more cheaply that they can be got in anything else used as food.

The Board of Control held a meeting in New York on December 22d and struck an effective blow at winter racing by adopting the following resolution: "Resolved, That owners, their horses, trainers and jockeys, racing on any course north of Maryland and east of Ohio, on which there is racing on December, January or February, or on more than thirty days in a calender year, shall not be qualified to enter, start, ride or have license for the races of the association represented in the Board of Control. But this resolution shall not take effect until January 1, 1892." The members present at the meeting were: A. J. Cassatt, D. D. Withers, John H. Morris, Phil Dwyer, J. G. K. Lawrence, John Hunter and Galway. Said one of the members: "This will divide the racing in the East into two classes—the legitimate and the illegitimate. Good horses will race on the big tracks and plugs on the winter tracks. The winter tracks will not be killed, of course; they will only be scotched. Pulsifer for instance, wouldn't risk the probable $50,000 that he might earn on a big track by running his horses for a $1,000 purse on a winter track."

The well-known car-horse Old Billy, owned by the West End Street Railway Company, of Boston, died at the stables of the company on Christmas day, aged forty-two years. This remarkable horse was a gray, of Morgan breed, and was raised in the State of Vermont. He worked on the cars in Boston for twenty-five years, and during that period traveled over 125,000 miles. He never lost a trip through sickness or inability. He has been on the retired list for a number of years. To the end he retained his remarkable shape, showing the points in which lay his wonderful powers of endurance. The veterinary surgeons of the company will prepare his skin for mounting by skilled taxidermists, in order that an imitation of this truly remarkable animal may be preserved.

Old Hickory Jim was entered one week ago Wednesday at Guttenburg. Jim, who is one of the privileged characters about the North Bergen track, is said to be nearly twenty-nine years of age, the oldest race horse in the country, and every day he visits each kitchen and eats cake and pie. The last time that old Hickory won was in 1888, November 8th, at Guttenburg. He ran three-quarters in 1:19½. with 102 pounds, beating Manhattan, Ranette Mattawan, Cloutarf, Saluda, Duke of Monroe, Nimrod, Theodore, Phil Thompson, The Boss and Sumner. He won by a head from Manhattan. The last race he ran was last year at Dallas, Tex., and he was among the "also rans" in the half-mile struggle. His owner, D. D. Davis, is greatly attached to the old gelding, and intends to race him once every year as long as he is able to stand it.

Boston, the great thoroughbred race horse, was a chestnut with white stockings and a white stripe in his face. Boston sired Lexington. When Green Mountain Maid was purchased by Chas. Backman, the breeder's certificate stated that her dam, Shanghai Mary, was sired by Lexington, but it was afterwards found that her breeding could not be traced. The Colman Stock Farm bred two years ago a solid bay mare by Monitor, her dam a solid bay mare by Clark Chief, to Elector, 2:21½, by Electioneer, son of Green Mountain Maid, whose dam was reported to be by Lexington, son of Boston. The progeny of this mare, bred to Elector, was a chestnut filly with white socks and a blaze, the precise color and marks of Boston. Some might be led to ask if this is not at least a straw of testimony towards showing that Lexington was the sire of Shanghai Mary? We have seen just such reversions of color in horses possessing strong characteristics, and particularly in thoroughbred horses. Glencoe blood in broodmares is particularly obstinate in perpetuating its color and marks even to the fifth or sixth generation, as we know by actual experience. That there was a reversion to some distant ancestor who had similar color and marks to the filly, there can be but little doubt.

R. L. Blakeman, of Lexington, Ky., a civil engineer who has built a number of trotting tracks, says: What is the scientific reason why a track with one turn should be faster than one with two turns? Because a body passing round a curve is subject to two motions or forces in conflict with each other, one force acting at right angles to the direction of the other. A portion of a horse's energy is used in getting forward, and another portion of his energy is used in turning as he goes round the turn. The same amount of force in the locomotive will pull the train faster when the railroad track is straight than it will when it is curved. If a regulation course, which has two turns, is as fast as a kite course, which has one turn, then by parity of reasoning a kite which has one turn is as fast as a straight-away course, which has no turn, which brings us face to face with an absurdity, for no one would deny that a course perfectly straight from end to end is the fastest possible shape for a track. The eccentricities and peculiarities of a few horses, that seem to work better on turns than anywhere else, is no disproof of the laws of motion and the experience of the majority of horses. No one questions the advantages, as conducing to speed and ease, of good, springy soil for the surface of a trotting track, but the above discussion is as to the main cause of the superiority in point of speed which the kite track undoubtedly possesses.

Matt Dwyer, who trained and handled the fast yearling, Athadon, and gave him the best race records for a half-mile in 1:14¼, the fastest mile 2:33, beat the champion record 2:29¾ five times this year, and retired the horse with the world's champion stallion record in 2:27, has quite a string of youngsters at Fresno. Among them is a magnificent brown three-year-old filly by Anteeo, out of a daughter of Nutwood 600. She is very fast, and will delight her owners as well as all who have an interest in the Anteeo family. Junio, 2.22, by Electioneer, is back in his old atall after his long trip to Kentucky and back. His colts are all very promising and of good size and color, Russ Wilkes, by Guy Wilkes, out of the Seymore mare is a good-looking three-year-old. The brother to this three-year-old is just two years of age, and all who see him say he is a "hummer." Devotion is a fine bay mare by Dexter Prince, dam by Peerless, by General Knox. She is a sister to Maggie, 2:26½, and is much speedier; Dot, 2:29½, by Apex, out of Ella, by Red Cloud, he by Kentucky Hunter, and a bay stallion called Oregen Boy by Altamont, out of a daughter of Alcona. Mr. Dwyer has also in his string a good-looking mare by a son of Nutwood that is owned by Mr. Bernard of Fresno. Electrican is the name of a very speedy colt by Election, out of Fanny Romulus by Romulus. The horses are all doing well, and under this careful trainer's guidance will be heard of before the circuit closes.

Mr. Easton, of Tattersall's, was not only a purchaser at the Newmarket sales in England for Mr. Belmont, but also secured three mares for Mr. Marcus Daly. These, like those procured for Mr. Belmont, are of exceptional breeding, and will certainly prove a benefit to the country. They are as follows: The Task, brown, two-year old filly, winner of the big Devonshire Nursery Stakes at Derby), by Barcaldine—Satchel (a very fast and speedy mare), by Golopin; second dam Quiver (dam of Memoir, a St. Leger winner, and La Fleche, the best two-year-old filly this year), by Toxopholita: price $5,000. Countess Therry, six-year-old chestnut mare, by Barcaldine—Miss Edith, by Doncaster; second dam Edith, by Newminster; served by Marden; price $5000. Isis, four-year-old chestnut mare, by Bend Or (winner of the Derby),—Shotover (winner of the Derby), by Hermit; second dam Stray Shot, by Toxopholite; price $5,000. Another interesting item at these sales was the disposal of the late Mr. W. L. Scott's brown mare Rosamonde, by Hermit—Enquerrande (winner of the Oaks), by Vermont; second dam Delhane, by the Flying Dutchman; covered by Barcaldine; she was sold to Mr. Blundell Maple (the purchaser for $75,000 of the triple winner Common, for $8,000. Besides purchasing the mares for Mr. Belmont and Mr. Marcus Daly, the managing director of ourTattersall's bought some other well-bred mares at cheaper prices, which no doubt were a speculation on his part.

Gilbert Wæscher, of Alexandria, Minn., proposes to travel around the world on horseback, starting from Chicago, Feb. 1 next, and riding to New York, where he will take a steamer for Havre. Wæscher will then ride from Havre to Berlin via Paris, and then to Moscow, Russia, which place he expects to reach in June. From there he will proceed to Russian Siberia, thence to Western China, and then to Pekin. He expects to reach the Chinese capital in February, 1893. He will then put his horse on board a steamship and proceed to San Francisco. He will cross the Rocky Mountains over the old Pacific trail to Chicago, where he expects to arrive in July. Wæscher stands six feet two inches in height and weighs 185 pounds. He was born in the province of Westphalia, Germany, on January 8, 1856. He will take his own horse for the journey, and expects te bring it back to exhibit at the World's Fair, if the animal survives the trip.

The following is what W. Naylor, of Smithfield, O,, has to say upon ringers: "My opinion is that the laws of the two associations are sufficiently strong and severe to prevent ringing and all other crookedness in drivers if enforced. The penalty for ringing a horse is expulsion of driver and horse now: how can the license law make it any more severe? The license system, if adopted, will place the owners of racehorses at the mercy of drivers. The drivers will organize a Drivers' Union for their own protection. Now if a driver is suspicioned for not driving e horse out in a race, the only alternative the owner has is to let another licensed man take the lines: both men belonging to the Drivers' Union, they will certainly drive to each other's interest. So in order to protect driver No 1, No. 2 will not drive the horse out. So the poor owner is compelled to submit. The Drivers' Organization or Union can legislate to fix prices for driving to suit themselves and compel others to pay them, as none but licensed men could drive. I hear some say, license drivers and make the license extremely high. This would be monopoly. Drivers in limited circumstances would be deprived of the privilege of driving, even if they were the best of reinsmen."

"There are many critics on a race course at all times," pleasantly remarked an old turfite to-day. "But I have a word I would like to say. It is this: I am sick and tired of these old-fashioned judges' stands. They breed contempt. Let me explain. At Detroit the turfit have an idea that Campau's word is supreme, no matter who the judges are. At Cleveland it is all Fasig. He is the chief mogul. At Buffalo it is the Hamlins. Now, this may be all wrong to condemn people in this way when there is no substantial proof for conviction, but I do think that a change should be made, and the sooner the better. I would advocate that the judges' stand at all three places should be blown up with dynamite if you can't get rid of them in any other way. Why? Because they are always crowded with outside parties who have no legal right in them. It is a place for the judges and judges alone, not the President, Secretary, or their relatives or friends. I would advocate a judges' stand just large enough to hold three or four persons, and no more. Every loving friend or 'prominent' business man would not be running over the course then to get a seat and a good view. It is nonsense to crowd a stand, and many times the opinion of an outsider influences the judges. At least this is the prevailing opinion, and the sooner the old stands are done away with, the better will be the satisfaction of the public. I have no axes to grind, but do love fair play."—Spirit of the Times.

When lovers of the turf were brought face to face with the fact that the incomparable stable which had been the late Mr. August Belmont's pride was dispersed throughout the country they felt as if a dull thud had struck the interests of racing. However, a slight relief was experienced when it was learned that his sons, August and Oliver, had not permitted every occupant of the stable to go out of the family. Since then news comes to hand from England of some important purchases of Mr. Easton in the Belmont interests—important, because he has secured five of the finest-bred mares to be found in that country, in fact, a quintet which have never been surpassed as regards the importation of one lot in the history of our turf. They comprise the following: Katharine II, two years old, winner of this years's Brocklesby Stakes at Lincoln, a daughter of the great and undefeated St. Simon and Muirinn (own sister to the Derby winner, Melton's, dam, Violet Melrose) by Scottish Chief; second dam Violet (sister to Feronia, dam of the stake winner, St. Serf, and Alanta, the Derby winner Ayrshire's dam), by Thormanby: price $7,590, Royal Nun, three years old, a speedy one and a winner, by Hermit—Princess Mary II, by Toxopholite; second dam by Y. Melbourne; served by Ayreshire; price $500. Dancing Water, four-year-old brown mare, by Isonomy—Pretty Dance, by Doncaster; second dam, Highland Fling (dam of Saraband and Superba), by Scottish Chief: served by the expatriated Foxhall; price $4,000. Cinderella, winner of the Greatwicke Stakes, three-year-old cheetnut mare, by Hermit—Mazurka, by See Saw; second dam Mabille, by Parmesan; served by Chitabob; price $3,000. Citronella, two years, by St. Simon—Marquesa, by Blair Athol; second dam Murcia, by Lord of the Isles; price $2,600.

Secretary Bainbridge, of the Victoria Racing Association, has been in the city for the past few days conferring with local horsemen about a new circuit to comprise probably Victoria, Seattle, Tacoma, Kent, Portland and Salem, says the Portland Oregonian of a recent date. The idea seems to be favorably received by those interested, and it is a safe prediction that Secretary Bainbridge's efforts will bear fruit. The circuit may not be comprised exactly as stated above, but these are the cities which are directly in line, and would make a chain of very convenient links. It is generally hoped that something will come of the matter, as the circuit now in operation is the cause of much trouble. Each wing has complaint that it is being neglected by the other, and so they have it among them. Then again the jump to Montana is a long one, and much danger is run by transporting valuable blood stock so far in the cars. There have been numerous rumblings of discontent, but no definite action of any sort has come up until the present. At the urgent request of a number of citizens and the horsemen of this section of country, the Portland Speed Association has decided to give both spring and fall meetings in 1892. This action is commendable in face of the poor support extended the association in their past meetings. Few people really appreciate the large amount of money and great number of people that are attracted to see a good lot of races. Those which have so far taken place under the auspices of the local association have been good ones, but they were really supported in such a manner that it is a wonder that the attempt will be made again in the face of the disheartening past. This is the third year of the association, which is composed of some of the most prominent and honorable gentlemen in this city, who hang up the largest purses on the coast, so the public should not hesitate to encourage them in their efforts to improve the breeding of fine horseflesh in Oregon.

THE GUN.

The California Quail.

BY CHARLES WESLEY KYLE.

The sportmen of the Golden State
Persues thee to a cruel fate,
From morning bright till evening late
With trained canine,
He tramps thy haunts with thoughts elate
On thee to dine.

He hears thy whistling call "Whee-we,"
Echoing oft in accents free,
From mountain ranges to the sea,
As from thy throat
Issues thy hailing melody
In quavering note.

In vain thou seekest cover deep,
Thy hiding place thou canst not keep,
The very air thy odors steep,
And thus betray
Thy presence when thou wake or sleep,
By night or day.

The sportsman's dog with nostrils fine,
Scents out thy home and gives the sign,
And they together thus combine
To do thee ill:
But thou full oft escape design
Of scent and skill.

Ducking On the Sabine.

Something better than a year ago I found myself in Galveston, Texas. The time of which I speak was about the middle of January and the "northers" were frequent. These consist of heavy rains which falling in blinding sheets cover the surface of the all-too-level country with water. The marshes a djoining and the streams flowing into the Gulf of Mexico are particularly favorable to the aquatic birds and they there annually assemble in great numbers—in fact the collection of these birds of every known variety is simply enormous. The natural conditions are perfect for their comfort; food of the choicest nature is here presented in the greatest abundance. Wild rice, seed grasses and bulbous roots form the vegetation principally of the swamps and river banks which practically comprise the whole surface of the country, as the streams at the season mentioned are mostly overflowing and the back water or overflow lies over the country forming lakes in every depression of the soil.

I had been out several times near the city and in comparative open country had been enjoying what I considered good sport, never returning without very fair bags composed of pretty evenly divided game between mallards and sprigs, these birds being given to frequenting the open where I had been hunting more than any of the other numerous varieties. One day as I was making ready to go out on one of these not infrequent tramps I was brought to an "attention" from my acts of preparation by a knock at my room door. In answer to my "Come in" the door slowly opened and there stood before me an old darkie with his battered hat in his hand while he was bowing and scraping with all the solemnity and graciousness which his nature could command.

As I stared at him in mingled surprise and amusement he said: "Be dis huh Kunnel Jones ob Denver?" I assented to his query when he continued "De gem'lin' wot be so pow'ful fond ob shootin, ob de ducks?", I again returned an affirmative answer.

"Does yo' own de little spaniel dawg wot swim out frum de boat and get de ducks when yo' tumble 'em in de bay an' pond, an' wot brung 'em back all by hissef?" Yes, I replied, I have such a dog and he retrieves everything I shoot, nicely.

"Den sah yo' be de man wot Marse Will been wanten fur ter see fur some time. Marse Will, he say ez how he's gwinter' go to de S'bine ribber an' de marshes dar 'bouts fer ter kill de ducks, an' he wants fur ter know ef yo' wouldn't mos' likely prefer goin' 'long wid he an' Marse Trimble."

"Marse Will, he done send yo' dis huh note."

I took the missive and found it to be a very polite and cordial invitation to attend with the writer and a few companions a grand duck hunt on the marshes, at the mouth of the Sabine river, the start to be made in a couple of days. The note suggested the writer's inability to call in person, but informed me that the invitation was due to the suggestion of my new friend, the popular sporting goods dealer, to whom I had confide the successes and failures of my hunting trips about that immediate section of the country.

The succeeding day I had the pleasure of meeting the two gentlemen in question and around an impromptu board we discussed those subjects of usual interest to sportsmen on occasions of a like nature and perfected our plans and arrangements for the coming outing. These preparations, on my part, consisted in my receiving the information that at the head of the Sabine river, bordering on the gulf was a vast stretch of marsh which stretched away on the immediate line of contact with the gulf for many, many miles and reached back into the interior along the Sabine river for a distance of forty miles or more up to Orange, Texas, and even beyond. These marshes I was informed, was covered with tules, wild-rice and other rank growth of marsh products which grew to a sufficient height to perfectly conceal a small row boat for two or more persons which could be pushed about in the many small narrow channels which wound around through the marsh like a netting.

The boats could be pushed into the tules at almost any point and by bending down a few stalks of the natural cover, a perfect blind could be instantly secured. Added to all this was the information that not for years had there been such an influx of ducks as now appeared on these choice hunting grounds of the entire Texas border.

To say I was delighted with the prospect but faintly expresses my feelings. I was carried away with the vivid picture which had been drawn by the description of the grounds and birds as given by my friends. We parted with mutual feelings of pleasurable anticipation as to the result of our outing. This was on Saturday evening; on the next afternoon we were to start out on our journey.

It had been agreed that we go by rail to Houston and thence by the Texas East and West narrow guage line to Orange which is the principal lumber manufacturing point of southeastern Texas situated on the banks of the Sabine river and about forty miles from the Gulf. Here we arrived in due time and found that ample provisions for our arrival and comfort had been made. Mr. Lutcher, the lumber king of the Southeast, had cheerfully placed at the disposal of our party his beautiful little steam launch and with it a number of row boats with all the paraphernalia of a huntsman bound for the marshes for an indefinite period.

The entire country east of Houston was almost covered with water. Every open space in the timber where the birds could settle in the "back water" on the bottoms adjoining the streams the ducks would collect in great numbers. It was early in the morning, that our party augmented, by a number of local sportsmen, so that we all told numbered about a dozen, steamed away down the rapid, boiling current of the Sabine towards the gulf.

After passing down stream about fifteen miles we came to anchor and prepared to spend the day and evening in sport. Most of the gentlemen were compelled to "double up," that is, two hunters to a boat, but in this I was favored and old Ned, the darkie who had brought me the note of invitation to attend, was given me as a guide and for the purpose of managing the boat for me.

As I sat in the stern of the light little craft facing the old man I had a good opportunity to study his countenance. He was one of those naturally good old souls which one cannot fail to recognize, whether the intelligence be wrapped up in a white or colored covering. His hair and short wirey eyebrows and beard were of the purest white, the latter circling his face and chin, joining his hair at either side and completely framing his ebony features, giving te him a most peculiar and interesting appearance.

We had been assigned a position nearly a mile away to our left and the old man settled himself and took hold of the oars with the air of one who was perfectly familiar with his task, and so he proved.

As we glided along through the narrow channel of the course taken, we would occasionally brush up against the overhanging tules and ever and anon a pair of mallards would spring irom cover and sail away, but we did not pause to note their presence.

Uncle Ned, finding me indisposed to talk after several inspectnal attempts to lead me into conversation, finally fell to humming snatches of song in that low and peculiarly melodious voice which has ever been so marked a characteristic of his race.

One of his favorites was as follows:

De Lawd is gwienter save my soul
Gwien fer ter save me now
Lawd let salvation oler me roll,
Turn loose de pow'r jes now.

Turn loose de pow'r in de mawnin'
Turn loose de pow'r in de mawnin'
Turn loose de pow'r in de mawnin'
Gwien fer t r save me now.

All yo' sinners hab better look out,
Listen to de warnin bell;
Huh my voice when de warnin' I shout
Beware ob de flames ob hell!

No one can understand the amount of music which the uncultivated Negro can throw into a song of this nature. The remarkable fervor and earnestness of their whole nature finds expression in just such ridiculous stuff which, severed from the wondrous melody of their voice and the wierd music of their creation, is as the dry husk when compared in taste to the ripe, rich, luscious fruit which it erstwhile held in its clasp.

"It was mawnin'," and Old Ned with every repetition of the words "Turn loose de pow'r in the mawnin' " proceded to suit his action to the words and as a result we were being shot over the water like we were contesting for first honors at a sculling race. As a result we soon found ourselves at our destination.

Old Ned proved to be a veritable aid in the matter of furnishing me an abundance of sport.

"Hyar, Kunnel, Ize gwinter gib yo' de most pow'fulest day's shootin' ob de duck wot yo' ebber sperienced. Yo' see, Kunnel, dat Ize done been huh many's de day 'long wif Marse Will, an' Ize gwinter show 'em dat we kin bring in de ducks moah ez most enny ob 'em."

"All right," I said, "you just arrange matters to begin with, and if your plan does not work, then it will be time to try somethingelse."

I could see that the old man was highly elated in my acquiescence in his plans and suggestions, and was ready and anxious to do any and everything possible to render my bag for the day as large as possible.

"Golly! Kunnel, do yo' see dem clouds an' clouds ob ducks wot am comin' up de ribber? Dey be shoahly skeert up frum de lake by Marse Will an' Mister Tremble. Golly! but dey be comin' right dis huh way!"

Sure enough, they came in veritable clouds, and as the first came over at close range I singled out two fine birds, and they dropped into the water near.

With a bound my little black cocker was after them, and soon was busy bringing in the birds, for they seemed to pay no heed to my shooting, but just came on and on in countless numbers.

"Dis huh do beat all de huntins Ize ebber seed; clar ter goodness ef de ducks ain't comin' ez de lamb ter de slaughter. Golly! dat feller am down! 'Clar ter goodness, dar am some moah dead ducks! Good Lawd! but dey do be fannin' us wid der wings ter keep off der skeeters."

"Hyar, Kunnel Jones, doant yo' spose dat et am 'special Providence wot sent de ducks huh so's we could hab de boss shootin'?" asked the old man, when the first lull came in the flight of the birds.

"Yes, Uncle Ned, it seems to be considered so by those who believe in special Providences, for I have always observed that when anyone had an extraordinary streak of good fortune they felt like thanking some one, and when, in cases like this, they find no human or visible agency to thank, they turn, perforce, to the Unknown, and mark it down to the credit of their own natures, and with flattering unction proclaim it to be a special Providence.

"Dar, now, Kunnel; pears ter dis huh old man like yo' don't no how pos'ble seem ter be 'bleged ter de Lawd fer good duckin'." Ize pow'ful thankful, I is, fer de ducks."

There now, you old rascal, if you will put me out on that shell mound there to the right of that open body of water, and then take the canoe and paddle off down yonder where you see the ducks settling and stir them up so they will fly about, I may get some more.

"Jest ez yo' says, Kunnel, jest ez yo' says; Ize allus thankin' de Lowd fer de ducks. Man didn't make de ducks, so co's Ize gotter thank de good Lowd fer 'em co's He made 'em."

Thus mumbling away to himself the old man occupied the time until he had landed me as desired, and the last words that reached my ears as the old man paddled off to stir up the ducks from below was:

"Hyar, Kunnel, tank de Lawd, huh comes moah ducks!"

And they kept coming. Almost as fast as I could load and shoot was the next hour improved, and the birds fell thick and fast simply because the shooting was easy, the birds plentiful and the cover perfect.

Never before had I known what it was to have more chances offered by the birds than I could improve, at least for any great length of time, but for some time shots were offered before I could possibly reload my gun.

Then came a lull in the sport and I lay down on the shell mound and enjoyed a cigar, and presently up came Uncle Ned and we enjoyed our luncheon and waited until the evening hour should mark the next flight of the birds. Of course, here and there all over the marsh, as far as the eye could see, were birds flying about in pairs, singly and in small flocks, but, as every sportsman knows, the great body of the birds move about in the evening and morning. It was late, quite dusk, when we returned to the launch, and to my gratification and the old man's inexpressible joy, we found that only one boat, even with two guns, led us in the number of birds brought to bag.

On the Western Plains.

The stranger and his dog were not questioned until the man was clothed and both had had a couple of days' feasting and rest. After his first breakfast the man's appetite returned, and for two days man and dog did scarcely anything but eat and sleep. When interrogated, the dog wagged his tail; his eyes beamed with gratitude, and in expressive dog language he barked an acknowledgment of the kind treatment and hospitality received. The dog was appreciative and gave voice to his appreciation, but the man was reticent and uncommunicative, not to say sullen. When questioned as to what brought him to his present condition he answered nothing, but seemed to be studying over in his mind some harrowing tale to tell. We waited patiently for him to get ready to speak. At length he broke forth with: "Gentlemen, can you give me a drink of whiskey?"

The request rather "stumped" us. We each had a flask of old Bourbon in our saddle-bags, besides a small quantity in the pack, provided more for medicine than as a beverage, and as none of us drank spirits, nor had been sick, the whiskey was almost forgotten. We were curious to have the mystery of his appearance in that solitude of wilderness solved, and if a drink of whiskey would unravel him, he was more than welcome to it. Cooper pro-offered his flask. The stranger grasped it eagerly, placed it to his lips and drank two-thirds of it without winking, then, with a long-drawn breath of satisfaction, placed the flask with what remained of its contents in the inside pocket of his shirt, also a gift from Cooper. The stranger looked at Cooper with a "Thank you, sir." Cooper looked at the stranger with blank amazement pictured on his face, but he said nothing. It was the first time that I had seen Cooper disconcerted. The cool impudence of the stranger—I think he would be called a tramp in these days—was too much for Cooper's philosophy and equanimity. He turned abruptly on his heel, walked to his saddle, sat down upon it, rested his elbows on his knees and thought unutterable thoughts.

Soon the generous draught of whiskey the stranger had taken unlocked his heart and unloosed his tongue. He told a wondrous tale in which Munchausen, Gulliver and Sinbad were about equally mixed. It is impossible to recount his narrative, which was rehearsed in flowing sentence and rounded periods. The jist of it was that his name was John Thompson; that he was born a gentleman in the State of Michigan; that his parents and other relatives were wealthy and distinguished people; that he had received a liberal education, and been graduated from Ann Arbon with the degrees A. M. and M. D. He had been connected in an official capacity with some asylum or hospital in his native State, but becoming tired of his work, and being of an adventurous disposition, and desirous of seeing more of the world, especially the wild west, had associated himself with a company that was going to Pike's Peak in search of gold. On the journey they met many returning parties from the Pike's Peak country who gave very discouraging accounts of the prospects in that region, and his party concluded, rather than retrace their steps, to push on to California. He said that while travelling up the North Platte he had been taken sick with fever, robbed by his comrades and left on the wayside to die or recover as Fate might determine. When he awakened from the delirium of fever he found himself abandoned and destitute. No clothing except what would barely cover his nakedness; no food and no arms, though he had been well supplied with them. His dog, faithful to the last, remained with him.

For three days he had wandered, not knowing whither he was going, nor how, if ever, except in death, his troubles would terminate. His dog, ever faithful, stuck by him. He had been wandering over the plain, lying down to sleep wherever night overtook him, with only his dog lying beside him to keep him warm.

On the morning in which he strayed into camp he wakened early, shivering with hunger and cold and had descried the glimmer of our camp-fire. Not knowing nor careing a "tunker's dam", whether it was the camp-fire of friend or foe, of civilized man or savage: he wended his way thitherward reckless of results. He had made up his mind that he would end his troubles in some manner and that there was but little choice between the scalping knife of ye gentle savage and starvation. If he struck the camp of a party of Indians he would be either killed or relieved just as the spirit moved ye gentle savage and it made but little difference to him which way it terminated, so that his sufferings were ended. He was happy, however, that instead of a savage, implacable he had fallen in with civilized men.

We listened to his yarn with respectful attention, but didn't take much stock in it. It was swallowed with several grains of salt to take the bitter taste of it from our gustatory nerves. We didn't believe his yarn but said nothing and awaited further developements. The unanimous opinion was that he was a whiskey fiend: had got drunk and lain down on some obscure corner in alcoholic stupor and his comrades, not being able to find him—which probably was a welcome fact to them—had pushed forward and left him to his fate. His dog staid by him.

It is wonderful how a dog will attach himself to a vagabond and stand by him to the last; through evil report and good report; through fasting as well as feasting. Probably there are good traits in all men however depraved their natures, and the dog recognizes them and is grateful for kind treatment from whatever hand it comes, which is more than can be truthfully said of many men. While the Doctor was rehearsing his tale, the dog, whose cognomen was York, lay on the ground in front of him and watched him with wistful, approving eye, and, as the story progressed would occasionally beat the ground with tail approvingly, as if he understood every word of it, and would say: You are giving them the straight tip old comrade."

There was one thing noticeable; the stock of whiskey diminished rapidly after the advent of Dr. Thompson and was soon exhausted. Sometimes he and his dog would be left in charge of camp while the rest of us strolled and hunted, and he, doubtless, went through the saddle-bags in search of his favorite beverage. A man who has become the victim of alcololism, though he may be honest in other things, will steal to gratify his morbid thirst for liquor. B. T. C.

OCCIDENTAL COURSING CLUB.

Coursing at Newark, Cal.

Special Report.]

The New Year's meeting of the Occidental Coursing Club at Newark, Cal., on January 1st, was unquestionably the most successful meet ever held by that club, and, barring Merced, the most successful meeting ever held on this coast. The club has ever been noted for its uprightness and straightforward methods; on this occasion it fairly excelled itself. The best of order prevailed throughout the meeting, and too much credit cannot be given the field officers and the management in general for their efficient work. The park has undergone many substantiel improvements since the last meeting of the club.

The kennels, grand stand, fences and outbuildings have been thoroughly repaired and a new escape for the hares at the east end of the park gives the hares another chance for their lives, of which they were not slow to take advantage.

The hares were as strong and lively a lot as were ever coursed, many of them escaping after leading the dogs the complete circuit of the park.

The attendance was not very large, doubtless owing to the inclement weather; it threatened rain all day, but not a drop fell to mar the pleasure of the spectators. The judging was done by Mr. John Grace in his usual efficient manner; we failed to hear one complaint. Mr. Jamas Wren acted as slipper, and, as all Californians know, a better slipper does not exist. The officers of the club are Mr. J. F. Carroll, President; J. R. Dickson, Secretary; S. L. Abbott, Jr., Treasurer. The officers of this particular meet were J R. Dickson, Slip Steward; P. Gallagher, Flag Steward; F. C. Zimmerman, H. Wormington and Thos. J. O'Keefe, Field Steward.

Last, but not least, we come to the dogs. We would like to make especial note of each and every one, but space will not admit. Suffice it to say that the cream of the coast was present; winners at every meet of consequence in California; Joe McAuliffe, the winner of the recent Merced meeting, and Al Farrow, the winner of the Merced meeting of 1890, besides many others nearly as well known. Most of them were in the finest fettle imaginable.

The ground was also in the best of condition for coursing, a trifle muddy about the grand stand, but just firm enough afield.

The thirty-two dog stake was started at 10:45 A. M. and finished at 3:45 P. M., with an intermission at noon of thirty minutes, in which to enjoy the turkey luncheon provided by Mr. Dugan. The first dogs placed in the slips were Mr. James Watson's Great Expectations, and W H. McCoomb's John L Sullivan. Great Expectations led in the run up for one hundred yards or so, but in crossing the ditch he got his eyes full of water and lost sight of the hare, John L. getting a long lead on him in the meantime; he soon caught up, however, worked his hare well and stayed with it until the finish, when the hare escaped, Great Expectations winning handily. He is by Saturday Night, and is a very quick, promising dog.

The owner of John L. Sullivan, Mr. W. H. McCoombs, of Santa Clara county, was the only drawback to the day's enjoyment; for thorough low-down rowdyism and foghorn eloquence he takes first premium. He should have been put off the grounds as a disgrace to any civilized community.

T. J. Cronin's Kathleen vs. P. D Nolan's Valley Queen—Kathleen is well known as winner of third at Great Bend and other local events. She is a trim, little, white bitch with black markings, in fine fettle, as Mr. Cronin's dogs always are. Valley Queen, an old favoite of ours, winner of the meeting at this same place a year ago, is an unusually fine bench dog, winning first and special at the last bench show. This course was as hotly contested as any ever run. Valley Queen led from the slips, but Kathleen put in a burst of speed and won a hotly contested go by. The hare was a very strong one, but the pace was too much for him. Valley Queen soon took the lead again; the hare turned frequently, and although the dogs were close together, Valley Queen made the turns, and although naturally she was on the outside of every turn, when the hare turned again she was invariably ahead, outfooting Kathleen from start to finish, killed and won. We doubt if a more evenly matched race was ever run; from start to finish of a long course there was never over a rod between the two bitches. The excitement was intense.

The next pair to the slips were W. E. Wadham's Headlight and B. Lougherty's Lackawanna. Headlight is a fine large black and white dog. Lackawanna is a promising fawn bitch. Headlight led by many lengths in the run up. Lackawanna came in on the first turn each, taking a turn alternately, Headlight killed. Judge Grace decided it a "no go" as points were even and they were slipped again almost immediately. Lackawanna led the run up and kept steadily drawing away from her opponent. The hare made a bee line for the escape and reached it by making one turn, Lackawanna winning the course.

T. J. Cooney's Queen Bess vs. T. A. King's Moonlight—Queen Bess is the little black bitch that won the sapling stake last spring. Moonlight led the run up, but did not hold his head. The hare was a good one and it was give and take the entire course, with Bess a bit the best of it.

P. Curtis' Skyrocket vs. J. F. Carroll's Monarch III.

They started like a double team, Skyrocket reaching the hare a trifle ahead. Monarch III then bent his back and took the hare from his opponent and kept it for several turns and a kill. Monarch III, though about the largest dog on the turf to-day, is wonderful quick in turning. He is the dog that jumped the escape fence with Scout last spring.

Jas. Byrne's Nellie Bly vs. John Harkin's Castlegoldin—Nellie Bly, a Merced runner and winner at several smaller meetings, is a very neat one. The favorite, Castlegoldin, is a fine, white and brown dog well made up, but a trifle fat. Castle led the run up and had the advantage for the first of the running, but in crossing the creek he slipped and lost ground. The hare kindly consented to give the spectators a view of coursing near by and made for the enclosure. Nellie Bly then took the hare and worked it for five or six turns. One of the hounds in the kennel, Jennie G., then broke loose and joined in without stopping to remove her blanket and killed after a few turns. Nellie Bly won.

M. Tiernan's Catherine Hayes vs. T. T, Brady's Tom Moore—Tom Moore is a good one that has recently done some creditable running, but Catherine Hayes was the favorite. The hare was the only poor one of the day and he started well, but the dogs were too much for him. Tom Moore led the run up and took one turn out of the hare when they both killed. Tom Moore won to the chagrin of many of the spectators who had the long end.

P. Canavan's Blanco vs. J. Hunter's Queen of the Valley—When called to the slips a black and white bitch appeared which the handler declared to be Queen of the Valley as the card called for a fawn for which Mr. Dickson stopped her; the fellow declared her to be the dog, that there was a mistake in printing, etc. The stewards agreed to allow her to run under protest, but the fellow got uneasy, confessed that it was not the bitch and the course was run as a bye for Blanco. This is the first attempt at fraud ever made here, and this time it was by a man not a member, at an open meeting.

T. J. Cronin's Jennie G. vs. W. E Wadam's Twilight—Jennie G. is a little racy bitch and like all of Mr. Cronin's dogs, as hard as nail. Twilight is another good one, but not good enough for Jennie G. Twilight led the run up, but Jennie G made a go by the second turn and then took possession, but the hare was a dandy doubling and turning like lightening, finally getting away from both by putting the escape fence between it and its pursuers, Jennie having many points the best of it.

F. J. Cromir's Depend on Me vs. D. J. Healey's Dawn—Depend on Me scored a go-by in the run up and killed after a short run, Dawn not in it at all.

Geo. Douherty's Peter Jackson and B. Dougherty's Daisy were slipped to a splendid hare and run a very interesting course. Daisy led the run up, Peter only getting in on the third turn. Daisy won the heat with something to spare.

T. Burke's Racine vs. Thos. Hall's Joe McAuliffe—Racine is a splendid bitch and in her race with Joe McAuliffe, the Merced winner, she showed exceptional merit. Joe got away first and turned the hare; another great Merced flyer. The race was a very long, hotly-contested one, Racine pushing Joe continually. Joe McAuliffe won.

John Hough's Dexter vs. J. W. Butterworth's Ben Harrison—Dexter had it all his own way from start to finish. Ben Harrison is only a pup but a promising one and we think will be heard from later.

P. Garvey's Limerick Lass vs. J. W. Butterworth's Sly Boy—Limerick Lass made the pace and won handily. Sly Boy only coming in at last turn for a kill.

J. O'Shea's Firenzi vs. J. J. Rademaker's Al Farrow—Last year's winner of the Merced met a flyer in Firenzi. Al Farrow led from the slips but Firenzi passed him and made the first and second turns, winning with something to spare. The hare escaped.

W. McCord's Governor vs. John Hunter's Chicopee—Governor led the run up and took first turn, Chicopee made a neat go by and took the second and third turns chasing the hare under the grand stand amid the excitement of the enthusiasts. Chicopee winning.

Second Series.

Great Expectations vs. Valley Queen—Valley Queen led from the slips and won handily, Great Expectations is a very gamy, little dog, but it takes a good one to beat Valley Queen.

Lackawanna vs. Queen Bess—Queen Bess led the run up, turned her hare twice and killed, easily winniag a very short course.

Monarch III. vs. Nellie Bly—Nellie Bly is such a little one and Monarch such a big one, the comparison was really ludicrous. Monarch led the run up one of the finest runs ever made at this park. Monarch held his lead for six or seven turns when Nellie Bly took possession and kept it for three turns and a kill. She killed too soon for her own benefit though both dogs are stayers. Monarch III. won.

Tom Moore vs. Blanco—Tom Moore made the race, Blanco came in for a few turns but Tom Moore won with points to spare.

Jennie G. vs. Daisy—Jennie led to the hare. Daisy who is a rare good bitch came in for a few turns, then Jennie took possession again and killed the hare, stumbling and pitching headlong when in full run, Jennie catching it up before it could recover. Jennie G. won.

Depend on Me vs. Joe McAuliffe—Joe led the run up and frequently made a go by. Depend on Me always close at his heels and taking possession occassionally. The race was very hotly contested. To the spectators it looked that Joe had won it, but he was evidently running cunning for the flag went up for Depend on Me. In the first place we have great respect for the judge, and then again from his position he can see a hundred things that those about the stand cannot, consequently we do not question his decision.

Dexter vs. Limerick Lass—Dexter won the run up but Lass won the race by many turns, the hare escaping. Before Lass could be caught she sighted another hare coursed it through a very long run and killed, spoiling her chances later on.

Firenzi vs. Chicopee—This was another beautiful run. A splendid hare and two good dogs. Chicopee had the run up but the little bitch was on her mettle and had possession of the hare the greater part of the time, Chicopee coming in for a turn or two. The strength of the hare may be imagined from the fact that with frequent turns and a double he went three-fourths around the park and then escaped. Firenzi won.

THIRD SERIES.

Valley Queen vs. Queen Bess—A very short race. The hare unexpectedld turning to the escape. Valley Queen led the run up. Bess took the second turn, Queen the third, when the hare escaped, Valley Queen winning.

Monarch III vs. Tom Moore—Monarch led the run up, taking turn after trun, winning the course with a score of 12 to 7.

Jennie G. vs. Limerick Lass—Jennie led the run up and did very nearly all the work, the hare escaping after a short race, Lass not recovered from her double run, Jennie G. winning.

Depend-On-Me vs. Firenzi—These two ran beautiful neck and neck for rods, Firenzi then doing the balance of the work and winning.

FOURTH SERIES.

Valley Queen vs. Monarch III—"When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war." Valley Queen and Monarch are of the same strain, Monarch being by Monarch II ex Mischief, she by Ch Memnon ex Fan. Last year at the New Year's meeting these two went for the final, but Queen proved too much for the great dog. Valley Queen with a grand burst of speed led the run up, took two turns and then picked up the hare, beating the favorite almost pointless. One rarely sees a dog capable of such a burst of speed that can stick to it as Valley Queen does.

Jennie G. vs. Firenzi—Firenzi led to the hare, Jennie then worked the hare for three points, when Firenzi again took possession, knocked the hare over. Jennie caught it and many thought she killed it, but Firenzi really killed the hare and won.

FINAL.

Valley Queen vs. Firenzi—Firenzi led the run up by a length. Both took a couple of turns each when Valley Queen killed. The judge decided "no go" and they were slipped again immediately. Firenzi led the run up and took three turns when Valley warmed up, took possession of the hare and kept it through a very long, exceedingly fast course, winning with something to spare.

After the distribution of the prizes three cheers were given for Mr. John Grace and three more for the slipper.

While waiting for the train Mr. H. M. Crackens' fawn puppy, Donald, and Mr, Friese's blue dog Swift, tried to turn out of a Jack. The first one went straight into the escape. Before they could be caught up they sighted again. They struck out Donald far in advance. Mr. Jack just enjoyed the sport and sailed past the escape and went clean around the park, the dogs failing to get a single turn out of him. Donald is but eight months old, a splendidly formed animal and from the showing he made and his pluck we expect to hear from him later. "Namquoit."

The Victoria Bench Show, to be held at Victoria, B. C., January 12th to 14th, promises to be the most successful show ever held there; 134 classes are provided for. The premium list is attractive, and proves that the committee are alive to their own interests. But we certainly think that the Bench Show would have had many more entries if the committee had placed a little of the cash offered to the poultry to the dog department. The poultry receive liberal cash prizes, while the dogs get diplomas only. The show will be held under American Kennel Club rules; Mr. S. A. Roberts, of London, Ont., will judge all classes.

We are informed that Mr. E. B. Bishop has removed from Cincinnati, Ohio, and joined his dogs in Kansas. That after spending some time in search of the best training ground in the United States he has settled permanently at Coffiyville, Kansas, where all letters should be addressed. We call attention to his new advertisement in this issue.

What Is Sport?

What is sport? It would seem that this question could be easily answered and a positive limit agreed upon as to its scope of application. But the more one considers the subject, the greater becomes the difficulty of definitely defining the proposition. Sport may be said to consist in all pleasurable enjoyments in which hazard is a conspicuous feature.

Eliminate chance—uncertainty—from any entertainment or occupation, and the interest—the sport—would be eliminated. Almost every one is interested in the pleasure and excitement attendant upon the anticipatory period preceding the outcome or final determination of any proposition. There is, therefore, sport in almost every line or proposition which engages the attention of the human mind. The inventor, the novelist, the prospector, the speculator, all derive pleasure and profit in proportion to the ability which they possess in guaging, weighing and computing the elements of causation, which go to make up or produce a certain effect—the element of hazard or chance, giving zest and interest to their every action.

There certainly is sport in the pursuit of any object where the faculties of the mind are pitted against those of another or a rivalry is engendered by attempting to show a superiority of judgment on any given point.

Sport to the marksman, then, is not the fact that he possesses a gun and skill which far outmatches the wariness of the game, for then the sport is lacking because of the fact that chance has been eliminated from the transaction. Therefore, the man who allows the game an equal show when pitted against his skill derives far more sport than the man who, from any cause whatever, eliminates the pleasure of chance from the contest.

I would rather kill one-half dozen single birds when well under flight and at good range than to bag a dozen dozen under conditions where the chances of their escaping is reduced to the minimum.

I will remember my first mallard. Creeping up through the tall slough grass, which completely sheltered me from the sight of the birds, and resting the old muzzle loader over a tufted bunch of wire grass growing on the edge of the little opening in the limpid stream, I drew a sure bead at deadly range on the proud old "green head" which led the line, in swimming up the pool and fired away, killing the bird "stone dead" by sending a dozen or more shot clean through it. This act was sport then but I should hardly consider it so now.

Sport to one man, would be the most ordinary drudgery to another and therefore each true sportsman will have to determine for himself just what sport really is.

A Weeks' Outing.

By Bel-Bel.

"What ho, for the foothills!" "Welcome ye shades of w ering pines and speading oaks!" "Here's to the sparkli g beauties of the stream!" "And here's to the pleasures of t r camp!"

Bring forth the Royal Frying Pan,
The dripping Side o' Bacon.
Here, Old Camp Kettle, offer prayer
For what we'll soon be takin'.
Let Blazing Fagots hiss with glee
The joy in store for you and me.

Our party numbers very few,
But you can bet your bottom dollar
We'll row, and fish, and hunt, and holler—
Till throats grow sore and voices squeak,
This glorious—glorious coming week.

So chorused the boys as we lounged on the deck of the "Bay City" in lively anticipation of a jolly good time. Bound for the Coast Range of Sonoma County, in the vicinity of Guerneville. We took train at the Oakland Mole, reaching our destination late in the afternoon. A brisk walk of two miles (fairly hidden under a load of fire-arms, blankets, baskets and all the paraphernalia incident to camp life), brought us to a cosy nook near the banks of the Russian river, where we decided to pitch tent.

Before going further, my dear reader, permit me to assume the duty of spokesman and introduce to you my friends and self—a very necessary proceeding, let me add—hitherto neglected.

That tall, lank, cadaverous chap is Tom Merrill, a hearty whole-souled fellow who has volunteered to bag more game than any of the other boys can dream of.

The individual straddling the log is Davis, commonly called "Pug," but christened Lawrence James, I believe. He's an angler—good one too—so forgive him all transgression, if any there be, if he keeps the baskets well filled with speckled beauties.

Belshaw is the only "girl" among us, and to his charge has been relegated all matters of the culinary art. Clark is assistant, in fact, "Bobby" is the indispensable chore-boy, dish-washer, and general factotum. His genial laughing face and merry disposition have endeared him already to our hearts for evermore, aye, e'en his fellow men.

Last on the list, I make my bow, known as "Happy Ben," a roving creature given to dreaming dreams and sighing sighs, I've been thrown in with the lot to eat, drink and be merry, and chronicle the events of note in this promising expedition.

And now as the fire is burning brightly, tin plates and cups are set around, and the aroma of rich coffee makes us realize that we are hungry, accept a cordial invitation to sup with us the first night out.

* * * * *

With the first breath of morning the camp was astir. I left the shelter of fragrant pine boughs to revel in the beauties of the surrounding landscape, while chief cook was busying himself in the preparation of breakfast.

How wanting is human power to pen the gorgeous spectacle of Nature in her various moods and tints! What an over-powering sense of sublimity is conveyed in every bud and leaf and flower!

In the Eastern sky faint streaks of purple marked the dawn. Long streamers of golden light crept nearer and nearer to earth and lit up with aureole brightness the crests of verdant hills. Sparkling rays stole down into gloomy tangled dells where shadows lingered as if loath to depart, flinging a mantle of gold over every glistening bough, bathing every flower in a flood of golden glory, and lending more iridescent hues to dewdrops pendant from sheeny leaf or nestling in the sheltered bosom of a fragrant blossom.

Under their magic touch green grasses sprung up as if new born, delicate ferns unfurled their wavy feathery prongs, budding leaves expanded with the coaxing warmth, and all the country lay revealed in the soft sunshine of balmy June.

Butterflies and bees vied with each other in wooing the flowers; the songs of flitting birds were redolent with more blithesome notes, it seemed to me, and their merry "twit twit" and "chee-chee" suggested a welcome to shady haunts and leafy bowers. The morning breezes were laden with subtile perfumes—sweet as the incense of myrrh—stolen from some hallowed chalice, some pungent bough, some mossy bed.

Even the laughing little spring bade a cheerful good morning as I kissed her sparkling face and sipped the honey-dew from her lips. No draught of nectar e'er seemed so sweet and pure.

Through the tangled mass of shrubbery I caught the gleam of a winding river. Its polished surface was broken by myriads of dancing ripples and glinting sunbeams. It washed the shores of golden sands with lingering touch, and laughed in merry glee at the feathered friends that drank from its bosom.

Shady paths seemed to invite trespass, and giant red woods smiled down upon me from their towering height, as if pleased at the delight of my enraptured soul.

Just at this point a discordant note broke the pleasant muse. It came in the form of a whistle—a shrill whistle—Bobby's whistle. Being decidedly high-pitched it must have reached the top of the giant redwood on which I was gazing, but a hearty slap on the shoulder cut short further meditation.

"Hello, old fellow! Lost in wonder? Completely awe-struck? Didn't expect to be transplanted to a forest of small giants when you left 'Frisco, eh? Well, you see" with a wave of his hand, "these, our petrified forests, old grizzly and the seals, are sample curiosities we Californians reserve for the admiration of foreigners. I hope you are duly appreciative and now if you'll stretch your legs for awhile, we'll take a turn down the road and ring in an appetite for hot biscuits."

Accordingly we "stretched" and wound up in due time at the camp for breakfast. Being the first explorers we were plied with questions, so between bites I managed to tell Davis that the prospect for fishing was extremely good and put Merrill's mind to rest on the question of game. For shame, be it said, Bobby fell to with such zest that only by great good chance I managed to make a meal.

In the course of the forenoon all the implements of our week's sojourn were comfortably arranged—fishing tackle and firearms adjusted, and in the event of adventure or separation every fellow was to report progress around the supper table.

Merrill whisled to the dog, Belshaw and Pug decided to share lots, so Bobby and I mutually embraced.

"They've given us the cold shake, so let us submit with good grace,"

"Grip, old boy!" I heartily replied, "Let's make the best of a very bad bargain and proceed to enjoy ourselves."

"It's a go. You see I've been up here before and if you've no objections, I'll pilot you to some of the prettiest spots that was ever seen or read about. Come along," and merrily whistling in the same heart-rending key of the early morn, he started.

I followed. In fact I usually did when Bobby led the way. Through a tangled corpse of briar and shrubs he struck out for the river. Being short and fat, and rather active he was soon lost to view, while I struggled to steer clear of the obstructing boughs and sharp thorns he left behind. Vainly I struggled, plunged and swore. The deeper in I went the more tangled I became. From far ahead somewhere—but where—came the faint echo of that calliopic effort, but no answering "hallo" to my frantic shout. Despairing, I made one final dash for liberty and landed on a bed of briars. I suppose I was rescued from this debris sometime during the next half hour, but I never could positively say so. Bobby avers that my predicament was short-lived as he turned back immediately, but to me it seemed an eternity. There are times in the affairs of men when incidents stand out in bold relief from the sharpness of their outline. This was one of them. The memory of that moment will never depart from me. The fragrant order of crushed blossoms, exuding juice, and above all, the sharp, bristling thorns of running vines and trailing limbs are an ever present reminder of my "bed of roses."

However, being extricated, we resumed our jaunt, and reached the river bank through an opening at the base of two peaks that formed a natural gate to the meadows behind.

An old scow claimed our attention at once, and forthwith we appropriated it to our use regardless of the question of ownership. Perhaps this very feeling of disregard endeared it to our hearts, for during the entire length of the stay that old, flat, dilapidated, wornout and wholly-unpresentable appearing boat was as much a part of our outfit as the necessary gun and blanket.

"Which way shall we go?" queried my guide.

"If you follow the dictates of your own sweet will, I shall be pleased," I answered, "only don't leave me to the tender mercies of straggling wild beasts to be devoured."

"No fear of that, old fellow. You're too tough a morsel for any ordinary bear to tackle, so rest easy on that score. I think we will take a row up stream, and become acquainted with the dairyman on the other side, only I warn you beforehand not to make eyes at his pretty daughter. The old man draws the line at Betty. While he has an eye to business, and can squeeze on to a dollar with the regulation grip, he emphatically refuses to carry on traffic while Betty is in view."

"Why Bobby, you talk as one who knows where of he speaks."

"I do. You seem to forget that I was up here last summer. I hope he will too," with a nod of his head toward the little farmhouse that now comes into full view as we round the curve and pull toward the bank, and see a hearty son of the soil leaning over the rustic gate at the end of an old time garden running wild with hollyhocks, verbena and and spice pinks.

"Good-morning sir" calls out my indefatigable oarsman.

"Good-mornin' stranger! Where be ye from?"

"From Hames Valley. We're camping over in the timber though for the present, and would like to know if you can furnish us with milk for a few days?"

"Why certain! 'Tisn't very often that we hev a call like this, but reckon we can accomerdate ye. D'ye want some now?"

"Yes, but we havn't any thing to carry it in."

"Wal I reck'n ye can take one of my cans along if ye'll promise to return it, and not skip off as some durned cusses did last summer with two of my best measures."

Instinctively I turn to Bobby, but he is making frantic gestures for me to keep mum, and I am consequently filled with an unconquerable desire to laugh.

"By the way stranger, your face seems familiar. Hev I seen you afore?"

"Never," solemnly avows Bobby. "This is the first time I was ever in these here parts, and I tell you what, I've never seen any thing to equal them."

"You're right thar, I've heerd tell that Californy beats 'em all for big trees and grand scenery, and I can just bet my best heifer against any two in the State that this 'ere country can't be beat for stock raising and dairy produce."

"Right you are," I ventured to remark, "and your Geysers have attracted attention all over the world."

"Yes stranger, and if you are on a pleasure toor as most of the people are now-a-days who come up to these quarters, you want to take a look at old Steamboat, the Witches' Caldron, and all of the Devil's hot springs afore you go home."

At this suggestive remark Bobby is convulsed and I am in the last throes of agony when the old man halts in front of the door of the low rambling kitchen.

"Here Betty," he calls out in a lusty voice, "bring me the gallon can hangin' on the peg over the milk trough," and soon the flutter of a woman's skirts and the light quick step of a young girl is heard.

"I don't blame the old man for his caution and sharp eyes" is my mental reservation when I note the pure fresh lovliness of the maid who stands so shyly near. With sleeves rolled up to the dimpled elbow, ruby lips smiling a welcome of sweet surprise to the blushing chap at my side, and a merry dash of sparkling sauciness, gleaming from her deep blue eyes, she certainly presents a pleasing figure and I wonder but little at Bobby's infatuation.

But our admiration is short-lived, for quickly turning she is again lost to view in the spacious milk-house adjoining. Nothing but a vigorous pinch will suffice to bring Bobby to earth again, and this restorative I haste to apply. By this time the old man has rejoined us, and we depart to return on the morrow for more milk, and—glimpses of Betty!

Having deposited the can at a respectful distance from any mishap, we seat ourselves once more in our "shell canoe" and pull down stream for a mile or so. The beauty of the scene is striking and the air of freedom and joy so contagious that unconsciously I break out in song.

Why does Bobby become transfixed as it were? Why that expression of wonder and amusement?

I have often been told that my voice was not constructed "a la Patti," that no coaxing sweetness could stir the fluttering breast! But I never imagined it was so entirely devoid of interest as to be a source of amusement and risibility.

I become indignant. The song ceases. Silence reigns for a minute, then Bobby laughs.

"I say, Fletcher, I'd sign if I were you. There's cash in a voice like yours. Talk about a "barren tone!" If there is another such in existence I'd like to know it. Never have I listened to such melody, such cadences, such expression!"

"Thanks. You are profuse of compliments my dear boy. Raptures are not healthy for children," and I resume rowing as though no interruption had occurred.

I had not pulled far, however, when a lusty voice called out:

"Hello, there! Where did you fellows spring from? and where did you get it?"

"'Pon my word, its Davis! What luck? Whew, what beauties! I say, Fletcher, let's take a hand and land a few," says the Incorrigible all in one breath. With that I pulled for the bank and fastened our boat to the trunk of an old tree that grew near to the water's edge.

Davis had done some good work, and had enjoyed fine sport, for a string of trout lay in the basket that would fill the heart of any angler with delight. But a few seconds had elapsed when a frantic shout from Clark evidenced another victim, and so contagious was the fun that I fell to with zest, and added to the already bounteous supply as fine a ten-pounder as could be found any where in the State.

As the heat of the day now began to grow intense, and the shades of the wooded camp looked inviting, we abandoned our pleasure for a time and turned toward home. It was a matter of some discussion as to which of the trio would take the oars.

"Suppose we walk," I ventured to suggest. "We can hide the scow among these limbs, and it is so far from the place where we found it, that no one would think of looking for it here."

It was so decided, and we struck out for the railroad track, past the saw-mill and logging camp, and by a short turn in the road came in sight of our tents.

The others were already on hand, and a steaming kettle of savory odor told that somebody had secured game. From the satisfied look on Merrill's face I naturally concluded he was the lucky one.

"Just in time, boys. Here, Pug, toss over some shiners—pile on a few more sticks, Bobby, while I season the stew—and we'll soon be ready for a 'burgoo' of the days of '61. I don't suppose any of you have appetites," laughs Belshaw, as he waves the big spoon with a lordly air that threatens destruction to some defenseless head.

"I'm starved!"

"Can't exist another minute!"

"Will give up the ghost in another hour!" came in a breath from all.

"All right, fall too," and we did with a will equalled only by our appetites and the desire to confirm our cook's opinion of himself as a French chef.

I never have been able to say why it is that game and fish never taste so well as when cooked in the open air and by the aid of a camp fire; but true it is, I enjoy it more then than at any other time.

As the meal progressed each related the incidents of the morning, and the outlook for continued amusement. With one accord we expressed our entire satisfaction of the neighborhood, especially Bobby, whose eyes continually wandered to the river bank with a rapt expression in their depths.

"Poor fellow! so young and yet so—gone!" I softly murmur.

"A er-um-what?" he stammers, as he realizes the import of my remark.

"Nothing but the soft sighing of a love-laden zephyr," I vouchsafe reply.

'Tis not long before man's comfort and solace plays an important part in tue after-dinner reverie, and I stroll off to a moss-covered spot, throw myself down at the base of a solitary sentinel and yield to the soothing influence of the hour as I watch the blue wreaths of smoke rise heavenward.

Scotch Caution.

As an instance of acute hydrophobia, it is difficult to surpass the story of the Scotch boatman who, while crossing a loch, was asked if he would take some water with his whisky, and replied: "Na, there was a horse drooned at the heed o' the loch two years ago." The head of the loch was twenty-four miles distant.

"It is the fashion nowadays," says Forest and Stream, "to rake up all the interesting events in the life of E. D. Fulford, the great pigeon shot, and our 'Dog Chat' column must keep in line. It is said that he had a bull pup once that he trained to track and point quail and partridges, and in one point and flush of the dog Mr. Fulford killed eight quail at one shot. Next!"

And because the pup—mark you, it was only a pup—did not flush the birds so that Fulford could kill an even dozen at one shot, instead of only eight, he turned the second barrel upon the pup and killed him outright, thus cutting off the great Adam of what doubtless would have become the leading variety of field dogs of the age—the Bull pointers. Selah.

Sports Afield for December is presented in superb form and fairly sparkles with brilliant matter of the first interest to every sportsman. In its new form it has few if any equals and no superior in the chosen field for its reflection of sport and recreation. We notice a page or more of brilliant dashes from the able pen of our erstwhile contributor "Aloin." He talks and writes of kennel matters with the same ease and grace as formerly marked our columns and withal delivers some telling blows to the objectionable in dogdom.

The recent rains have improved the quail shooting so that now there is presented the finest possible conditions for enjoying an outing in search of these gamy little birds. There can be but little question now that the field trials will be run under better conditions for the dogs than has been presented for several seasons past. Every one interested in this event is anxiously awaiting the coming of the 18th inst., the date of their inauguration.

"I am having Kellogg & Hall put me up a case of Peters' cartridges," said an enthusiastic duck hunter the other day, adding, "I have splendid success with them, and any other brand will not do me so well."

B. C. HOLLY'S CLOSING OUT SALE.

A Splendid Collection of Superb Individuals That Will Be Disposed of.

The climate of California has been so often extolled in song and story and its praises fall so quietly on the ear that many of us pay no attention to them; yet there are some men who came here to seek that which is the greatest of all God's gifts—good health—and have been compelled to acknowledge that the pursuit has been in vain. To all who have known B. C. Holly from the time he first appeared in St. Joe, Michigan, and there handled his first string of horses until he became noted as a careful trainer and driver and visited almost every city in the Union, making friends wherever he went, it is perhaps needless to say that the terrible bronchial trouble, asthma, has always seemed to have a mortgage on him that the most genial climate or the healthiest of occupations would not release. He came to California a few years ago, and after looking about for a suitable place to commence handling some trotters, purchased the race track, the club house and grounds of Vallejo Agricultural Society, at Flosden, and there he has lived, whenever his health permitted, ever since. From this valley he has often gone into the highest altitudes of Montana and Nevada and returned feeling better, only to grow worse again. Believing at last, that he could not stand the care of a large stud of horses and colts, and wishing to feel that he can go off into the country without fretting about the welfare of his choice youngsters, he has resolved to sell everything at auction next Thursday morning, rain or shine. While it is with regret we hear of the disbandment of this collection, yet we feel that in the coming sale the public will secure many bargains, and that the foundation he has laid for the reputation of his horses will not be disturbed, because the youngsters will build a superstructure of records and performances that will survive long after Woodnut, 2:16¾, is placed beyond the limits of human aid by the gentle hand of death.

Knowing that our readers might be interested in this sale and believing that many will wish to be present to secure bargains, representatives of this journal paid a visit there this week. The eight o'clock boat connected with the train to Vallejo Junction, from thence we were conveyed on the steamboat to South Vallejo, and a short ride in the cars brought us to Flosden, just three miles from Vallejo. Mr. Holly met us with a carriage, and soon we were within the enclosure of the Hollywood Farm.

To speak of a ride for a half-mile in 1:12 behind Don L. and Turk Franklin, and being forcibly reminded of the exquisite pleasure Robert Bonner and Pa Hamlin enjoys would indeed be worth telling, but we came to see the colts, fillies, stallions and broodmares, and try and tell what they were like. The first one brought out was the four-year-old chestnut stallion Woodside, by Woodnut, 2:16¼, out of Veronica, by Alcona 730; second dam Fontana, by Almont (dam of Flora Belle, 2:25, and Silas Skinner, 2:17); third dam Fannie Williams (dam of Bay Chieftain, 2:28¼) by Abdallah 15. He is a horse of good size, and in conformation and gait resembles his sire to a remarkable degree. He has a bold, strong stride, and moves as courageous as his sire did when he made his record at Sacramento in 1888. Many of the mares here are stinted to him, and, as he traces back five times to Hambletonian 10, and is by a racehorse that is a full brother to Manon, 2:21, and Manette, the dam of Arion, 2:10¼, he will do to abide by. If given any work he will trot very fast.

When Mr. Holly was in Montana last fall he was in a race where the winner pleased him, and he bought him as soon as the meeting was over; he is called Don L., his record is 2:29, but he can beat any horse in this State with that mark. He is a beautiful, deep shade of brown, with tan muzzle and flanks, and by Fieldmont (brother to Hamlin's Almont, sire of Belle Hamlin, 2;12), by Almont, out of Nutmeg Maid, dam of Ida D., 2:25), by Thomas Jefferson. Don L. is a grand type of a trotter, and is one of the do-or-die kind that will never give up. If the weather is fine on the day of the sale the spectators will see something in the way of trotting that will surprise them. He is sound as a dollar, and perfect in every way.

Prince Derby is the name of a deep mahogany bay colt, foaled 1890, by Charles Derby, 2:20, out of Princess, by Administrator; second dam Priceless, by Volunteer; third dam Silvertail (dam of Driver, 2:19½) by Seely's American Star, etc. If anyone wants a racehorse to make money with, or a royal bred sire to breed from, Prince Derby is the one. Words fail to describe this heavy-boned, well-proportioned gentle youngster. He will be about sixteen hands high, and will trot below twenty.

Larabie is not so large a colt; he is of a different type, and is by that game racehorse Ranchero, 2:21½, out of Lottie Lee (half-sister to Don L., 2:29, and Ida D., 2:25), by Moslem 1380. Larabie is a nice mover and a natural trotter.

Mart Boorhemis a full brother to St. Nicholas, and is by Sidney, 2:19¾, out of Towhead, by Echo. He has trotted quarters in forty seconds, and has developed into a handsome horse.

The Electioneer blood will crop out, and anyone would say so if they saw the little colt Red Oak trot. He is by Redwood, 2:21 (son of Anteeo, 2:16¼), out of Victress, by Victor Patchen; second dam by Echo. He is a finely proportioned youngster, a line trotter, level-headed and very fast.

"Here is another of the Cook Farm colts, and a grand mover he is," was the exclamation of a bystander as Kapila 13,455, was driven around the first turn of the mile track. Kapila is by Steinway, 2:25¾, out of Nannie Smith (full sister to Phil Thompson, 2:16), by that progenitor of speed, Red Wilkes; second dam, Grey Nellie (dam of two in the list), by John Dillard; third dam by Gill's Vermont. He is fully equal to all that the most critical might expect from such royal breeding, and will be heard from some day.

Mr. Holly wished to keep the dessert for the last of his feast of good-looking young stallions, for he had the bay colt Wilson (that was foaled in 1890) brought out on the track, and as Thos. Keating nodded for the rider on Montana (a thoroughbred) to come on, we were treated to an exhibition of speed that makes us believe that Fausta is not the fastest pacer for her age in the world. This colt, Wilson, is a wonder; he is level-headed and fast, and lifts his feet about as high from the ground as Direct. He has the same straight shoulders and easy, frictionless movement of the limbs that are only to be seen among the pacers that do not tire and always seem to have speed in reserve. He is by Happy Prince (a son of Bayonne Prince and Belle Medium), out of that grand broodmare, Aureola by Albert W., 2:20; second dam, Pacific Maid, by Elmo, etc. Aureola is the dam of the fast pacer Hollywood, that George Woodard, of Yolo, says has paced quarters in 31½ seconds

The first broodmare looked at was Economy, 2:30, which Mr. Holly sold at the last sale for $2,400 and bought her back for $2,500. She is by Echo, 462, out of Lady Berky by Muldoon (sire of Lena H. 2:29); second dam Berky mare by St Clair. Economy was a wonderful trotter, and as the dam of Extravagant (owned by Marcus Daly) will go down in the annals of the turf as the dam of one of the fastest fillies in America, even if she never had such great individuality. Economy is heavy in foal to Woodside.

Annie Almont is a large, rangy black mare by Tilton Almont, out of Madame Nelson by John Nelson; she is splendidly gaited and a very promising trotter. Stinted to Woodside.

If some of our stock farms are in need of good broodmares, it would pay the owners to attend this sale, for such mares as Victress, by Victor Patchen, out of a daughter of Echo, in foal to George Washington, 2:20; Miss Bedouin (a typical Moor) by Bedouin, out of Nellie Medium; second dam Lucy Foster (dam of Nellie Burns 2:25); Luna, by Dashwood, out of Cripple, by Echo; and Belle by Gus, 2:26½, out of the Cline mare, by McDonald Chief, are well worthy of their attention, while the standard mare Lottie Lee, by Moslem 1380, out of Nutmeg Maid, and Pattie Patch, by Alexander, out of Emma Steitz (dam of Peep o' Day), would also be a credit to them. Everyone of them can be rightfully called "choice;" all are well broken and good drivers, while their breeding adds more lustre to their worth. For size, style, color and conformation they are unexcelled.

There is a filly in this collection that would arouse enthusiasm even at the old Bay District track; she is a sweet-gaited little daughter of Steinway and Bertha, (sister to Bayard Wilkes 2:15½), by Alcantara; second dam Barcena, (dam of Bayard Wilkes 2:15½) by Bayard; third dam Blandina, dam of King Rene, sire of sixteen in 2:30 list, Swigert, sire of twenty-four 2:30 performers, and three other sires) by Mambrino Chief 11; fourth dam (the dam of Roselind 2:21 and Donald 2:27), by Parker's Brown Pilot. She is a trotter, and for her little work shows great speed. There is no need for encomiums regarding her; she is as pretty as a picture and moves as even and true as a piece of machinery.

The weanlings that will be sold are just being handled, and every one shows the trotting inclination strongly. The chestnut filly by Election; the Woodside filly, out of Economy 2:30; the bay colt by Bay Bird, an inbred Wilkes stallion and the brown filly by Ulster Wilkes enjoy being led by the halter, and do their very best to move easily.

The thoroughbred department is not large, but it is very select. The wonderful gelding Fox, that many have reason to believe is the fastest short distance horse in America; the large bay gelding, Revolver, that never was shut out in a race in his life, and is better to-day than ever, both show that the rest and feed at Hollywood agree with them.

The good-looking yearling Sidney, by Sid, out of Ninena by Jim Brown, should make a fast and reliable racehorse. Sid is by imp. Siddartha out of Vestella, by Jonesborough, son of Lexington.

Bert Hart, by Hamlet, out of Ninena, by Jim Brown, resembles his dam and, like her, has a great amount of speed and a very easy way of moving.

The yearling that captivated us was called Green Hock, by imp. Greenback, out of Eda, by Hock-Hocking: second dam, Eva Coombs, by Billy Cheatham. If Doctor Aby has any more representatives of the Greenback party that can compare with this one he will make "a killing" wherever he goes. Green Hock is deserving of all the praise that can be given him, for he is faultless.

The chestnut filly by Ed Corrigan, out of Mother Hubbard, by Rutherford, ought to be fast, if breeding and appearance count for anything.

Stenograph is the name of a good individual by Glen Ellen, out of Nortica, by Northland; second dam, Tunica, by John Morgan; third dam, Queen of the West, by imp. Bonnie Scotland, etc.

The full sister to Acclaim is also here, and to all lovers of thoroughbreds this filly will need no laudation; competent judges say she is better looking and has a speedier way of moving than her illustrious sister.

Nickle Exchange is by Exchange out of Nannie Rapture, by Nicolette; second dam Nannie Rapture, by imp. Rapture, etc. This filly has a royal pedigree, and she is a credit to it in every way.

The celebrated broodmare, Irish Lass, by Kyrle Daly, out of Daisy Miller, by Revolver, is also in the catalogue to be sold. She is heavy in foal to Flambeau, the wonderful racehorse.

The reliable, level-headed mare Ninena, by Jim Brown, dam Nannie Hubbard, by Hubbard; second dam, Demirep, by Melbourne, Jr; third dam, Methilde, by imp. Scythian; fourth dam, Peggie, by Boston, has made a name for herself in equine history that will always be honored by her produce; she is now in foal to imp. Brutus.

Why Not, by Three Cheers, out of Nellie C., by Joe Hooker; second dam, Puss, by Nortolk, etc., is a good race mare, and was never beaten. She is in foal to Wildidle.

Rosette (dam of Acclaim and Royal Flush), by Wheatley, out of Black Maria (dam of Daisy D., Jennie G. and Captain Al) is a fine bay mare foaled in 1880, and is worthy of being bred to Salvator.

Fusilade's Last is by John W. Norton (a son of imp. Bonnie Scotland), out of Fusilade, by War Dance; second dam Fly by Planet, etc., and represents one of the few remaining of the produce of the great War Dance family on this coast.

All of these matrons are producers; they are young and in appearance, large, strong and highly formed. Every one has been selected with care by Mr. Holly, and no one is better fitted to pick good ones than he. They will go to the highest bidder, and as they are all due to foal before the 10th of February, they will come in just right to breed again.

There will also be a number of fine, young roadsters sold besides the well-bred Anteeo stallion, Anteeo Button, and the gray colt Barabbus, by Albert W., 2:20, out of Belle Blanche, by The Moor.

As we came away from the home of so many good trotters and thoroughbreds we only wished that each and every one of our readers could have been with us to see what a grand aggregation were there. Many bargains will be secured at the sale, for another such opportunity may not occur again for years.

A Prompter mare bred by M. W. Hicks, sold at L. J. Rose's sale in New York for $2,050, while in the same lot a mare by the great Nutwood brought but $1,025.

What a Difference.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The sensible editorial of December 26th, in the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, under the above heading will furnish food for much thought by horsebreeders who study the result of the work of other men. If it had been generally known ten years ago that Flaxtail was a grandson of Old Pilot and out of a mare nearly thoroughbred, the difference would be more marked. Breeders would have sought the Pilot-Flaxtail mares as matrons to cross on Hambletonian stallions, and no one can tell how many performers would be credited to Flaxtail dams and their daughters. But instead of seeking they, as a rule, shunned the mares—as they termed it—of a plebeian pacer. The blood and power of Flaxtail is just the same as it was when he was supposed to be by Pruden's Blue Bull. But then he was out of fashion; now he is in fashion, and yet the figures of the records show no more in his favor than then. But he is put into the aristocratic relationship of some of the greatest of the equine family, such as Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10. This means more than at first glance might be supposed.

The Pilot blood was and is very strong, dominating blood, and one-fourth of it in an animal often dominates the other three fourths. Men will put faith in that which nine out of ten speak of with praise. Look up the whole success of Buccaneer, a son of Iowa Chief, out of a Flaxtail mare. First, has Iowa Chief produced any other such son? Next look up the success of the great Sidney (not that he would have been anything but a success in any direction); but without looking it up it strikes me that three-fourths of his greatness comes from Flaxtail blood in the dams he has served. His own record is his own warrant of nobility. What Sidney has done no doubt many other first-class Hambletonian stallions could have done.

But let us look at the other side of this problem—the breeding one side. Prompter, by Blue Bull out of a Flaxtail mare, has produced four in 2:30 and two dams of 2:30 performers at an age that no other horse in the world has a producing dam (except Sultan) to his credit. Flaxtail mares are great matrons.

Blue Bull mares are great matrons—ergo, draw your own conclusions. Mine are that Pilot—Flaxtail blood and Blue Bull blood mingled is a source of wonderful broodmare blood for stallions that are strong in the power to produce trotters and sires of trotters.

Apex, a son of Prompter and Mary, by Flaxtail, is a trotter—trotted as game a race at Santa Rosa against Stamboul as one would wish to see, it taking seven heats to decide, when they were three years old. It was claimed that Apex won five heats out of the seven, but lost the race. No doubt this claim was made by men who are over-friendly to the under dog, but it was the greatest colt race ever trotted on the coast, and one in which the defeated shines out superior to the ordinary winner. Again, at Stockton, Apex, after being defeated two heats and being declared out of condition, Andy McDowell took the colt and won the next three heats—one of them in better time than either of the first were trotted in. Apex has one—a three-year-old—in the 2:30 list, and is a horse that with first-class chances would have trotted in 2:15 or better.

Now just look at Frou-Frou—level-headed, the fastest yearling in the world, and as game a fighter on the last quarter as any horse, alive or dead, that ever circled a track, thoroughbreds not excepted.

Sterling, by Egmont (by Belmont 64, and his next best son to Nutwood 600), dam Mary, by Flaxtail, a sire of a producing sire, at a much earlier age than any of the greatest sires can show, and a sire of trotters.

Daisy, a daughter of Prompter, with the yearling record of pacers to her credit for six years, and a two-mile trial in a cart in 5:07, the last mile in 2:28, at two years old, does not breathe of much softness. Daisy's only produce is a colt by Monroe Chief that showed an eighth in fifteen seconds in a cart before he was harnessed fifty times, which shows that the blood will breed on if you have something good to put with it.

Let me close by saying: Stick to facts as well as fashion. Facts are the figures of record, and will in time make fashion. A man cannot afford to take up fashion not backed up by figures, and his descendants are in fashion.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Enterprising Columbia.

Columbia (Tenn.) Driving Park Association is the liveliest infant in existence, as a perusal of its advertisement in another column will attest. The meeting begins on October 27th and lasts until November 4, 1892, during which time $100,000 in stakes, purses and specials will be placed on the tree for trotting and pacing horse-owners to pluck. The stakes range from $2,000 to $10,000, and in addition to this the races will come off over the fastest track east of the Rockies. There will be a paid starter and paid judges in the stand. The accommodations for both horses and horsemen are of the best, and everything points to a grand meeting from every point of view at this new but thriving racing center. E. E. Chrisman, the popular turf writer, is secretary of the Columbia Association, and only a glance at the advertisement is necessary to convince owners of the extreme liberality of our Tennessee friends.

Anyone needing a first-class Anteeo stallion will do well to purchase the one called Alto that is advertised in this issue. He can be bought cheap.

James Dustin Will Not Go.

After receiving his appointment from the Palo Alto representative, Mr. Dustin was astonished when he learned of the proposition that was advanced regarding the salary offered and would not accept the position under such terms. There was no misunderstanding when the declination of Mr. Dustin was offered, and this gentlemanly trainer and driver will continue in his old position, handling trotters for himself and the general public.

IN OUR issue of Dec. 19th appeared a clipping from an Eastern turf journal saying that the Saratoga Racing Association had announced that all its purses would be guaranteed, but shortly afterward reconsidered its decision. This, we find, is an error, as the famous organization mentioned did not reconsider its decision, and all stakes are guaranteed to the winner. This is as it should be, and we are glad to set the Saratoga Racing Association right before the public and to correct an error that has been going the rounds of the press to the detriment of their famous organization.

JOCKEYS COOPER and Moore, riders of April Fool and The Jew, were suspended for one year at Los Angeles Thursday for crooked riding.

"He's a great trainer, and no mistake," is a remark you can hear almost any day of some well-known handler of horses. Maybe the reinsman referred to deserves this compliment, and it is also very possible that he does not. A trainer should not be judged by the number of horses he puts in the list. Perhaps he has ruined ten trotters while he was putting one into the enchanted enclosure. A man in the business of developing and conditioning trotters should in the first place be judged by his success in getting horses to the post free from the ailments that besiege the equine race and render them unfit for use on the track or road.

Every well-bred, sound, young trotter delivered into his hands ought to go into the list, and when the trainer patches a trotter up and makes a new race horse out of it he ought to get due credit. It is not the man who makes the breeder believe he is a phenomenal trainer and then gets ten youngsters in the list while he is spoiling fifty who is the wonderful conditioner the papers claim he is. It is the one who gets the largest percentage of trotters to race down the line—and win—and has the smallest percentage of equine wrecks to his discredit that is entitled to praise. We would like to see breeders and owners take an invoice at the beginning and end of every season, figure the percentage and give it to the press for publication.

The condition of every horse should be put down at the beginning and end, and every animal worked by the trainer should be in the table, showing just what progress was made.

It is the same with sires of trotters. We will glance at a horse's list of 2:30 performers and exclaim: "What a wonderful sire —— is!" But we ought to look into the matter closely before we go into ecstacies over any horse's ability. Electioneer's percentage of 2:30 performers is so far above that of any other sire that really no horse ever lived that compared with him in this respect. Over 29 per cent. of the sons and daughters of Electioneer two years old and upwards have trotted in 2:30 or under. This is the way to measure a horse's power in the stud—figure his percentage. Richards' Elector, number and quality of mares taken into consideration, with his nine in the list to date, must be put down as Electioneer's greatest producing son.

Rysdyk's Hambletonian was considered the great sire of his era, and probably he was. The number of mares bred to him, 1,930, netting 1,333 foals, with only forty-one in the 2:30 list, shows us what great strides are being made in breeding and developing fast horses these days, and that it would be hard to pick a sound, well-bred trotting stallion now who would not distance Hambletonian 10 as a producer is almost certain. The greatest sire ever known was Electioneer, who produced wonderful speed from matrons far from fashionably-bred—in fact, from all kinds of mares.

Let breeders give percentages, so that we can determine the true worth of stallions as producers of fast trotters. The day is not far distant when there will be no mistake possible in the picking out of a first-class producing stallion, for his ability as a foal-getter will be known as well as his percentage of 2:30 performers. As to the performers, with the increase in the size of stakes and purses, their worth will in a measure be considered in the future by the amount of money they have won, and this is correct—when the animal is sound.

Turf Innovations.

"Variety is the spice of life," said a philosopher very truly several years ago. What will please the public one season is considered out of place the next. The management of a racing association that studies the public's whims and gratifies them most with varieties of racing and brand-new ideas is the one into whose coffers coin will flow in a pleasing stream the longest. As California horses easily lead the world, let the Golden State organizations be alert, original and fully up with the times. Of late nothing new has been evolved that is "catchy" and pleasing to the public in the racing line. We would suggest to our trotting horse associations that they offer tempting stakes for racing at various distances, as follows, all to be single dashes:

Yearlings—Half a mile.

Two-year-olds—One mile.

Three-year-olds—Mile and a half.

Four-year-olds—Two miles.

Five-year-olds—Two and a half miles.

Six-year-olds and upward—Three and four mile dashes.

Carry out your programme of stakes—best three in five—but in addition have two or three of these long dash races. The afternoon will then be taken up with sport that will attract thousands that never attend the best three in five heat races of the present day. Nine men out of every ten like to see a long distance running race—a test of staming as well as of speed—and there is no doubt in our minds that the same proportion would like to witness a long-distance trot.

The officials of our trotting horse associations may never have given the matter serious thought, but it is one that deserves it—the scoring in trotting races. Nothing in the world gives spectators "that tired feeling" so much as scoring horses severely—unless it is the betting on heats and plain "laying up" of the horse they have bet on. The selling of mutuels on the result of races will in future be the only kind of betting tolerated by the public, outside of pool-selling, and the sooner organizations recognize this the better it will be for their prosperity and fair name. It is the public that must be protected and their interests watched over more than that of the privilege men. If the public tires of a system and will not come to races any more the privilege man will naturally soon cut down the size of the bonus he offers the associations. After all the betting man is the life of the race course, and we cannot do without this enthusiastic element.

But to return to the scoring question. There must be a reform in this, To see horses passing in front of the grand stand to be called back a dozen times or more and the herculean efforts of a starting judge, with the veins in his neck standing out like great whip cords in his rage, and with his voice hoarse shouting at reckless drivers who will not score with the slow pole horse, is not calculated to please the vast majority—not by any meanes. If wearisome scoring keeps people away from race tracks, some new method must be devised. We would therefore suggest that, as the pole horse has less ground to cover than the outside horses by several yards, his interests do not need to be guarded so carefully. If the horses pass the wire in a bunch, and all trotting, send them away—and devil take the hindmost, pole horse, number three or five.

Many associations have already declared themselves in favor of the employment of paid starting and presiding judges, and it is not unlikely that nine out of ten will soon see the wisdom of securing competent men to fill these thankless but most important positions, and act accordingly.

Paid Judges.

This journal has made this subject one of great importance, and no better illustration of the evils of the old way of appointing judges can be adduced than in Mr. Frank H. Burke's retirement from the breeders' ranks. We know of several others who have vowed never to have their horses come on the track while certain people are in the judges' stand, because they have every reason to believe the men are incompetent and will not see that the rules are enforced in every case.

It is a sad commentary on the system that has worked silently and surely to strangle the best efforts of breeders, and from all parts of the United States instances are cited that agree with those that have received publicity in these columns. The action of the judges in the McKinney race will do more to prevent trotters from going to the City of Oranges than anything that could occur there. The decision of the judges at the four-mile race when Foster was a winner at the Bay District track, and where several other fast horses were wrongfully shut out, will never be forgotten, and such a crowd as gathered there will, in all likelihood, never be seen again on a track in this State.

The Columbia, Nashville and Independence Associations have already seen what an advantage paid judges and a paid starter will mean, and have advertised accordingly. Let us have paid judges and a paid starter at every meeting in this State this fall. By this, we do not mean to pay "prominent citizens" that have no "backbone," and are entirely ignorant of the laws of the trotting association, but men who are thoroughly qualified by experience, and whose names are above reproach for honesty, fairness and executive ability. The loss of one breeder, like the proprietor of La Siesta Stock Farm, is irreparable to the interests of the trotting horse industry of this State.

If the owners of prominent stock farms wish to introduce new strains of trotting blood in their establishments, they should not forget to attend the sales that will take place in this State and in Chicago and New York this month. There never was a finer lot offered than those advertised. Every year these royally-bred broodmares, colts and fillies will be increasing in value, and the successful breeder will find it to his advantage to breed from the very top.

Magnificent Liberality.

The Garfield Park Club (of Chicago) comes to the front with a offer of no less than $174,000 in stakes, specials and purses at their meeting. As liberal as this club was last season (they then gave $413,952 in stakes and purses), they had such grand sport and conducted it so satisfactorily that a heavy sum was cleared. The club's advertisement and stake conditions will be found in another column, and it will prove interesting reading to owners of thoroughbreds.

BAY DISTRICT TRACK.

A Few Notes Gathered at the Old-Time Race Course—What Horses Are There.

There is a charm lingering about the Bay District track to all who have ever seen it in its old-time glory and watched the great turf events that have occurred there that time will never efface. Can anyone forget its auspicious opening, with the long list of San Francisco's most prominent merchants, bankers and stockbrokers, who were there? The names of many are still seen above the various stalls in the old sheds; all, in fact, that is left to indicate that such people were once in the zenith of their glory and dwelt among us in the full enjoyment of health and wealth. Many of the organizers of the association which built the track are sleeping at the foot of Lone Mountain; their tombstones can be seen from the verandah of the clubhouse whereon they chatted and joked during the races and felt the warm blood mount their cheeks, the spirit of excitement kindling the joy and pleasure they experienced when their favorites won, or where they met the defeats of their choice with stoic indifference while they congratulated their more fortunate friends about them.

The old, deserted clubhouse, the broken-down railings, the dilapidated judges' stand, the patched-up stalls, the deep-gullied infield—all show the ravages of time and the results of neglect. The stables that have been rebuilt since the fire are beginning to show signs of decay, and the total absence of the crowds that used to gather in front of the stalls and on the verandah to discuss what was occurring in the horse world makes the place look more and more deserted and desolate-looking every day.

A number of horsemen have lately brought their strings of trotters and pacers to winter there on account of its proximity to the Golden Gate Park, with its splendid roads, on which the horses can be worked when the track is unfitted (as it is at present) by heavy rains from being brought into use.

Orrin A. Hickok has his string, including his Whips gelding; Chris. Smith; the Guy Wilkes-Lulu, pacer; Guide, 2:16¼, Coeur d' Alene, 2:19½; Peep o' Day: Balkan, 2:15, Adonis, 2:11½; Aptos Wilkes and his sister, which belong to A. Spreckles. The horses are all in fine condition and rapidly hardening up for the work they will have to do this spring. Some of them are going East, others will remain on the Coast.

In an adjoining row of stalls Wm. Fieldwick has a string of horses. Among them was noticed a fine-looking, heavy-built bay gelding by Grosvenor, belonging to Mr. Somers, of this city. The Guy Wilkes stallion, Easter Wilkes, was being jogged on the road. Easter Wilkes made a very good season at Sacramento last year. He is out of a very fast Nutwood mare called Zephyr; second dam by St. Clair. An Anteeo colt, a large-bodied youngster, is here to be educated.

C. H. Kingsley has had his favorite road horse, Allie Whipple, sent home, and in his stead has sent the good-looking mare Sally White to be handled.

S. H. Horton's three-year-old bay filly by Redwood, 2:27, looks as if she ought to be able to take her worthy owner through the park as fast as he wants to go.

Wm. Fieldwick has a chestnut gelding by the same horse that also has a very smooth way of going.

Lee Shaner has moved into the Palo Alto stables, as they are called, and has them filled with some very promising youngsters, as well as some game campaigners. In the first stall Joe Gabriel showed us a fine-looking bay colt by Soudan, 2:27¼, out of Carrie Malone (full sister to Charles Derby, 2:20). D. J. Murphy, of the Moorland Stock Farm, is the owner of this very promising trotter, as well as the gelding Nubia, by Soudan, out of Mamie Anderson, by Wapsie, that won the two-year-old stakes at San Jose during the fair last fall. A Soudan filly out of a Sidney mare, that also belongs to Mr. Murphy, is another good-gaited youngster. Each and every one shows that the stories about the splendid limbs and joints that Soudan transmits to his progeny are not founded on falsehoods, for the three we looked at cannot be improved upon. They are all of good-size and well formed. In color they have no white markings, and in disposition they are kind and intelligent. Lee says he never saw colts that needed less teaching, they are all so remarkably level-headed.

When this well-known driver started up north with a string of trotters from Petaluma, he had no idea of bringing back another, but it seems as though he could not resist the temptation, for in the row of stalls side by side we saw Almont Medium 2133 (sire of Mark Medium, 2:24), by Happy Medium, dam Lady Chiles, by Almont 33; second dam by Mambrino Patchen 58; third dam by Edwin Forrest 49. He is a beautiful dark bay in color, with black points; stands about 15.2; has a good head, and although never having received much training, shows a very nice way of going. He has had but limited opportunities in the stud since he left the Fairlawn Stock Farm, yet all of his progeny seem endowed with great natural speed. Mark Medium was the only one that has been trained.

Mark Medium, 2:24, is also here. His dam is by Fred Loeber's handsome horse, Alcona 730, and he resembles the Alconas in conformation. As he has a double cross of the great Almont, it would be a safe bet to wager that it would be difficult to make him run. He is dead game, level-headed and pure-gaited, and earned his record in the fifth heat of a race. He is only four years old.

Manning is rather a homely name for a good-sized bay gelding here that got a record of 2:20½ this year up North. It was his first season on the turf too. He is by a Messenger Duroc horse out of a Vermont Blackhawk mare.

A large roan mare with a white blaze looked over the half door of her stall at us. She is called Belle MacGregor, and is by the "Demon of the Homestretch," Robert MacGregor, out of the dam of Juanita.

Harry Howe, 2:26¼, by Swigert, is being put in readiness forthe summer campaign, and with the rest seems to thrive well in this more genial climate.

A Petaluma mare called Mabel, by Hernani (a son of Electioneer) out of a mare by General McClellan, is a very promising four-year-old.

"But the pride of the string is Jack Dempsey," a wiry-looking, tough and sinewy stallion, belonging to Lee Shaner. He is a pacer, and as game as his namesake. He was bred to a few mares as a two-year-old, and the youngsters he has here shows that he will prove a sire of speed if one is to judge by the way they move. Jack Dempsey is out of a mare by the Grand Moor.

There are several yearlings in Mr. Shaner's string at present, and he says as soon as the weather moderates he will bring some green horses and colts from Petaluma and work them here.

Mac McManus, one of the old-time trainers, greeted us. He looks remarkably well, and has just brought down from Seattle the handsome dark brown pacing mare Rosie C., 2:20¾, by Duroc Prince, out of a Pathfinder mare. She is owned by C. F. Clancy, of Seattle, Washington, and will lower her record this summer.

Dr. W. Long of Helena, Montana, has a few trotters and pacers here that are very well bred. They are all by Montana Wilkes, 14,208, he by Red Wilkes 1748 (the great sire of speed), out of Eva by Lombar, second dam by Bourbon Chief; third dam by Berthune.

The first we looked at is called Jerome. His dam is Alberta, by Del Gamo (formerly called Doncaster), a son of Dictator, second dam Tweedledum, by Woodford Mambrino; fourth dam by Pilot Jr., fifth dam the Old Tyman mare, dam of Tornado. Jerome is a coal black, blocky-built colt, showing plenty of well-placed muscle and good bone. He has a very strong way of going, with plenty of action, needing little or no weight.

His sister is called Florida, and she also shows considerable of the Red Wilkes weakness, "trotting." A three-year-old colt that pleased us is out of Brilliant, a daughter of Mambrino Diamond, 2:26 (he by Mambrino Patchen out of Lucy, by C. M. Clay, Jr. 22); second dam, Mary Eagle (dam of Ranchero, 2:21½), by American Clay. This three-year-old is called Wano Wilkes, and his two-year-old brother Banner Wilkes. They are both nice movers, and have a very bold and easy way of going.

Dr. Long purchased two likely geldings by Montana Wilkes, and both of them are receiving their first lessons in harness here.

Over at the Souther Farm this gentleman has placed Brilliant and a number of well-bred matrons for the winter.

Around in the other stalls we noticed several young horses owned by James Dustin, who, by the way, will not go to Palo Alto now, owing to the low price offered for his services at this famous farm.

Peter Brandow is not doing much at present; he is taking the world easy by just looking after the welfare of one horse.

The three late arrivals from Australia are out here at the track. The young gentleman in charge kindly led each of them out for our inspection. The first one was the blood bay mare, Repose. In appearance she represents the famous racer, Los Angeles, and is the type of a good, hardy race mare, with a splendidly-shaped body, heavy quarters, fine neck, small, dry head, with prominent eyes, quick ears, wide yet delicate nostrils. Her limbs are perfection and well set under her. From the top of her sharp withers along her short back and down to her clean hocks she is a picture of strength. Such a mare as she is a credit to the judgment of the man who selected and brought her here to sell. Her breeding, as seen from the catalogue, contains the names of a number of prominent racehorses, besides, she has also gained renown for being fast at all distances.

The next stall contained the coal-black brother of Sir Modred and Cheviot. He is called Idalium. He has a beautiful head and neck and body, heavy over the loins. He is perfectly sound in disposition; he is kind and will prove a valuable acquisition to our long line of stallions in America. His blood lines have been so often extolled by the leading turf writers who have seen his two brothers that it is unnecessary to repeat them; suffice it to say that he is related to the kings and queens of the equine world.

The black horse with blaze and white feet that has the Australian name, Merriwa, is a type of horse that will suit the most exacting of horsemen. His peculiar markings count for naught when we remember the great Salvator, Boston, Joe Hooker and the many other wonderful runners and sires that are so peculiarly marked. In form, he is hard to excel His strong limbs, beautiful head, large stifles and arms, good back and deep girth, well-shaped shoulders, fine neck and lofty style would captivate the eye of the critic. He is also remarkably well bred, and will prove as a sire a valuable outcross for the many Lexington mares that are now filling the paddocks of our rich breeding farms. In a few weeks, after these animals have recuperated from the effects of their long journey, they will present a far handsomer appearance than they do at present.

Silver Bow.

This magnificent son of Robt. MacGregor, 2:17½, will make the season of 1892 at the Silver Bow Stock Farm near Milpitas. There are few better-formed, more perfect in action or gamer horses than he, and while at Oakland last year Silver Bow was the subject of praise by all horsemen who saw him in his stall or on the track. He is one of that kind of trotters that lowers his record every year, and as all of his progenitors are trotters and appear in the great table, Silver Bow should prove a great sire.

Wilkesdale, 2:29.

This splendid son of Alcantara and Thorndale Maid will make the season at Wolf's Stables, Stockton, Cal. From wonderful performing and producing families on both sides of the house, that this fine individual will produce fast and game trotters is certain. See advertisement in another column of this paper.

Don't belch in people's faces. Take Simmons Liver Regulator.

Grand Thouroughbred Stallions.

The Menlo Stock Farm, Searsville, San Mateo county, Cal., will be famous ere many years roll around as the home of three of the greatest stallions that ever stood in the Golden State, as well as for the fast thoroughbreds from their loins that come forth to follow in the footsteps of their illustrious, all-conquering sires.

On this farm are to be found three stallions whose services can be secured at extremely low rates, considering their royal breeding and splendid individuality. St. Carlo, five years old, the premier stallion of the farm, is by the $100,000 stallion, imp. St. Blaise (winner of the Epsom Derby of 1883), dam Carina, by Kingfisher, her dam Carita (dam of the great King Crab, Carnot and Cara Mia), by The Ill-Used (sire of His Highness, winner of $107,000 as a two-year-old). In St. Carlo, besides the lines mentioned above, is the much-prized blood of The Hermit (England's greatest sire), Touchstone, (the wonderful sire and winner of the St Leger), Beeswing, (winner of four Doncaster Cups and by many considered the greatest race mare England ever saw), Orlando (Derby of 1844), Whisker, Dr. Syntax, Kingston, (winner Goodwood Cup of 1852), Breadalbane (brother to the renowned Blair Athol) Ellermire. King Tom, Pocahontas (the most famous race mare of her era), Kingfisher, Stockwell, Venison, Pyrrhus I, Chanticleer, Pantaloon, winners known all over the world and great afterward in stud and harem—in short, no horse ever stood in America more royally-bred than St. Carlo, himself a grand race horse and individual.

Imp. Suwarrow is a horse of splendid conformation, strong, shapely legs, handsome and intelligent head, a winner of, many rich stakes in Australia and a producer of race horses. He should prove a grand outcross for our native mares, with the scarce and much prized blood of Blacklock, Voltigeur and Touchstone in his veins.

Sinfax is so well and favorably known and his grand performances are of such a recent date that he speaks for himself almost. No better two-year-old ever raced on the Pacific Coast than Sinfax, winner of twelve races in the season of 1890. Sinfax is a perfect model of a great race horse, young, grandly bred, game to the core and of fine size. His mile and a quarter, 2:07½, stands to-day as the record for two-year-olds. See advertisement of Menlo Stock Farm in another column and address James Hagan, Searsville, San Mateo county, Cal., in relation to sending your mares to these splendid stallions.

Catalogues Received.

The Woodburn catalogue of trotting stock is at hand. At the old home of Maud S. and other equine stars are offered for sale eighty-five head of royally-bred animals, mostly yearlings and two-year-olds, by Harold, Lord Russell, King Wilkes, Belmont, Yataghan, Sineus, Electioneer and his sons (Fallis, Re-Election and Expedition, latter two full brothers), Pilot Medium, Shawmut, Matterhorn, Pistachio (brother to Nutwood), Lawrence and Sandwich. The dams of the youngsters for sale are bred in the purple, and the catalogue is interesting to students of blood lines.

We have just received the catalogue of the Forest City Farm of C. F. Emery, Cleveland, O. It is a well-gotten-up volume of 143 pages (including cover), and the large number of horses catalogued are by Patron, Brown Wilkes, Nugget, Connaught, Monte Carlo and Hermes. The matrons are bred in the purple, being by Princeps, Harold, Lyle Wilkes, Nutwood, Woodford Mambrino, Mambrino Patchen, Belmont, Patron, Epaulet and others just as famous.

The catalogue of S. H. Shallcross, of Louisville, Ky., has arrived. There are offered for sale some eighteen head of fine trotting stock, the get of George Wilkes, Nutwood, Baron Chief, Almont Wilkes, Gen. Washington, Wilton, Artillery, Pancoast, William L., Abbotsford, Aberdeen, Epaulet, Bow Bells, Mambrino King and Egotist. There are broodmares, colts and fillies, and for information regarding them Look & Smith, Louisville, Ky., should be written to.

The Oakwood Park Stock Farm (formerly called the Cook Farm) has just issued its catalogue for 1892, and it is remarkably neat in design and by far the most complete one issued by any of our California stock farms this year. The stallions Steinway, Chas. Derby, Prince Red and Wildo have the pedigress tabulated, while the thirty-nine broodmares form a galaxy for breeding and individuality that are unexcelled by any other like number in this State on one stock farm. The list of colts and fillies is not very large, but what it lacks in quantity it makes up for it in quality. For those who are desirous of getting royally-bred youngsters we can recommend them to visit this beautiful place.

St. Louis' Coming Great Meeting.

In another column will be found the conditions in the very liberal stakes offered by the St. Louis A. and M. Association. No less than $150,000 in stakes and purses will be given out before the summer has fairly dawned (April 30th to June 24th), and owners of thoroughbreds on this Coast should not let this opportunity of winning a goodly sum with their horses pass by. C. W. Bellairs, the well-known sporting writer, is the secretary, and with his knowledge of how business should be conducted, that turfmen will meet with courteous, fair treatment goes without saying. Rolla Wells, Esq., is President of the association, and communications can be addressed to him at 509 Olive Street. Owners, do not forget to read the St. Louis A. and M. Association's advertisement.

Elector 2,170.

This famous stallion, greatest producing son of the immortal Electioneer, will make a full season at the farm of L. A. Richards, Grayon Stanislaus County, Cal. Elector 2,170 has nine in the list with records ranging from 2:20 to 2:30, and his progeny, which show great speed at an early age, speak for themselves. For further particulars see advertisement in another column.

Frank H. Burke has decided to sell every one of his horses, mares, colts and fillies. The action of certain judges on the circuit, and especially those at Los Angeles, has disgusted this well-known breeder with the way the races were managed.

Anyone wanting choice broodmares and colts should correspond immediately with I. H. Crane Turlock, whose advertisement is in another column.

Answers to Correspondents.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof o good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph

To J. D. H., Tacoma, Wash.—We nowlfind that Kosciusko, sire of Woodford, was by St. Archy, dam Lottery, by imp. Bedford: second dam imp. Anvellina, by Anvil.

Reader, San Jose.—Please state through your valuable paper where and when Maraquita, by Eros, got a record of 2:30. I see in the Kentucky Stock Farm that she has a record of 2:30. Answer—July 4, 1891 at San Jose, she trotted against Emma R. and Rockwood, and won the second heat in 2:30.

F. H. B., San Francisco.—Will any of our readers please give pedigree and history of Bucephalus, sire of Washington pacer, 2:21¼, also of the black mare Rosy, pacing record 2:36, made against Washington and Keno in 1874. According to Chester, Rosy was by Bucephalus, and Washington was also by Bucephalus. I have always understood that this mare Rosy (or Rose Washington) was by Washington.

T. W. B., San Jose.—Please tell in your next how many Electioneer has below 2:30. Answer—He has sired nineteen with records below 2:30.

Will A. J. Packard, the owner of Elmwood, by Nutwood 600, please give us the name of the dam of Elmwood, and also the name of her sire?

G. E. Fresno Cal., asks: What stallion in California, producer or performer, has the largest percentage of George M. Patchen blood? Some one please answer this.

G. M., F., San Luis Obispo.—Will you please publish the pedigree of the thoroughbred stallion Sacramento, formerly owned in the central part of the State and later in southern part—say about fifteen years ago. Answer.—Foaled 1866, by Rifleman, dam Bonni Bell, by Belmont; second dam LizGivens by Langford; third dam Charlotte Pace by Sir Archy.

W. S. C., Victoria, B. C.—1 How many has Santa Claus in the 2:30 list, also their names? 2. When did he retire to the stud, and is he still alive, and where? Answer—1. Four. San Mateo, 2:28¾, and Kris Kringle, 2:28¾, trotters; Sidney, 2:19¾, and San Jose, 2:30, pacers. 2. He was retired to the stud in 1881. We have not heard of his death, and John E. Turner, Philadelphia, Pa., was his owner at last accounts.

Subscriber, Visalia, Cal.—Will you be kind enough to inform me through the columns of your valuable paper if there is a horse registered under the name of Glenway, foaled in 1890, sired by Strathway. If so, what is his number? Answer—See Captain J. Hayes, of Visalia, who owns Strathway, and who no doubt can enlighten you on this subject. The coming volume of the Register may contain it, but that will not arrive for about a month.

C. P. C., Tacoma, Wash.—Please inform a constant subscriber of your valuable paper: 1st, Who bred Paul's Abdallah by Hambletonian 10, and what name is he registered under? 2nd Do you know anything of Jim Lick by Guy Miller by Hambletonian 10 that stood in California, is the sire of Agnes, the dam of Free Coinage. Answer.—We have answered this question many times, and ask you to please write to Joe Basstord, Vacaville, Cal. If you will read the files of the paper you will find the other question answered.

M. K., Oakville, Cal.—I would like to ask if you know anything about the breeding of a horse called Pilgrim that stood at Woodland or near there in the year 1867? The same was owned and managed by Messrs Woodman & Jones. Any information would be thankfully received. Answer—Write to John Adams, Woodland, Cal. owner of the Adams mare, a well known sprinter, or to Mr. Whitmore (owner of Long John, 2:32, sired by Pilgrim), Woodland, California. He owns a livery stable there. Pilgrim sired a good runner named George Moore also, owned in Sacramento. His breeding is not given in the stud books.

To D. A. T., Forestville.—I see by your issue of December 26th that D. A. T., Forestville, asked the breeding of Osceola. The sire you give is correct, but the breeding of Black Maria will not pass muster. Black Maria, the dam of Osceola, was out of a large black mare (thoroughbred) that crossed the plains from Kentucky to California, and was sold by the parties that brought her to California to Sam Neal, who lived south of Chico. Neal had several large bands of Spanish mares the finest I ever saw in California. Amongst other horses he owned was a fine American stallion that he let run with these mares. This stallion is the sire of Black Maria, and not Belmont. The dam of Black Maria was a good race mare over a distance of ground. The last I ever heard of the dam of Black Maria she was owned by George Brittan, who lived at the South pass of the Buttes in Sutter County. He bought her at the sale of Sam Neal's horses after his death. I expect the pedigree of the old mare could be found there. She ran two races at Cushion's old track, north of Marysville against a gray mare that belonged to Shelton Wright, called Pocahontas.

G. W. CARTER, Helena, Mont.

VETERINARY.

Conducted by Wm. F. Egan, M. R. C. V. S., F. E. V, M. S.

Subscribers to this paper can have advice through this column in all cases of sick or injured horses or cattle by sending an explicit description of the case. Applicants will send their name and address that they may be identified. Questions requiring answers by mail should be accompanied by two dollars, and addressed to Wm. F Egan, M. R. C. V. S., Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco.

J. M. M., Grass Valley.—Have you or can you recommend me a good book on treatment of diseases of horses and colts a good comprehensive work for reference in drug store? Am willing to pay good price for same. Answer.—"The Principles and Practice of Veterinary Medicine," by W. Williams, or "The Principles and Practice of Veterinary Surgery," by same author.

C. S. C., Oakland.—Please give receipt of thrush. Answer—Clean the affected part well out and remove all loose or diseased hoof. If the horse be very lame, give a purgative and poultice the foot for a day or two. Then apply some powdered burnt alum, which may be kept in by means of oakum. If there be no lameness, the poultice and purgative may be dispensed with. Keep the feet dry and do not let him stand in his manure.

C. J. M., San Francisco.—I have a mule lame in one of her hind legs. She walks on her toe and does not put her foot square on the ground. I suppose the contraction of the main leader or cord causes it, as it is somewhat enlarged. I have had the foot thoroughly examined, and it seems sound. Will be obliged to you for advice as to what treatment I should pursue. Answer—Put on a high heeled shoe to take the strain off the tendon. Then fire and blister her and give two months' rest. If you cannot get her fired blistering, of itself, will be very beneficial.

P. J. L., Valley Spring.—I have three suckling colts sired by the same horse, and the dams of two of the colts are full sisters, the third mare being the dam of the other two mares and sucklings. What relation are the three suckling colts? Answer—You do not say whether the two younger mares are full sisters, or whether they are by the same sire as their little sister. However, the latter is very improbable, therefore the colt of the old mare is step uncle to the other two colts. All three colts, being by the same sire but different dams, are half brothers, showing a double relationship.

P. J. L., Valley Spring.—I am milking a heifer whose teats are covered with large, strimpy warts that are constantly growing. Can you tell me how to remove them? Answer.—I should not recommend any treatment while she is milking, as the constant handling of the teats will keep them sore. When the cow is dry, if they be small at the base, tie a silk thread round each wart, knotting it so that you can tighten it a little every day, and the warts will soon fall off. Cutting the warts off and searing the parts with a red hot iron is about the quickest and most effectual way to get rid of them, but if the cow be heavy in calf and of a nervous disposition, she may injure herself in the struggle which generally ensues. Nitrate of silver applied daily will remove small ones.

Some questions remain unanswered, owing to their having no name and address to them.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

The SYMPTOMS of Liver Complaint are a bitter or bad taste in the mouth; Pain in the Back, Sides or Joints, often mistaken for Rheumatism; SOUR STOMACH; Loss of Appetite; Bowels alternately costive and laxative; Headache; Loss of memory, with a painful sensation of having failed to do something which ought to have been done; DEBILITY, LOW SPIRITS, a thick, yellow appearance of the Skin and Eyes, a dry Cough often mistaken for Consumption.

Sometimes many of these symptoms attend the disease, at others very few; but the LIVER, the largest organ in the body, is generally the seat of the disease, and if not regulated in time great suffering, wretchedness and DEATH will ensue.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion						Hurrah (imp.)
Fashion		Monarch				Jovial	Newminster
Bonnets o'Blue	Trustee (imp.)	Delphine	Priam			Sister to Grey Morning	Bay Middleton	Beeswing	Touchstone

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares. SERVICE FEE $100 FOR THE SEASON. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,000 purse, Free For-All, defeating Faust, 2:14; Steve Whipple, 2:25, Ida D., 2:25 and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¾, Frank M., the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:21¾ and 2:23¾. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 2, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action, surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by Silver Bow which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. By THORNDALE, 2:22½, Sire of

EDWIN THORNE, 2:16½, DAISYDALE, 2:19½, and five others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25½, THORNDALE, 2:22½, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four-year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17) and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire Alcantara at fifteen years old, has forty seven in the 2.30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2.30 list this year. His full brother Alcyone died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty five in the 2.30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¼, fastest record for a four year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:17, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17½ (who has shown trials the past season in 2:14), Thornton 2:26¾ and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:22½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:14½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few, of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last sore and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at W. H.'s stables in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privilege for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

I have six well-bred mares, average age five years, both standard and non-standard; five, and possibly all, in foal to Ashwood, one of the best-bred Nutwoods in the State.

Also a fine two-year old stallion by Alcazar, sixteen hands and a fine looker; showed 2:41 last summer with little work. I took this stock in a real estate transaction and have no use for it; will sell cheap or exchange for mules.

Also for sale Electress, five years, by Richards' Elector, dam Sugar Plum (thoroughbred), with three weeks at the kite, made record of 2:27½; has shown 2:16 gait. She is a fine individual and should be one of the finest brood mares in the State as well as a fast and game trotter; and the two-year-old stallion Go Boy, by Redwood, dam Minnie Sherman, out of Bonnie Belle by Belmont, shows a 2:40 gait. He is full brother to Wilea Boy, three years old, who I am told is trotting a 2:30 clip. I also have a weanling filly full sister to the above colts; also Minnie Sherman, the dam now heavy in foal to Fearless.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¾ seconds, in nineteen days, last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two mile heats

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16-1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty, that it is universally admitted that in those respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race is as steady and level headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of Geo, Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and others in the 2:30 list Grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼, Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾ and Jay-Eye See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of Geo. Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side, to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, dam Lady Chrisman by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29¼, Balkan, 2:15 and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionally fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $10 0 -and his service is offered at $20).

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

EL BENTON

(Three-quarter brother to SUNOL, 2:08¼; NORVAL, 2:17½)

- HAMBLETONIAN 10 — 41 in 2:30 list.
  - ABDALLAH 1
  - CHAS. KENT MARE
- GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
  - HARRY CLAY 45
  - SHANGHAI MARY

NELLIE BENTON — Trial for Charles Marvin, 2:18.
- GENERAL BENTON 1755 — 17 in 2:30 list and dam of Sunol, 2:08¼.
  - JIM SCOTT 836
  - LADY BENTON
- NORMA, 2:33¼ — Dam of Norval, 2:17½; Norris, 2:22½; also Lucy Cuyler, trial for Robert Bonner, 2:15½; Nellie Benton, trial for Chas. Marvin, 2:18.
  - ALEXANDER'S NORMAN — Lula, 2:15; May Queen, 2:20.
  - BY TODHUNTER'S SIR WALLACE

Fourth dam Eagletta by Grey Eagle, sire of grandam of Ansel, 2:20.
Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¼; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

$200 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

GLEN FORTUNE

ELECTIONEER 125 — Sunol, 2:08¼; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.
- HAMBLETONIAN 10 — His sons have produced nearly 1,000 in 2:30
  - ABDALLAH 1
  - CHAS. KENT MARE
- GREEN MOUNTAIN MAID — 8 in 2:30.
  - HARRY CLAY 45
  - SHANGHAI MARY

GLENNE — Out of a half-sister to Green Mountain Maid.
- MESSENGER DUROC 106 — 20 in 2:30; dams of 19 in 2:30.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10
  - BY ROE'S ABDALLAH CHIEF
- GLENELLA — Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.
  - WOODWARD STAR — Son of Seely's American Star.
  - SHANGHAI MARY — Grandam of Electioneer.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

grandam of Prætor, 2:29½.
Fourth to fourteenth dams thoroughbred.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

— ON —

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1892,

AT 10 A. M., AT

SALES YARD, CORNER VAN NESS AVENUE and MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

The continued ill-health of Dr. Hicks compels him, reluctantly, to permanently retire from the business of breeding standard-bred horses. He has leased his stallions to parties in Indiana, and through the medium of the auction block proposes to dispose of his broodmares and young horses. His splendid array of broodmares, with their produce, collected and bred with such care and excellent judgment, will be placed unreservedly in the hands of the public, he feeling confident their merit will be recognized and fair prices obtained. His stock runs largely to the great speed lines of the country, and judicious crossing has produced broodmares which are invaluable to the breeding community.

Full catalogues giving breeding, registry, etc., together with breeding of stallions, for reference, may be had upon application to the undersigned, 22 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Cal.

When Your Blacksmith Tells You

that he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP; that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mis-taken. However, don't point out the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut; and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing on both heels and the entire wearing surface.

The Standard-Bred Trotting Stallion

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander 190; second dam Belle by Gen Taylor, third dam Belle by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Blackhawk, out of Boston Girl, an inbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centerville Course, Long Island, in 1855, two miles in 5:31½ and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most promising fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with tan muzzle and flanks. He is 15.3 hands high and weighs 1080 pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO,

By ANTEVOLO

Out of the dam Alto. She is five years old, bright bay in color, with black points, never been trained for speed, but can be driven anywhere. She is a fine, large rangy mare, and just the kind that is most needed on a stock farm. She was stinted to Stammon last spring and is believed to be in foal. Stammon is by Stamboul 2:11, out of a mare by The Moor.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

WHAT AND HOW TO FEED STOCK.

Matters of Great Importance to Breeders and Owners of Horses and Cattle.

By Dr. Thomas Maclay, M. R. C. V. S.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman, Dear Sir:—In accordance with your request, under date of December 22, 1891, for a paper on the feeding of domestic animals, I have prepared and herewith submit the following:

As a consideration of such a subject is one of great importance to all who are interested in the management of the domestic animals, both from a utilitarian and economical point of view, I would say that in dealing with this subject matter it will not be possible to bring before you or your readers much that is entirely new or original, as I have to a large extent followed the footsteps of several of our ablest writers, and I have taken the liberty of referring to and consulting the work of R. M. Smith, A. M., M. D., Professor of Comparative Physiology in the University of Pennsylvania, also a paper on this subject by Dr. Malcolm, member of the Midland Countries Veterinary Medical Association, England. With these preliminary remarks, I will now take up the subject:

Foods.—Under this head it would be improper for me to proceed without first touching upon one of the main elements of life, viz., oxygen.

Oxygen is a gaseous element, which to a great extent enters into the composition of the atmosphere. It has long been an established fact that the higher plants remove for nutritive purposes carbonic oxide, from the atmosphere and return oxygen, to it; the animal economy retains a portion of the oxygen of the atmosphere, not remaining fixed as such in the body, but to be again returned to the atmosphere as carbolic oxide and water.

In animals, life depends upon the constant appropriation of oxygen, its union with the different constituents of the body and final elimination through the lungs and skin as carbonic oxide and water and through the bowels and kidneys in other simple compounds.

Therefore, through the absorption of oxygen there is produced no increase in bulk of the animal body, but rather a decrease. To meet this waste of the organism there must be a constant appropriation of tissue constituents. Such substances are called foods.

The principles of food, whether derived from the animal or vegetable kingdom, and whether appropriated by the herbivora or carnivora, are not retained in the organism in the form in which they are taken as food. They must first be subjected to certain modifications before they can become constituents of the animal tissue or juices; in other words, they cannot fulfill their nutritive purposes until they have been subjected to preparatory modifications in the digestive tube.

These modifications are in general not very profound, and usually consist in reducing foods to a soluble form or in reducing them to a state in which absorption is possible. This is the sole end of digestion. The aliments are, in the digestive tract, split up into their nutritive elements, which are prepared for their absorption, while the non-nutritive portions are expelled. Thus, the blood of animals is continually receiving additions from the food, which it carries to different organs and tissues. Certain of these are fixed or assimilated, replacing analogous substances rendered unfit for carrying on the vital functions; the others are modified and destroyed. There is thus an incessant movement in the animal economy, a continuous interchange of material, and a double current of entering and expelled materials.

This double current is marked by two series of chemical phenomena—the one terminating in the fixation of the nutritive principles in the economy, in their assimilation; the other, in their decomposition, their retrogressive metamorphosis, or their disassimilation. The ensemble of these two chemical phenomena constitutes nutrition.

Foods of animal are destined to supply the waste tissues. They must, therefore, to be complete, embrace all the tissue ingredients which are liable to waste. The statement, therefore, of these tissue infiredients will be also a statement of the essential food stuffs.

The chief constituents of the blood, flesh and other tissues, may be classified as follows:

ORGANIC.
Nitrogenous.	Non-Nitrogenous.
Albuminous bodies and their derivatives.	Carbo-Hydrates and Hydro-Carbons.
INORGANIC.
Water,	Sodium Chloride,
Alkaline Phosphates,	Sodium Sulphate,

It is rarely the case, however, that these simple nuturitive substances are taken separately as food.

Ordinarily the alimentary substances are formed of mixtures, in various proportions, of the simple nutritive substance.

Thus, water we drink contains mineral salts in solution. Meat contains water, albuminous bodies, salts and fats, while milk contains all the alimentary principles.

Blood is the chief nutritive fluid of animals. What, therefore, is to be converted into tissue must first be converted into blood; consequently, the substances taken in food must first be converted into blood, or, at least, pass into the blood, to be of nutritive value.

Vegetable Foods.—Some vegetables, as the herbaceous plants, contain nutritive principles in all their parts; others, only in their roots, stem, bark, leaves, fruit or juices. The parts of plants above the ground—that is, their stem, leaves, flowers and fruits—are in general the most nutritious from the time when vegetation is well commenced to the time of flowering. Earlier than this the herbaceous plants are too watery and later too dry to prove very nutritious. The stems of leguminous plants are nutritive while young, while their leaves are suitable for food in all varieties of vegetation.

The vegetable foods may be given to our domestic animals in the fresh state, containing their natural juices, when they are termed green fodder, or after having been dried by the sun, when they are called dry fodder.

Green fodder, as a rule, is more readily digestible than dry fodder. Thus, experiments made by feeding oxen at one time with fresh red clover, and another time with the same material carefully dried, have shown the following excess of matters digested in favor of the green fodder:

Solids	2.3 to 5.5 per cent. more digested
Proteids	2.7 to 3.2 " " " "
Carbo-hydrates	1.1 to 5.6 " " " "
Fats	2.1 to 21.0 " " " "
Cellulose	2.6 to 6.2 " " " "

The following represent the principal vegetable food-stuffs: The seeds of the grains, or the cereals; the hulls and fruits of the leguminous plants; the vegetables, as potatoes, turnips and beets; and hay, grasses and straw, of the green and dry fodders:

First—The cereals—Wheat, barley, corn and oats belong to this group, and are valuable food-stuffs. Their chemical composition is subject to variation dependent upon the mode of culture, the nature of the soil and climate. The following table gives their average composition:

In 100 parts.	Wheat.	Rye.	Oats.	Barley.	Corn.
Water	13.6	15.3	13.5	13.8	13.9
Albumen	12.4	11.4	11.9	11.2	10.1
Fat	1.7	1.7	5.8	2.1	4.8
Carbo-hydrates and non-extractive matters	67.9	67.8	57.5	65.5	66.8
Cellulose	2.7	2.0	8.1	4.8	2.8
Ash	1.7	1.8	3.2	2.6	1.7

Bran from wheat has been found to contain 13 per cent. water, 14.5 per cent. albumen, 2 per cent. fat, 55 per cent. carbo-hydrates and 17.5 per cent. cellulose.

Barley and oats are food-constituents which are especially valuable for horses when a large amount of nutritive principles in a concentrated form is required. Rye is poorer in albuminous principles than wheat, but is, nevertheless, a valuable food-stuff. Oats are, above all, the best force-developing food for horses, a fact which is universally recognized.

To foals at first only crushed oats should be given, the transition to whole oats being only gradually accomplished.

Oatmeal is also a good addition to the food of milk cattle, and is said to increase both the amount of milk and the amount of butter. As a fattening food for cattle, oats are not preferable to other cereals.

Oatstraw is the most nutritious of the cereal straws. Ruminants digest the proteid matters 40.7, fats 30.1, carbo-hydrates 45.5 per cent.

Of the group of hordeum (barley), various representatives are useful as green fodder, but more especially their grains and straw. The barley grains are readily digestible, and in the form of meal form a food of the first class in nutritive properties for cattle, and are especially valued for the good influence which they exert on the quality and quantity of the milk and butter. For horses also they may be used to a certain extent as a substitute for oats, given in the entire form mixed with chopped straw. To old horses or foals, on the other hand, barley should be given as a meal, or after being crushed. It has been stated that if the barley-grains are swallowed whole they swell up in the stomach and may produce serious colic. My own experience warrants me in saying that when used to any very great extent they produce irritation of the digestive organs and skin.

Barley bran should only be given to animals after being boiled or steamed. Steamed barley also is a valuable food.

Buckwheat is often used as a green fodder, and its grain is frequently administered as dry food. When given to cattle the milk and butter assume a beautiful yellow color. It is not well suited to constitute the sole food for cattle, and is only suitable for horses as an accessory food.

Second—Leguminous plants stand next in nutritive value to the cereals. They are composed of the peas, beans and lentils. Beans are seldom used as green fodder, or as a principal article of diet, since they are too rich in nitrogen, but they are very valuable in mixture, and are the usual means by which we increase the albuminoid ratio of food deficient in nitrogenous matter. Peas—Green peas are especially good as a food for milk cattle, and give a pleasant taste to the butter. Dried peas are also highly digestible. They are a fattening food of the first rank for hogs, and, like barley, greatly improve the character of their fat and flesh. When given in large amounts to cattle they are apt to make the butter too hard.

Third—Bulbs and roots, represented by the potato, beets, etc., constitute another group of vegetable foods. Potatoes are of very much less nutritive value than either of the preceding groups of foods, from the fact that they contain but a small amount of albuminous matters, but a very large amount of starch. Large amounts of water are present in bulbs and roots which serve as food, with small amounts of solids (86 to 14). Fodder beets (beta vulgaris) of which a large variety is met with, form valuable articles of fodder, those with the round roots being usually more rich in nutritive constituents.

Fourth—Grasses—In addition to the foregoing nutritive substances, domestic animals may be nourished on the various grasses, hays, bran and straw.

In 100 Parts.	Prairie Hay.	Rye Straw.		Grass.
		Best.	Ordinary
Water	13.0	13.8	18.6	75.0
Albumen	9.5	3.9	1.5	3.0
Fats	3.1	1.0	1.5	0.8
Carbo-hydrates and non-nitrogenous extractive matters	40.9	34.7	32.4	13.1
Ash	6.8	6.5	3.0	2.1

All forms of fodder undergo in time considerable deterioration in the amounts of their nutritive constituents, especially if preserved in localities where they are accessible to the air, moisture, light and warmth. Fermentative processes are started up by the presence of various forms of the lower organisms, and occasion a reduction in both the non-nitrogenous and proteid constituents of fodders.

Thus prairie hay, when fresh, has a nitrogenous percentage of 1.81 per cent, while, if kept for two years, it falls to 1.68. It is not necessary, however, to keep it so long before discovering considerable loss in its nutritive principles. The more the fodders are protected from the air, the less will be the loss. The preservation of the grain by stowing it in close chambers is a very ancient one. The process of ensilage is so well known to the farmers and horsemen of the present day that it would be superfluous for me to repeat it here. By this process a succulent food is obtained in place of a dry one, with but little loss of nutritive constituents; certainly less than occurs during hay-making in wet weather, although there is but little increase in the digestibility of the grass.

Vegetable matters all contain from two to eight times as much potassium as sodium, and explains the fact that the herbivorous animals need an extra ration of common salt, sodium chloride.

Straw is difficult to digest, is only slightly nutritive and requires large quantities of the digestive secretions for the solution of its nutritive constituents. Straw is somewhat more readily digested by the ruminants than by the horse.

Very frequently various forms of vegetable food will produce disturbances of digestion in the domestic animals from the mixing with them of various forms of adulteration, or from various defects in the character or quality of the food. The capability of recognizing this in a general way is, therefore, desirable. Thus, spoiled hay or hay which has lost its organic constituents likewise loses its normal greenish color, and is of a dirty-gray or brown tint; while acid fermentation or putrefaction in all fodders may be recognized by the characteristic odor and taste. Good oats must be clean and composed of perfectly-formed mealy granules, and possess a certain definite specific gravity. Unripe or frozen oats have a less specific gravity and a less nutritive value, while spoiled oats are recognized by a musty smell and unpleasant, burning taste.

The quality of the hay will, of course, depend upon the quality of the ground and its botanical constituents, the time of cutting and the mode of preservation. In order to judge of the quality and nutritive value of hay, it may be divided into three different groups. In the first group are the sweet grasses (graminew); in the second, the acid grasses; in the third, all other grasses. The richer the hay is in the sweet grasses, in clovers, and leguminous plants, the better it is. The richer it is in acid, marshy grasses and the like, the poorer it is. Hay cut in summer is better and more nutritious than that cut in autumn, and so with second crop or after-cut. In the latter also the aromatic hay-odor is wanting. Hay which has been wet by the rain, so losing a large part of its organic matters, and that which has been kept for several years, has but little more nutritive worth than straw. Analysis has shown that clover and prairie hays which have been exposed to the rain for one or two weeks may lose as much as 12 per cent of their nutritive matters.

In the manufacture of various food products residues are often left which may be of considerable nutritive value for our domestic animals. Of the dry residues the various milled foods, such as meals and flours of the different cereals, are the most important. The residue from beer-breweries, etc., is also a valuable food. We have the beer-mash (brewer's grain), the residue from distilleries, the so-called distillery mash or swill; the residue from the distillation of potatoes; the residue remaining after the distillation of corn; the residue from the distillation of rye, and the beet residue.

The above-named are all valuable, but must be used with discrimination and caution.

The residue after the extraction of oil from the seeds of the various members of the cotton-plants (gossypium herbaceum), or so-called cotton-seed cake, furnishes a valuable food for fattening and milk cattle. The following table gives their composition:

	Cottonseeds.	Oil Cake from Unhulled Seeds	Oil Cake from Hulled Seeds
Proteids	22.7-22.8	18.0-28.3	19.7-19.2
Fats	29.4-30.3	4.8- 9.8	5.4-19.7
Non nitrogenous extractive matters	7.6-14.4	24.9-36.7	10.5-29.8
Ash	8.0	6.6	7.4

The oil-cake from the hulled seeds constitutes one of the most nutritious of all fodders. From digestion experiments on ruminants, Wolff has found the following amounts to be digested:

	Proteids.	Fats	Non-nitrogenous Extractive Matters
Unhulled cakes	75.1	90.8	46.2

The higher digestibility of the oil-cake from the hulled seeds is without doubt to be attributed to the large amount of cellulose in the hulls. The oil-cake from the unhulled seeds is of a dark-brown color, while that from the hulled seeds when fresh is greenish, but also becomes brownish with age. Both of these forms of fodder are often contaminated by the accidental mixture of various substances, such as particles of iron from the presses, and when kept in moist places with various forms of moulds which lead to the development of ptomaines and other poisonous alkaloids, and so may explain their hurtful action. The American cotton-seed cake is of a bright yellow color. If dark in color it has either been subjected to pressure while too hot, or has spoiled from being kept in too moist a place, and hence of poor quality. In good condition it should have a pleasant, oily smell and a nutty taste, and should be hard and dry. When in good condition such a fodder is readily taken by domestic animals; although, especially if not perfectly fresh and of the first quality, the cattle must be gradually accustomed to it. Under all circumstances it is advisable to administer it dry, mixed up with other forms of fodder.

In contact with hot fluids it developes an extremely unpleasant taste. To milk cattle from three to five pounds, to draft oxen three to four pounds, and to beeves six pounds for every one thousand pounds of body weight may be given. Sheep and cattle may receive frem one-half to one pound, and horses one to two pounds.

An additional advantage of this substance as a fodder is its great cheapness.

Inorganic Foods.—Of the inorganic foods, water, common salt, salts of lime and potassium and iron are indispensable, as they are the necessary constituents of the blood, lymph, bones and different tissues, and are continually being removed in the nutritive processes of the economy.

Water.—Water as an alimentary principle, is taken into the system, either alone as drink, or in combination with articles of food, in both of which cases it is also associated with a certain amount of inorganic salts, for animals, unless pressed by great thirst, will refuse to drink distilled water. The purest water is not necessarily the best for animals or man, nor is dirty water necessarily injurious. Drinking water must possess certain qualities. It must be fresh, clear, without odor, and of a certain taste. It should always contain gases and mineral matter in solution, but be free from organic substances. A sufficient supply of pure water is essential for the maintenance of health, and if it is frequently and regularly given, the horse himself will usually be the best judge of the quantity he requires. To insure a constant supply, many people from time to time have had water-troughs placed in the stable alongside the manger, but in the majority of these cases this plan has been discontinued, and the old system of supplying the water, either in a common trough or by bucket, returned to. The cause of failure has been the proximity of the water to the feed; as a consequence, food gets into the water and water into the food; acid fermentation supervenes amongst the unconsumed provender, which if thrown away is so much, and if eaten is liable to produce digestive derangement. This difficulty would be done away with by having stables fitted with loose boxes instead of stalls, with the water-trough fixed at one end of the box and feed-manger at the other. Where a constant supply of water is provided it assist in banishing such complaints as colic, indigestion or impaction. If water be deficient there is not only imperfect elimination of effete material from the system, but the digestion of the food is interfered with, and impaction of the bowels not infrequent.

The supply of water should be limited or withheld for a time when horses are excessively heated, also when stabled after doing a hard day's work in particularly cold weather. In my opinion, neglect of this precaution, especially in the latter case, is a more fruitful source of chill and congestion of the lungs than any other. The necessity of giving water before food, except in the instances just mentioned, will be readily admitted when the small size of the horse's stomach is borne in mind. If water be withheld until after feeding, it is in most cases almost physically impossible for both food and water to be retained in the stomach, consequently a portion of the food is carried into the intestines undigested, where, being a loss to the animal, it is a source of evil.

Nutritive Salts.—Of these the most important is common salt.

This substance enters largely into the composition of all animal tissues and fluids, and when not supplied in proper amount produces great disturbances of nutrition, and a morbid craving for it has often been noticed.

In addition to the above-named salt, phosphates, carbohydrates and sulphates are also of great nutritive value.

Suckling animals receive in the milk of their mothers when normal a sufficiency of these inorganic matters; thus, a suckling calf receives daily about one and three-quarter ounces of inorganic matter in the milk of the mother, and a calf six months old appropriates calcium phosphate from its fodder; while a horse fed on oats and hay receives daily about five and three-quarter ounces of calcium phosphate.

Death of a Celebrated Old Trainer.

The venerable and once popular and successful trainer, J. B. Pryor, died on Sunday morning last at his residence in Monmouth county, N. J., of pneumonia. Mr. Pryor was born in Virginia, April 18, 1811. His early fondness for race horses led him to adopt the profession of trainer. He left Virginia at an early age and cast his fortunes with the late gifted Col. Adam L. Bingaman, of Natchez, Miss., whose confidence and esteem he always enjoyed. Among the good ones he trained and ran successfully were Angora, by imp. Leviathan, Fanny Wright, by Bertrand, Naked Truth, Capt. McHeath, Tishimingo, John R. Grymes, and Sarah Bladen, he trained her when she beat Luda and others in 1841 four-mile heats in 7:45, 7:40, and when Jim Bell beat her in 1842 in 7:37, 7:40. He trained many horses for the lucky Kentuckian, Joseph G. Boswell, including Headlong (El Furioso) and Ruffin, by imp. Hedgeford, with the latter he won the Produce Stake at Lexington, Ky., 1843, 72 subs at $500 each, with the gold cup, value $500, added, two-mile heats in 3:49, 3:45½, 3:42½; Calanthe won the first heat. He subsequently won three-mile heats with him in 5:40½, 5:36. He owned and ran successfully La Bacchante, Wade Hampton, by Boston, etc. He trained the famous Brown Kitty, by Birmingham, and Sally Ward, by John R. Grymes. He also trained for Ig. Szymaski, the noted Doubloon, Error, Reube, by Trustee, Arraline, Attala. After the phenomenal Lexington became the property of Rich. Ten Broeck, he was placed in J. B. Pryor's hands. With him he beat Sallie Waters, the match, three-mile-heats in 1853, ran over the Metaric Course, N. O., and the following spring Lexington in his hands won the great State Post Stake at New Orleans, four-mile heats, defeating Lecompte, Highlander, Arrow, in 8:08½, 8:04., the track deep in mud.

One week after Lecompte beat Lexington and Reube four-mile heats in 7:26, 7:38½. This race led to the great time-match for $20,000. Lexington to beat the best time on record, 7:26. This he won on April 2, 1855, running four miles in 7:19¾. Seven days after Lexington defeated Lecompte for the Jockey Club purse, $1,000, four-mile-heats, with an inside stake of $2,500 each. Lexington won the first heat in 7:23¾, and Lecompte was withdrawn. He also trained Arrow and Pryor for Mr. Ten Broeck; and when Mr. T. decided to go to England, he secured Mr. Pryor's services as trainer for Pryor, Starke, Lecompte, Prioress, Satellite, Optimist, &c. With Starke he won the Goodwood Stakes, Brighton Stakes, Warwick cup and other races; with Prioress he won the Cæsarewitch Stakes, the great Yorkshire handicap, the Queen's cup at Newmarket and Epsom, and beat Toxopholite in a match; with Umpire he won the Nursery Stakes at Goodwood, Cleveland and Third Zetland Biennial Stakes at Stockton. He won a large number of races with Optimist, including the Ascot Stake, Royal Stand plate, Stanford cup, and Queen's plate in 1861. The following year he won the Trial plate at Newmarket, Queen's Plate and other races. Upon the revival of racing in America, he became the trainer of the Nursery stables of the late A. Belmont. He won the Hopeful and the Thespian Stakes with Beatrice, July Stakes with King Amadeus, the Weatherby Stakes with Count D'Orsay, the match against time with Gray Planet, the Saratoga Stakes with Steel Eyes, the Sequel and Kenner Stakes with The Ill-Used, and many other races. Mr. Pryor was an honorable, just, and upright man, and enjoyed the confidence and respect of all who knew him. His latest successes were with the horses of the late Francis Morris. Mr. Pryor lost his competency in his advancing years by the failure of the late James A. Grinstead, and hence needed many comforts in his old age.—Turf, Field and Farm.

While the above is a very concise statement of Mr. Pryor's work in the direction of training race horses, an incident in Mr. P.'s career related to us by a gentleman who sojourned in Australia for a long time, is well worth relating. It came to our informant from a very good source, and we take its correctness for granted.

By the marked success of Mr. Richard Ten Broeck's horses, trained by Mr. Pryor in England, the latter gentleman of course came in for no little attention from the nobility of the "tight little isle." and his opinion carried not a little weight with most racing men. Among Pryor's admirers was the rather eccentric old Lord Glasgow, a famous patron of the turf.

Lord Glasgow was the possessor of a splendid breeding establishment, and was a close observer of the characteristics and defects of most of his thoroughbreds. It was not an unusual thing for this nobleman to single out stallions whose temper or conformation he did not fancy and have them destroyed. Anywhere from ten to fifteen offending studs were annually shot on the order of his lordship, who declared that he "would not have their imperfections transmitted to future generations, by G—!"

A few years after Mr. Ten Broeck's Prioress had beaten Lord Glasgow's Toxopholite, and the latter had been retired to the stud, Pryor, who was no longer in Mr. Ten Broeck's employ, visited Lord Glasgow's stud. His lordship had taken a great dislike to a certain lusty colt by Toxopholite, and when Pryor appeared on the scene, informed him that he was about to kill this colt, who was called Musket.

"But, your lordship, he is the truest-made colt I have ever seen," said Pryor, "and it seems a great pity to destroy such a promising youngster. Hadn't you better reconsider the matter?"

"I will take another look at the fellow." said Glasgow.

Pryor's pleadings in Musket's behalf prevailed, for be it understood that the irascible nobleman had a high regard for the great trainer, and his opinion carried big weight. While the colt was saved from the executioner's ready revolver, Glasgow still had a lingering dislike for Musket, and so, when an Australian horseman appeared and offered a fair sum for the stallion, there was no trouble about securing him.

The horse was finally landed in New Zealand, and was the foundation of the famous Sylvia Park Stud. Mr. Thomas Morrin, owner of Strathmore, winner of the last Sydney Derby, was the leading spirit in this enterprise, and several other stallions of greater note at that time than Musket were purchased. Major Walmsley was appointed superintendent, and the establishment became famous. John Day (brother of William Day), was head trainer. The rest is known. Musket proved himself to be the greatest sire of race horses the colonies have ever possessed. Carbine, Martini-Henry, Nordenfelt, Maxim and other wonderful ones sprang from the loins of Musket, the horse saved by the timely interposition of J. B. Pryor.

Maxim is even now on his way to Rancho del Paso, we understand, and his arrival will be a welcome one to lovers of a grand thoroughbred. That he is one is vouched for by a number of gentlemen who have seen him race in Australia. Mr. Haggin paid 4,000 guineas for the horse, who is pronounced Musket's handsomest son as well as one of the best of that horse's get from a racing standpoint.

Mr. Richard Ten Broeck, who is now residing in our midst, could doubtless relate many interesting things about J. B. Pryor, who served him so faithfully and so well for years and trained for him such a number of kings and queens of the turf, both in this country and in England. Our columns are open to that gentleman for any tribute to the memory of J. B. Pryor he may be pleased to make.

Yolo's Fair Association.

The Board of Directors of the Yolo Agricultural Association met in Secretary Magoffey's office Friday afternoon with President Woodard, Secretary Magoffey, Directors Chas. R. Hoppin, C. F. Thomas, W. B. Gibson, S. T. Mowder, J. H. Doolittle and M. Diggs in attendance.

A financial committee consisting of Directors Diggs and Doolittle was appointed to expert the books and accounts of the Secretary and Treasurer and report the condition of the same at the next meeting of the Directors.

The claims of H. Ervin $41, P. N. Ashley $7, and W. R. Ellis $69.40, were allowed.

Directors C. F. Thomas, S. T. Mowder and W. B. Gibson were appointed a committee to look after the selection of an eligible site for a pavilion. This committee desires all who have property that would make a suitable location for a pavilion to report the same to them.

The advisability of holding a spring meeting about May Day was discussed by the Directors, and was favored by all.

The motion of Director Hoppin to the effect that a committee of three, consisting of Directors Digg, Doolittle and Thomas, to solicit funds for this meeting was carried. This committee will immediately begin the soliciting, and expect to raise $1,000.

Directors Mowder, Hoppin, Gibson and President Woodard were appointed as a committee to arrange a programme for the spring meeting and report the same at the next session of the Directors.

The question of covering the stretch of gravel with loam was discussed and passed until the next meeting.

The Directors adjourned to Jannary 29, 1892.—Woodland Democrat.

Stemler and the Shippee String.

San Francisco, January 8, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Ab. Stemler will be "in it" in 1892. Having a little spare time, I thought I would take a trip to the Capital City and inform myself of what was going on there in the horse business. Rain kept me from fulling my errand, but rain or no rain, I made up my mind to pay a visit to the stable of L. U. Shippee, and there I met that genial good fellow, A. J. Stemler, hard at work—as usual—and pleased I was for calling on him, for just a short time before I got to the stable there arrived an addition to the Shippee string—four very good-looking yearlings, two by Greenback, one by Wildidle another by John A. I will say this much in favor of the Greenback, that a finer or a better-looking yearling I never saw than one of the two mentioned. It is not the size I speak of, but the conformation. You can remember him, as his dam is by Longfellow. I also took a look at that grand horse, Take Notice, and he is looking as well as he ever did and seems to be wintering well. Lodowic looks very slick, and is filling out wonderfully well; my predictions are that he will be hard to beat the coming season. I heartily hope so, for good fortune has not favored Mr. Stemler for some time, and he really does deserve better luck, as he is one of the hardest-working men in the business and one of the most faithful and truthful men to his employer that can be found anywhere, and that is a quality that should never be overlooked by the employer. I saw several other youngsters doing some slow work, and the best average-looking lot at Sacramento are by Prince of Norfolk.

Racing at Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, January 5, 1892.

Four favorites finished first to-day in good time. The attendance did not come up to expectations. J. C. Newton, Captain A. W. Barrett and R. R. Brown were the judges, while Ed Smith handled the starter's flag. Motto led from start to finish in the opening event, and won by about two lengths easily. The second race was very exciting. Down the homestretch it looked as if old John Treat would overhaul Acclaim, but when the little daughter of Three Cheers was shaken up a bit, she went away from the veteran and won by a length. The Jew beat Jim Duffy a nose in the first heat of the third race, and the Hebrew got there by a like distance from Hercules in the second heat in faster time. After getting two lengths the worst of the start, Idaho Chief, the favorite, captured the last race by about a length. Following are the JANUARY 6, 1892.

The weather was anything but pleasant, and a slim crowd visited Agricultural Park this day. Favorites were successful in three of the four events. April Fool ran three-eighths of a mile with 128 pounds up, in the remarkable time of 34½ seconds, while John Treat, with 117 pounds up, won a mile and a half race in the splendid time of 2:36½. Bridal Girl won the opening race easily by about a length. April Fool had all he could do to win from The Jew in the second. The former ran the last quarter in 23¼ seconds. Idaho Chief, conceding eight pounds to Treat, gave the gray veteran of Shiloh blood a hard race up to the front at the finish by about a length. The concluding race was a surprise party, Ben H. beating King George, the favorite, by a head, under the clever riding of little Dick Sullivan.

Among the fillies, which are a fine-looking lot, are many that contain the best blood of the producing strains of Palo Alto, through Electioneer, his sons and daughters, Benton, Nephew and Piedmont.

The Electioneer fillies are out of the following dams: Lizzie Collins, by Stansifer's Woful; Minx, by Don Victor; Flossy, by General Benton; Lilly B., by Homer; Lora, by Piedmont.

Filly by Wildboy: Dam, Victress, by Baird's Hambletonian.

Benefit, the sire of three colts and thirteen fillies in this list, and who is among the number, was a trotter himself, and had he not met with an accident, would have astonished the world as a fast performer. He was a resolute trotter, fast and game, and there is no reason why his produce should not take rank among the best.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Santa Rosa turfmen are still on deck, and have begun the new year under most favorable auspices. One unacquainted with the resources of this part of Sonoma county would be surprised to be told the number of finely-bred horses in Santa Rosa and vicinity. Every year the number increases at an astonishing rate, and indeed, it would not be surprising to learn, in a few years, that Santa Rosa township had become one of the greatest horse centers in the world.

Things have been rather quiet in turf lines the past few weeks. The heavy rains have made it impossible to train on the track, and what jogging has been done has been accomplished on the streets and roads leading to the city. Every day can be seen McGraw, Bonner's men, Lawrence, Rollins, Colross, March, Hood, Fine, Fraser, Sanborn's men, Carter, McGregor's men, Gimmell, or some of the other knights of the sulky out behind the steeds committed to their care.

Silas Skinner is in fine form, but whether or not he will be campaigned this season we cannot state. Myrtle, the great De Turk filly, is in good trim, and if she goes out to race in her four-year-old form, can be expected to bring home a harvest of laurels, for she is unquestionably one of the grandest fillies bred in Santa Rosa. It is said that Mr. De Turk has a sister of Myrtle that promises to be as fast as she is, but the test has not been made yet.

Good reports come from the Rosedale breeding farm, and the youngsters out there are hard to equal. Daly, the head of the Rosedale family, is breeding on in a way that promises to carry the Benton colors to the front, and every one of his colts bear the stamp of his good individuality. It would not surprise us to see Daly go out this season and cut his record of 2:22½ down to a notch well inside "twenty," but we have not learned whether or not he will be worked with that end in view, or whether he will be campaigned at all. He will undoubtedly have a big season in the stud, as he has many admirers in Sonoma county.

Ned Locke, W. B. Sanborn's stallion, will be campaigned this year. Sanborn is a race-horse man from "away back," and if he has anything that has any go in it, it must go or he has no more use for it. He has recently built a very comfortable stable for his runners in the rear of his Fourth street store, and while there one day this week we saw the reliable racer Inkerman, a horse that ran more good heats last year than any other horse on the coast. Besides Inkerman, Sanborn has Harry Peyton, sire of Mamie C.; Mamie C., a two-year-old stallion by Flood, dam by imported Glengarry, and a yearling filly by Ed Corrigan, dam Daphinita, by Jocko; second dam Lizzie Ashe, by Joe Daniels. William Short is training for Mr. Sanborn this year, and he has a reputation for getting his horses under the wire first, if they are built that way.

One hears a good deal of talk now about Illustrious, George Stone's stallion, sired by Happy Medium, and many prophecy that he will shake up the opposition when he enters the racing lists. His colts are showing up well, and there are a good many of them in and about Santa Rosa. Wyman Murphy has one out of a Dawn mare that has attracted much favorable comment, and it has been predicted that he will prove a very speedy animal. McGregor and Hockin have an excellent colt from the same sire, and, altogether, it looks like the Happy Medium stock is going to be well represented in Sonoma county.

Marcus Daly's fine catalogue does injustice to an enthusiastic horseman here, when it represents his horse, You and I, as having been bred by the Vallejo Land Improvement Company. That horseman is G. W. Fraser, who bred the colt and sold it to Mr. Holly, who in turn sold it to Mr. Daly. The colt was sired by Anteeo, and is out of a Whippleton mare, and it has been stated that the Vallejo Land Improvement Company never bred a mare to Anteeo while that horse was here.

W. P. Fine has made some improvements to his stables in the way of building new additions. He has a large number of good horses under his roof, some of them being John H. Lawrence's. Fine's Dawn stallion, Examiner, promises well in his four-year-old form. He trotted close to "thirty" last year, and after the breeding season this year will be campaigned. He is a handsome individual, and has good action. Another horse in his stable that gives indications of showing good racing qualities this year is Smoothy, owned by Mr. Doe, of San Francisco. He was sired by Gen. McClellan Jr., and has gone in 2:31 with but little handling. He will be sent through the Oregon and Montana circuit this fall.

H. Freelsen, of Napa, who for over five years handled the good horse Whippleton, has been spending a few days in Santa Rose lately. He has been negotiating for the purchase of some trotting stock here.

The Santa Rosa Trotting Horse Club proposes to be "in the swim" this season, though we cannot state any of the arrangements yet. PUBLIUS.

SANTA ROSA, January 11, 1892.

The Coming Hicks Sale.

ROUTIERS, Jan. 4, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The sale catalogue of Dr. M. W. Hicks' stock is just at hand, and the excellence of many of the offerings prompt a comment thereon. I am personally acquainted with most of this stock, and am firmly convinced that, as far as broodmares are concerned, no farm in the State has as fine a collection. When mated with some of the splendid stallions with which this State abounds (of the Hambletonian family), I look with confidence for the produce to add further honors to this land of perpetual sunshine. Some of the offerings are particularly rich in promise of speedy produce.

Number 1 of the catalogue is a daughter of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½, out of a mare by Milton Medium, 2:25½. She is in foal to Durfee, a splendid Wilkes stallion, great both in breeding and individuality. Lot 2 I much fancy; she is by Algona, a producing son of Almont, and out of one of the best-bred daughters of the peerless Buccaneer. I confidently look for the ten or twelve living daughters of this latter horse to establish for him a position as impregnable as that now occupied by Pilot Jr. Number 3 is by a good son of Buccaneer's and out of the dam of Bay Rose, 2:20½, by The Moor. Number 5 is almost a full sister to the dam of Frou-Frou, 2:25¼ at one year. Number 6 is a daughter of Buccaneer, and her dam is by a splendid son of Edwin Forrest; next dam Lightfoot, sister to the historical Fernleaf, and just as great, but less fortunate. Lot 8 is quite my fancy; she is a beautiful black filly, rather small, and with all the nervous energy of Goldsmith Maid. If her fortunate purchaser puts her on the turf you will see a race horse, one that will win when the pace is hot and the heats split. She is a complete refutation of the charge that the Flaxtails are "soft." She is inbred to that great broodmare sire, and in the breeding ranks where she properly belongs, she will ennoble her whole family; she is by the champion stallion Shamrock, 2:25 at two years, and her dam, record 2:30½, is by a son of Mambrino Chief, and out of the grandam of Frou-Frou, the champion yearling. How is that for breeding? Lot 9 is three-quarter sister to dam of Frou-Frou, the other quarter Hambletonian instead of Black Hawk. No. 11 is a daughter of Flaxtail, and she has a record of 2:29¾. At what figure will our leading breeders quit bidding on this offering? Number 13 cannot be surpassed for breeding; she is by Egmont, sire of fourteen from 2:15¼ to 2:30, and out of Lightfoot (full sister to Fernleaf, dam of three from 2:11¼ to 2:25), one of the very best daughters of Flaxtail; breed this mare to a well-bred and prepotent son of Electioneer, and the two-minute trotter is a realized dream.

Number 15 is rich in promise of the production of speed; in this particular she is probably the choice offering of the sale; she is a full sister to the dam of Creole, 2:20, by Buccaneer, dam Mary (dam of one with record of 2:26, and of two sons and two daughters which have produced 2:30 trotters) by Flaxtail. Comment here is unnecessary.

No. 18 is a daughter of Sidney, the morning star of the equine firmanent; her dam is by Prompter, next dam thoroughbred. Praise of any son or daughter of Sidney is redundant as they are all fast, pure-gaited and handsome; New York had Hambletonian, Kentucky had George Wilkes, California had Electioneer, but the whole horse world has Sidney, and is rich in his possession; I believe that the filly here offered is one of the handsomest and speediest ones sired by Sidney, and I am personally acquainted with nearly all of his produce. To put right to bread winning on the turf she is probably the best offering of the sale. Number 23 is almost a full sister to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter; she is by Sidney and out of a three-quarter sister to Frou-Frou's dam.

Number 26 is something choice; she is by Sterling, a most promising sire, and out of one of the best-bred daughters of Blue Bull alive. Number 29 is a full sister to Bay Rose, 2:20½, by Sultan, dam by The Moor; upon the principle that you "cannot have too much of a good thing" Mr. Hobart ought to buy this mare and breed her to Stamboul, 2:11; she is a grand individual. Lot 30 is a full sister to Creole, 2:20 at four years. Number 31 is a daughter of Nutwood, 2:18¾, and her dam is by Sam Purdy, 2:20½. Nutwood mares rank as diamonds in equine caskets now, and their popularity is increasing; this mare will bring a great price. Number 33 is a daughter of Prompter, first and second dams producers; this is the kind of mares to breed from if you want to sell the produce. Look out for Number 38, when she is led out for your inspection. You will see a brood-mare of the ideal kind; she is a splendid individual, and richly bred, being by Privateer, and out of the dam of Creole, 2:20. Number 46 is good; she is by a well-bred son of Director, 2:17, dam by Algona; second dam one of the best-bred daughters of Buccaneer.

In fact, choice offerings are as numerous in this catalogue as raisins in a Christmas pudding. Included in it are many splendid daughters of the Doctor's stallions, Prompter and Sterling, and many of the mares are now in foal to these horses, but more of them are carrying foals to the cover of his high-bred Wilkes horse, Durfee. Among the offerings are some splendid colts and geldings which will make ideal gentlemen's drivers and family horses. The catalogue is rich in the realized dreams of a thoughtful breeder. I predict for the Doctor one of the best sales ever held in California.

Respectfully, NOMAD.

As Fausta has a trotting record of 2:40 as well as a pacing record of 2:22¾, she is the fastest double-gaited yearling ever foaled.

Guido is wintering in St. Louis, instead of Chicago, at was recently announced. He won twelve races during the season of 1891.

John Crooks, one of the oldest trotting horse drivers in America of note, died in this city last Sunday. Mr. Crooks had been ailing and in destitute circumstances for many months.

John J. Carter, the well-known Nashville turfman, has been appointed presiding judge at the new East St. Louis Jockey Club meeting.

The famous sprinter Jim Duffy, who recently won a great race at Los Angeles, has been purchased by D. R. Dickey, of San Bernardino.

Of all the unexpected things that ever happened the boom in Flaxtails on the Pacific Coast was the least anticipated.—American Trotter.

In the last issue of the American Sportsman, Cleveland, O., is an interesting sketch of the career of James A. Dustin, the well-known driver now residing here.

As Boniface Bowers, of the Golden Eagle Hotel, Sacramento, is having some difficulty in selecting a name for his fine Silver Bow colt, we would respectfully suggest the title Sylvan Bower.

William Murray, of Danville, has sold to "Whitehat" McCarty a full sister to Pleasanton, 2:25½, for $500. By Richards' Elector, dam Bell Robbins, by Tarrascon, is the way the pedigree reads.

Mr. Lewis, who is wintering his string at Los Angeles, has entered Mikado in the 2:20 pacing class and Contractor in the 2:20 trotting class at Independence for the rich purses offered by that association.

That fast sprinter, Oregon Eclipse, by Joe Hooker, dam Lula Riggs, has been purchased of James Foster, of Oregon, consideration $6,000. The buyer was M. P. Leihy, a well-known Chicago horseman.

Mrs. A. C. Goodrich, of Jordan Valley, Oregon, has just sold to J. C. Summers, of Union, Oregon, a colt by Almont Medium, dam by Cassius M. Clay 22, also an inbred Alcona mare. Both animals have been sent to this State.

W. E. Campbell, of Kiowa, Kansas, owner of Campbell's Electioneer, 2:17¾, has booked a mare by that speedy horse to Gen. Wellington 12961, full brother to Sunol, 2:08¼. Marriage ought not to be a failure in that family.

Mr. D. M. Hanson's fine Hambletonian mare lost a pair of twin colts a few days since in Lake county, Cal. This is quite a serious loss to Mr. Hanson, as they were sired by the celebrated Friar Tuck, of the Langtry ranch.

In publishing the list of fourth payments in the Breeder and Sportsman Futurity Stakes in our last issue, the brown colt Cibolo by Charles Derby, dam Addie Ash, the property of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm, was omitted.

James Maguire, the well-known conditioner of horses, has taken charge of the string owned by E. S. Paddock, of Forestville, Sonoma county, Cal. Mr. Maguire is a veteran in the business of handling horses, and bears an excellent reputation.

Capt. Evans Gordon, an English soldier, recently rode, by means of relays of ponies, 250 miles in forty-one hours, including seven and a half hours for rest and food. The route lay over the worst trail across the Cashmere Mountains in Northern India.

The Nevada State Journal got out an excellent New Year's number of fourteen pages. Among other well-written articles is the one describing the home of El Rio Rey, Joe Hooker and other famous thoroughbreds owned by Theodore Winters, the veteran turfman.

Among the Tacoma horses that have made creditable records are Joe Kinney, 2:26, owned by Mr. Reeves; Mink, 2:21, the property of Byron Barlow; Lady Fallis, owned by Freeman & Bog; General (pacer) and Mollie K., 2:29¼, being trained by Mr. Beach.

The track and grounds formerly belonging to the Tacoma Speed and Exhibition Association are now owned by ex-Mayor Stuart Rice, of Tacoma. It is the intention to have the track in condition early in the spring, so as to keep all horses at home to work.

On January 7th a syndicate of Ottumwa, Ia., horsemen purchased the famous trotter May King, 2:23½, by Electioneer, dam May Queen, by Alexander's Norman 25. The horse was bred by Senator Stanford on the Palo Alto farm, and the Ottumwa men paid $12,000 for the animal.

"Whitehat" McCarty has a number of fast colts, as everyone knows, but the fastest one he has and the one he swears by is by Balkan, 2:15. He says that when he gets his estate in Ireland settled up he will make some of the trotters on this coast get out of the way of this youngster.

Dan J. McCarty has purchased the seventeen thoroughbreds belonging to the Hearst estate on which he had an option. There were nine two-year-olds and the three-year-old colt Bernardo, by imp. Cheviot, five two-year-olds by Jim Brown and two of the same age by imp. Trade Wind.

"If there ever was an institution," says a prominent writer, "that could be safely banked upon for never intermitting its progress, it is the light harness horse of America. The taste for him can never die out, because he is bound to always afford peerless amusement whether on road or track."

We understand that L. A. Richards, of Grayson, Stanislaus County, has refused an offer of $30,000 for Elector 2,170, Electioneer's greatest producing son. A Mr. Burnett, of Kentucky, was the gentleman from whom the offer came, and Mr. Richards' reply was: "I will not sell for less than $50,000."

Lewis Simmons and James Nolan have been engaged to train strings of horses at Palo Alto Stock Farm. Both are well known. Simmons trained for Martin Carter, of Nutwood Stock Farm, last season, and did well with the horses. Nolan handled a lot of horses at Bay District track in 1891.

Anteeo 7868, son of Electioneer 125, is the first son of that great horse to sire a producing son, Anteeo Jr., sire of Hailstorm, 2:30 at three years of age, and a producing daughter, Ramona, the dam of W. Wood, 2:28¼ at three years of age. Anteeo is also the sire of the fastest grandson, James Madison, 2:17¾.

J. M. Reuck, editor of the Kern Californian, the prime mover in work of forming a racing association at Bakersfield, informs us that the new track to be built at that lively city will be something entirely new and original in design, with features that will attract the attention of the whole racing world.

A. W. Fink, of this city, has two fine colts by Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, out of Jennie McCartny, 2:34 (trial 2:22), by Patchen Vernon, second dam Ella Roy (dam of Allen Roy, 2:17½). Mr. Fink puts in all his spare time in handling them, and we would not be astonished to see both the youngsters on the circuit this fall.

Yo El Rey (yearling brother to Yo Tambien), thought to be a coming world-beater, is thriving in his Nevada home. Mr. Winters says certain portions of the Silver State are preferable to California for raising a hardy race of horses, and certainly Yo El Rey, for whom he would not now take $20,000, bears out his opinion.

Frank D. Walker, of Indianapolis, has been engaged as starter for the St. Louis Jockey Club meetings (April 30th to June 24th). Walker proved phenomenally efficient as starter throughout the Southern-Western trotting circuit last fall, and has had considerable experience starting runners. The St. Louis club is congratulating itself upon securing him.

M. H. McManus will take charge of the horses at Seales' ranch (the home of Elmo, 2:27). Among them is a gelding, full brother to Wanda, 2:17½; a sister to Alfred S., 2:16¼; a sister to Wanda, 2:17½; a Woodnut colt and a number of others that will be heard from before the fall season is over. It is presumed this able driver will bring this string to San Jose.

It is reported by the Evening Post of this city that Secretary Steiner had discovered the falsity of Flaxtail's pedigree as heretofore published. The credit belongs entirely to two gentlemen of this city, who made the discovery, straightened the pedigree, and confronted Dr. Hicks with the evidence. We believe in giving credit wherever it is due, be it to individuals or to sire.

J. A. McDonald, of San Rafael, found dead in a stall the other morning a very fine two-year-old filly whom he believes to have been poisoned. She had died during the night, and was terribly swollen. This filly, for whom $1,000 had just been refused, was by Figaro (son of Whipple's Hambletonian and Emblem, by Tattler), dam Veronica, by Alcona; second dam, Fontana (dam of Silas Skinner, 2:17).

The Messrs. Goodwin Bros. request us to notify all jockeys throughout the country to forward to them their lowest riding weight and to whom engaged for 1891, in order that such information may appear in their forthcoming "Annual" Official Turf Guide. As this would be of benefit both to themselves and the public, a prompt reply should be forwarded to the above firm at 241 Broadway, New York.

The Yolo Weekly Mail's New Year's edition was simply superb. The cuts of leading citizens and places of business were worthy of publication in the best magazines, while there were several admirable cuts and sketches of horses. Altogether the publishers of this paper have just cause to be proud of their efforts. The article written by our old friend, Hoppin, on horse breeding, was read with great pleasure.

A word as to licensing drivers. It is not necessary, as the rules provide for their protection and good behavior. It might suit a few of the grand fellows who wield whips, but not the many young or poor fellows who are striving to rise and struggling to get to the front and make a reputation. There is such a thing as legislating too much, and when it looks like for the good of a few and detriment of many it is going too far.

The French law subjects every stallion used for breeding purposes to a close examination as to soundness and ability, and issues a certificate good for one year, with the proviso that, during that time, the stallion will not have the liberty to be entered 9n any track. Such stallions as seem worthy are endowed with a pension of from $100 to $250 per year, but the owner is not allowed to charge over $20 for the service of the animal.

Anteeo is the youngest horse in the world to have a producing son and daughter. They are respectively Anteeo Jr. sire of Hailstorm, 2:30, and Ramona, dam of W. W. Wood, 2:28¼. Anteeo was but twelve years of age when this came about.

Over at San Rafael, J. A. McDonald has what is considered one of the fastest yearlings ever seen in a full sister to Gus Wilkes, 2:22 (by Mambrino Wilkes, dam Fancy, by Bonner). She has repeatedly shown quarters in 40 seconds without being pushed.

There is considerable talk regarding the intentions of Messrs. George Hankins, B. V. Johnson and Mike McDonald. It is claimed that they will proceed to England and purchase some great broodmares there to mate with Little Minch, and that they are going in for breeding on a large scale. Besides this it is announced that this trio of rich Chicago sports have an option on Ormonde at $200,000, and that they will purchase him.

Millard Saunders, the well-known driver of the Valensin Stock Farm, was presented by Mr. Valensin on his return home from Europe with a magnificent gold watch. Mr. Saunders' initials are handsomely engraved on the back, together with the names of the world-beaters and the records of horses belonging to the Valensin string. Mr. Saunders is deserving of such a beautiful present, as he has shown pluck and energy in bringing to the attention of the whole world such remarkable performers as were shown during the past season.

Last Wednesday Gen. Benton Jr., a magnificent individual belonging to J. A. McDonald, of San Rafael, was sent along with the Palo Alto consignment to be sold in New York by P. C. Kellogg & Co. General Benton is a bay horse, eight years old, 15 hands 3 inches in height, weighing 1175 pounds, by General Benton, dam Inez, by Nordale; second dam Blue Dale (the famous race mare), by Owen Dale; third dam Lizzie, by Williamson's Belmont; fourth dam Thrift mare, thoroughbred. He ought to bring a good price from his breeding and fine individuality.

It will be gratifying to all lovers of a good, game horse to learn that the quarter crack which disabled that game horse Potomac has grown out, so that he will be back on the turf next season as good as ever, in the opinion of his owner and trainer. Potomac was as honest and courageous a horse as we had on the turf of his age last season, and every one will be glad to see him back again next season and fighting with the horses that are older than he as well as with those of his own age, of whom there will be a good lot.

Veronica is a most remarkable mare. This half-sister to Silas Skinner, 2:17, had a foal when three years of age, and has never missed since, being now seven years of age. Notwithstanding this, she can go out now and trot a mile any day in 2:30 or better. Tom Murphy is handling her at Petaluma, and we are informed that Veronica is more than likely to go into the 2:20 list this season. Almonition, by Alcona, dam Pansy, by Cassius M. Clay 22; second dam by Richelieu, son of Mambrino Chief 11, went a trial mile in 2:22 recently, driven by Tom Murphy at Petaluma, and has been sent to J. A. McDonald, his owner, at San Rafael.

That excellent authority, the Breeder and Sportsman, contains an unusual array of horse talk this week, and the issue has a handsome lithograph cover, beside numerous illustrations of illustrious sires. Many valuable suggestions to owners of all classes of horses are given, and, for the benefit of Fresno county owners of a horse, the Expositor republishes several extracts from appropriate articles as follows.—Fresno Expositor. Nothing in the world, friend, is so pleasing as the thought that one is appreciated, and we trust that, in the words of John L. Sullivan, "we will merit your applause in the future as we have in the past." Yours truly, B. and S.

Theodore Winters has eleven racers in training now in their quarters at the Reno race track, under the care of J. J. Grant, his manager, comprising Chauncey Haskell, a five-year-old Norfolk, and ten two and three-year-old colts, four by a celebrated Eastern horse, and six Hookers, four not yet named, and the others called Tahoe, Bueno, Pyramid, Advance, Gould & Curry and Rose Hickman, the last named being the only filly in the crowd. Some of these show remarkable speed in their daily work, and the Eastern circuit next year will enable the colors of the Western stable, the already famous pink cap, orange jacket and green sash, to show under the wire first, as usual.

Afred Seale, nephew of Henry Seale, of San Francisquita, Stock Farm, has taken quite an interest in the development of the string of trotters at this once famous breeding farm. He is overstocked with stallions at present, he says, and offers for sale the handsome stallion Young Elmo (full brother to Alfred S., 2:16½), by Elmo 891, out of Nora Marshall, by Union son of Morrill 118. He is a handsome bay in color, stands about sixteen hands, and weighs fully 1,175 pounds. He has splendid trotting action, is kind and gentle, and as sons of Elmo are getting very scarce, this horse will prove of great value on any stock farm. Mr. Seale has placed a low figure on him.

Preparations are under way in the Department of Agriculture to publish an exhaustive and scientific work of great value to the horse industry of the United States, to be entitled "The American Trotting Horse." The manuscript for the work is to be prepared by the most competent scientific and practical writers on this subject in the country, and the book will be profusely illustrated with cuts and engravings of the great trotters. Such men as Senator Stanford have been interested in it, and he will contribute material and pictures of noted trotters owned by him. The work will be printed at the expense of the Government, and will not be ready for at least a year.

James Rowe will succeed James F. Caldwell as starter at the principal far Eastern tracks. Rowe was a crack jockey in the early seventies, when he rode for Colonel McDaniel. Getting too heavy to ride on the flat, he took to cross-country horse-piloting, then to training, at which he was a great success. With Rowe as trainer for the Dwyers and Jimmy McLaughlin riding, it was a hard combination to beat. Later Rowe trained for August Belmont, and was wonderfully successful. Helping out in an emergency one day at Clifton, it was discovered that he made an excellent starter, and since that time his services have been in demand all over the country in that capacity.

Starter James F. Caldwell has made a bad move, it is considered, in taking the $25,000 per year offered by the Guttenburg "skate" people, for he will be barred from starting at the big tracks. The New Jersey Legislature is likely to stop racing at any time, and then Caldwell will be out in the cold. Besides this, he cannot king it over the boys at the "Gut," for there will not be any too many jockeys in the market. Consequently, they can sauce the old man to their heart's content.

An ideal horse is one with a good sound constitution,a good stomach, a brave heart, good limbs and a pretty level head, and of course a right way of going. The more brain he has, the more endurance he is likely to have. It enables him more readily to conform to circumstances and understand what is wanted of him, and to take advantage of opportunities and make the most of everything. By educating the brain it increases in size, fineness or quality. If he is treated badly he is more or less useless.

The newspapers are speaking of the fast California team, Sunol, 2:08¼, and Alfred S., 2:16¼. The team cannot look much alike, neither do they trot alike. The mare has a gait peculiar to herself. While Alfred S. is moving he is a paragon of perfection. The only fault he has is that he gets at the height of his speed too rapidly. The only one that we know that has the same peculiarity, and that would make a "darling" mate for him is Wanda, 2:17½, by Eros, 2:29½. If Frank H. Burke will sell her, Robert Bonner should at once have this mare sent on, and after he drives her with Alfred S. once through Central Park he would not change places with the President.

The initial number of the Breeder and Turfman, published at Nashville, is at hand. It is a typographically neat paper of forty pages, with a very tasty cover, and within that cover are interesting short stories of the turf, news from all the horse centers and well-written editorials. If this is a fair sample of what is to follow, that the paper will "take" is certain. We bespeak for the fine, large Tennessee infant all the patronage and support that the good people of the land of fast pacers and thoroughbreds, of corn and mules should bestow on a journal founded with the idea of giving news and instruction looking to the betterment of the noblest race of animals on earth—the horse.

The natural horseman is born with the love for horses, says Kell's Iowa Turf. His soul finds rest from weariness in the company of his loved and favorite companion. In the large, square box stall, petting his noble animal, is where his tired and overworked brain recuperates, and where his leisure hours are passed. The speculative horseman fills the hay manger and the feed box as a stepping stone to fill his purse. His shrine is the plentiful dollars and his love the cold, hard touch of the silver dollar. It illuminates his path and brightens his hopes more than pure love for the animal. The horse distinguishes the difference and parts company reluctantly in one case—without concern in the other.

D. J. McCarty last Tuesday sold to J. E. McDonald, of Oakland, the bay six-year-old stallion Roseland, by Bay Rose, 2:20½, dam by Algona; second dam Poll, by Alexander; third dam by Bertrand. Roseland is an unusually handsome horse, has shown a world of speed, and by many is considered the best son of Bay Rose, who was a mighty good race horse himself. Three thousand dollars was the price paid, and yesterday Roseland was shipped to San Jose de Guatemala on the steamer City of New York. Mr. McDonald also purchased of McCarty the five-year-old bay gelding Dolphin, by Nephew, dam by Peerless, second dam by Hamilton Chief, consideration $750. Dolphin goes to Guatemala too.

W. C. Jones, the enterprising head of the Columbia (Tenn.) Driving Park Association, writes us: "Have just written Mr. Bonner and J. Malcolm Forbes offering a purse of $10,000 for a race between Sunol and Nancy Hanks at my October,'92, meeting, and all the money to go to the winner, and they to give it to any charitable institution they wish. Also said to them, taking into consideration the season of the year and the shape and condition of my track (as it will be then), think I may be able to secure Mr. Bonner's $5,000 offered for the 2:05 trotter. I feel confident that if the two-minute mark is reached this year at any place I will have it, as in my opinion we will have a much faster track than in 1891."

We are not given to much boasting regarding the many delicate veterinary operations performed by our corps of surgeons in this State, but while down at Harry Agnew's the other day we were asked to point out on which leg one of his mares had just been fired, and, with three other horsemen, were compelled to acknowledge that it was impossible. On being told that Dr. Creely, of this city, performed the operation, we unhesitatingly said that if such perfect work was performed our readers should know of it. That the hundreds of horses which are seared up by the firing iron could have been spared if such an artist were called upon was plain to be seen. In no other branch of veterinary science during the past five years has such gratifying results been attained as in the use of the firing iron.

Last Wednesday the Oakwood Park Stock Farm sold to Dr. C. S. Sargent, of Stockton. the handsome dark brown yearling colt Ameer 17,134, by Prince Red 9,940, he by the mighty Red Wilkes, dam by Mambrino Patchen, out of Ada F., by Antevolo, 2:19½; second dam Calypso, by Steinway, 2:25¾; third dam, Alla (dam of Spartan, 2:24, and Cresco, the sire of Crescent, 2:23¼), by Almont 33; fourth dam (the dam of Henderson, 2:27), by Brignoli 77, sire of the dam of King Wilkes, 2:22; fifth dam by Cripple, a son of Medoc, he by American Eclipse; sixth dam by American Eclipse. This colt is an elegantly;formed youngster and beautifully gaited. We congratulate the genial Doctor on his purchase, for we believe that few better yearlings are in this State than this one.

The following, received from Secretary E. E. Chrisman, of the Columbia (Tenn.) Driving Park Association, speaks for itself: "I would impress upon you the importance of preparing your entries for our great stakes, entries to which close on February 1, at which time all horses must be named. I enclose entry blanks, and trust to have you enter liberally with us. Such a magnificent programme was never arranged before, and there can be no doubt but what we will have the greatest meeting of 1892. Our programme of rich stakes suggests itself to you as the most liberal of all others, and as you can race here at a time when other meetings are over, you will readily see the manifold advantages offered. Entrance to our stakes is almost free, and our system of consolation stakes can but make all breeders happy. We ask you to study our programme thoroughly, and hope to find you among our list of patrons."

Clay & Woodford, of the Runnymede Stud, who bred Miss Woodford, Barnes and other famous thoroughbreds, have at last decided to come back on the turf, and will hoist their old colors with a string of about a dozen strong, which will be trained by Brown Dick, with whom they have just closed an engagement covering the season of 1892. Dick will handle Milo, Fillide and another owned by himself, in conjunction with Clay & Woodford's string, while the remaining horses owned by this trainer will be handled by Charlie Anderson, who trained for several seasons a small stable of horses owned by the noted jockey, Isaac Murphy. Brown Dick's training quarters this spring will be at Louisville, he shipping there in a few days.

There is a project on foot by the Californian at Bakersfield, Cal., to establish an Agricultural District Association. It will be capitalized for $50,000 (paid up), of 2,000 shares of the par value of $25 each. The track is to be constructed on the latest and most approved lines, upon which the best results can be attained. The association will erect a number of first-class stalls, properly arranged for both good ventilation and plenty of sunshine. The buildings to be constructed will comprise a fine club house, grand stand, etc. The stock is to be distributed among the residents of Kern county generally, which is an excellent feature, as it will stimulate a general interest in the welfare of the institution, and the capital stock being paid up, will make it one of the strongest organizations on the coast.

W. H. Raymond, of Belmont Park, Andy McDowell, of Riverside, J. B. Losee, Marcus Daly, Senator Thornton, Colonel Ester, of Anaconda, and W. C. Murphy, of Missoula, and other gentlemen at the Montana Saturday night informally talked over the programme and prospects of next season's race meeting in Montana, says the Butte Inter-Mountain. It was the sentiment of all that the Montana circuit meeting this year should be made to excel those of any previous year. The programme for the circuit will be arranged some time this month. A meeting for that purpose will probably be held in Helena or Great Falls within ten days. During the evening the conversation regarding several noted horses became animated. Kinney bet McDowell $100 that Lady Wilton will beat Florida the first time the two horses meet. Mr. Daly bet McDowell $250 on the same proposition. McDowell bet Mr. Daly that Prodigal will beat Lord Byron in three straight heats. The forfeits have been placed in the hands of Colonel Estes. There is assurance that this year will see several of the picked horses at the Riverside stable in the Montana circuit.

A gentleman from Petaluma dropped in the other day to tell about the horse industry in and around that lively city. He said the black Algona colt in Tom Murphy's string was all that had been said of him, "a wonderfully fast colt." There are a number of youngsters by Eclectic (full brother to Arion, 2:10¾) that are making their owners feel very proud of them, for they show they inherit the wonderful trotting instincts of their relations. No one ever saw them amble or pace, but instead they just put their noses out straight and get their tails up, like a plume on a drum major's chapeau, and move away like old campaigners. Tom Keating has one at Reno, he said, that is "as fast as a bullet," and as she is out of the grandam of Sabina, she is worth caring for. Eclectic will be heard of as a sire before three years are over, and owners of well-bred mares should not let an opportunity pass of breeding to him this year. J. P. Rodehaver's Alcona Jr. colts are all doing very well. They are large-boned, strong-gaited and natural trotter. Frazier's Secretary (by Director, 2:17) has a number of representative trotters that will add to their sire's fame this year. Oaknut's progeny are very lusty and strong-looking. The young sons of Dawn in Sonoma county will manage to keep the equine world well lit up with good performances next year.

J. H. Temple, of Denver, superintendent of the Overland Jockey Club grounds, arrived in this city on Tuesday, and called upon us. This genial gentleman reports the affairs of the club in a flourishing condition, and as he has come to the coast as a representative of this famous and most liberal club, we bespeak for him a cordial welcome. The Overland Club has declared itself in favor of paid judges and against betting on the results of heats, and, in fact, is up with the times in everything. Mr. Temple tells us that the facilities for reaching the Denver track could not be better, four railroads passing within thirty yards of the gate. The track can be soaked with rain at ten o'clock in the morning, and then when the sun comes out the track will be in first-class shape for racing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The people of Denver are proud of the Overland Jockey Club, as they should be, and knowing that everything is "on the level," turn out in force to see the racing. The spring meeting at Denver begins Saturday, May 28th, and ends Saturday, June 11th, $30,000 in purses and stakes being given by the club for the thirteen days' racing. The principal stakes are the Colorado Derby, The Pacific Coast Stakes, The Montana Stakes, The Knights Templar Stakes, the Equitable Building Stakes and the Overland Handicap, and owners of thoroughbreds should enter liberally prior to February 15th, when entries close.

Ralston McCue, son of the statesman, Hon. James S. McCue, of Corte Madera, has been presented by Senator Stanford with the beautiful Palo Alto stallion Benton Frolic. This horse, by an accident which lamed him some time ago, has never had an equal chance with his fellows of the famous stables to take a front place on the record, though while he was himself he gave promise of being the peer of the best. He is by Gen. Benton, and out of the great thoroughbred mare Frolic. Mr. McCue is confident that he can overcome the horse's accidental disability and enable him to take his place among the world's greatest flyers. With characteristic generosity Senator Stanford requests young McCue to stand the horse at a nominal price, for the benefit of horse-lovers in this county, which he will do. Verily, it does seem to us that this rich man has a large benevolence. We are very often made by his acts to feel glad that he is rich. He is as broad as the Union. Although one of the richest men in the country, he has bestowed much careful thought upon the poor, and we recall that on the floor of the United States Senate he outlined the most practical plan of co-operation for the laboring classes that has ever been proposed anywhere. Not many rich men give much attention to such themes. One of his schemes for benefitting this State is to sell one or two of Electioneer's descendants in each county, regardless of price, simply to improve the quality of our stock, and very likely in many cases, as in the one given above, he will present the animals to friends or acquaintances. There was but one Peabody; there will be but one Stanford.—Marin Journal,

When examining a horse with a view to purchasing, always have him led down a steep or stony descent at the end of a halter and with no whip near him. Many horses when brought out of the stable are excited by the presence of strangers, and become still more so at sight of a whip. A slight lameness may therefore be momentarily overlooked by the horse himself, just as a man, under strong excitement, will sometimes forget a sore foot. Leading the horse down a slope will show any defect in his forequarters, and running him back will develop any weakness that may exist in his hind legs. Horse sharpers know these facts as well as anybody, so, if the horse is in the least affected, they will generally avoid a hill when showing off a horse to a probable purchaser.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Philadelphia is to have a turf club. It will not be exclusively a horsemen's club, but it will be a first-class social organization. The club is to be located at 44 and 46 South Broad street, in the handsome building formerly occupied by the American Club. The location is central and convenient. The building contains sixteen rooms, and all of them will be handsomely fitted and furnished as parlors, reception rooms, reading rooms, billiard rooms and library. Twenty-five gentlemen have been made life members of the club, and for this honor and privilege each has already paid $250. This amount insures the permanent success of the club. Among some of those who have filed applications for membership are J. C. Sibley, of Franklin, Pa.; H. S. Henry, William M. Singerly, Frank Bower, John M. Chestnut, Charles S. Cafferty, James Conaway, Horace C. Disston, of Philadelphia, and others. The membership roll now has one hundred and sixty names upon it. Of these one hundred and thirty-five are regular members, the balance being life members.

In a conversation with Matt Storn, the well-known owner of thoroughbreds, the other day, that genial gentleman, who was very well pleased with the looks of his string, said: "Top Gallant has filled out wonderfully, in fact, he is about seventy-five pounds heavier than he was in the fall. I expect him to be a hard one to beat at about a mile and a quarter. Speaking of this colt, he was the best two-year-old colt I ever owned when he was 'on edge,' and, as far as that goes, one of the best I ever laid eyes on. I am not boasting when I say this, for the youngster ran three-quarters over the Butte track in his work in 1:13 with 125 pounds up, and did his mile with the same weight on another occasion in 1:42. I do not think I overestimate his powers when I say he could have taken up 118 pounds and gone three-quarters of a mile in 1:12. Centella has recovered from her severe accident, and will race again. I think she will be good at the longer distances. She was also a good two-year-old. Mystery is coming around all right, I am happy to say. In addition to those mentioned, I have two of as good-looking bay two-year-olds as any man ever saw. They are both by imp. Friar Tuck, son of The Hermit, England's greatest sire. The colt I call Hermitage. He is out of Mystery's dam, Mistake, and she never threw anything but racehorses. The filly is named Phœbe Ann, and she is from Arethusa, by Joe Hooker. I was the first one to race a Mariner in this country, and I guess it will be my lot to race the Friar Tucks ahead of any one. If good looks go for anything, they should prove to be racehorses." Mr. Storn's string is wintering at J. B. Chase's place in Sonoma.

When John Splan talks he generally has something to say worth listening to. The following are opinions of his lately expressed: "I have been sitting with the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association for three days listening to the pleas of owners and drivers of suspended horses who came to demand justice and protection, and I want to say to you that in that time I became so thoroughly sick at heart and disgusted that I almost felt that it was a disgrace to drive a race—especially would it be if a fellow had to be classed with that sort of men. Why, those fellows came there with brazen demands for justice, and before the Board, under oath, testified to having broken every rule of the association. There was a great deal of talk among them of forming a 'drivers' association' for mutual protection, and they approached and solicited me to assist them in joining such an institution. I told them flatly that they'd better get together and form a combination to protect themselves from expulsion, and even from State prisons, for many of them had convicted themselves of offenses, which, if they get justice (which they are demanding), would land them behind the bars. Owners are largely responsible for this. They think that it doesn't require much brains to care for and drive a horse. I had in mind just now a gentleman whom you all know, but whose name I will not mention, who paid $40,000 a few years ago for two horses, one of them the best horse the morning dew of the summer's sun ever glistened upon, and yet that man refused to pay $1,500 salary to his trainer, saying that that was all he paid his bookkeeper. In heaven's name, and has it come to the point that a first-class, educated driver must be placed in the salary scale with a fifth grade bookkeeper and be outweighed?"

The stallion Del Sur, a son of The Moor, that made a record of 2:24 in this State and was sent East about three years ago, is now owned in Massachusetts, and is described as an unusually pleasant road horse, being a free driver, and, withal, so kind in disposition that a lady can with perfect safety drive him. It is not ordinarily the case that stallions are pleasant road drivers, as in a majority of instances they are apt to be sluggish in harness, unless furnished the excitement and incentive of a race, which they seem to know about as well as anybody. Even on the track a good many entire horses are anything but free drivers, and as a rule they are not anything like as hot-headed and ambitious as mares and geldings, although among the general public the impression is general that a stallion has more fire and spirit in harness than any other sort of horse, says a writer in Clark's Horse Review. It has been the fashion among a certain coterie of writers who have for years been engaged in the hopeless task of decrying the Hambletonian blood to allude to members of that family of horses as "lunk-headed," this term being put forth as indicative not only of sluggishness but also of stupidity. It is true that as a family the Hambletonians are remarkably free from the caper-cutting characteristics which so easily degenerate into viciousness, especially in stallions, but in respect of intelligence their equal is seldom seen. It is this quality of level-headedness, by the way, that enables the Hambletonians to preserve all their vital powers to a longer average age than any other family of light-harness horses thus far produced, which means that they are better capable of transmitting desirable qualities than would be the case were they of the hysterical cast of equine character so prominent in certain families of horses, as well as particular nationalities of men.

THE GUN.

The Sunlight on the Hills.

By Charles Wesley Kyle.

The mountains are aflame with light
The sunlight rests upon the hills;
Their snowy crowns a brilliant sight,
From which come flashing crystal rills.
The day wears on toward its close,
Night's early gloom the valley fills;
While silence tends to sweet repose,
The sunlight fades from off the hills.

Up, up the rough and rocky steep
Above the gloom enshrouded hills
The evening shadows softly creep,
Stealing the lances from the rills,
Hushing the voices of the earth—
The grinding of the watermills,
The song of birds, the shouts of mirth
With which the world the daylight fills.

The mountain heights now glow with flame,
(The sun is faded from the hills),
Their beauty rare eludes a name,
And every heart with worship fills.
Befitting thrones for gods they seem—
Omnipotence their grandeur wills;
Their regal robes with splendor gleam

Now up the mountain twilight steals
Night settles on the lower hills;
And to the shepherd boy reveals
The hour to pipe his evening trills.
Adown the winding mountain way
The music every crevice fills,
Proclaiming that the god of day
Has died amid the western hills.

A Week's Outing.

Blu Bel.

"Truly this life is precious to the root,
And good the feel of grass beneath the foot;
To lie in buttercups and clover bloom,
Tenant in common with the bees,
And watch the white clouds drift through gulfs of trees,
Is better than long waiting in the tomb."

So thought I as my fragrant Havana slowly burned to ashes. The day had waned a little. The long bright hours had softened as the evening grew apace, and upon sylvan coverts and dainty groves a tender cloud had fallen. Soft breezes gently swayed the leaves and grasses.

With bare head I penetrated the wood beyond. What a delicious sense of peace and quiet joy there was in the shady depths! No paths—no footmarks here—no signs of another world! All is wild—enchanting—yet strangely silent! Here and there the larger trees rise and deepen the gloom with long dark shadows. The very air is filled with a rich balm that the slow descending twilight renders doubly sweet. No longer is heard the woodcutter's warning call nor the sound of the ringing axe.

Languidly I turn toward the outer world where the last crimson rays of light still linger in the west. One by one they fade; the sun has sunk below the horizon; the vales and hills are wrapped in a solemn hush; all nature is quiescent; slowly the starry firmament begins to scintillate with a million lights—a faint pale moon appears in the east—white-winged clouds float along with lover-like pace, and bring in their train the heralds of advancing night.

Our glowing camp-fire seems a fitting close, of this long, delightful day. Folding my great coat around me, I lie down and watch the fantastic figures thrown athwart the huge old stumps by the ruddy flames that grow fainter and fainter. Indians and tomahawks, grizzlies, mountain lions and wildcats, pass in panoramic view before me, but the rich sweet odor of a green pine pillow over powers my wandering senses and lulls me to sleep at last.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Wake up old fellow! I say, don't you want some breakfast? If you do you'd better scramble."

Rubbing my eyes the better to get rid of sleep and rub in a little of the morning light, I finally assume an upright position, to find the coffee-pot steaming and the boys busy in mapping out the day's program.

"Hello fellows!" is my first indication of returning life. "Guess Morpheus gave me a double dose last night. What's the time?"

"My watch points to 4:30, but my stomach says 7 o'clock. I don't know which is correct" responds Davis.

Spying Bobby doing battle with soap and towel, I join him at the spring to perform my ablutions.

"Ah there Benjamin! How's your pulse?" is the greeting I receive.

"Steady thanks. How's the water?"

"Cold—very cold—but not quite so cold when you get used to it. Have a drop?"

"Think I will, on the outside, but I prefer something warmer as a gastronomic venture."

"Hurry up then, or you'll get left," and with that he coolly spills a handful of water on the back of my neck—does a double shuffle—turns a handspring—and walks off with the towel.

I can forgive the first performance, but the last is the drop that fills my cup of resentment to the full. It leads to an exciting chase over fallen trees, rocks, soft earth, and various things, and results in a soft seat on the hard side of a rough log—for Bobby. I capture the towel however and we are soon sipping the cup of peace at the table.

If there is anything I am fond of it is cold pigeon. I have just helped myself to a bountiful supply and turned toward the biscuit platter in utter ignorance of the interesting by-play about to occur. An amused twinkle in the faces of my friends and a spasmodic shout from the youngest causes me to turn in the direction of Prince.

There he sits, deliberately licking his chops, and making grimaces at the remains of my dainty morsel. He and I certainly agree on the merits of cold pigeon but I seriously object to such an unprincipled manner of acting. Prince is usually a very well-behaved dog. I perceive at a glance it is one of Bobby's doings who has not forgiven me the victory of a few minutes before.

"I call that a mean trick! To rob a fellow in that fashion is despicable and none but he who lacks every element of principle would do it;" whereupon I appropriate a tempting sandwich that lies on his plate and make quite an inroad before he can whistle.

"How could I help it? Prince sat there poking his nose around and asking as best he could for a bite, and if you couldn't take the hint I don't blame him for helping himself in his doglike way."

"Perhaps you couldn't tell me who pointed out that particular joint or sent him around to this side of the table. I certainly couldn't or rather I won't this week old man. Although I have no objection to telling all I know on some occasions I couldn't think of such a thing this time you know."

"There is such a thing as self conviction, and your face looks remarkably guilty," I answer, as Prince walks up with an unconcerned expression on his face as though he didn't know the import of our conversation. A sniff—a wag of the tail, and a rough and tumble scramble ensues, in which there is very little difference between dog and man. Finally Bobby comes up to the light of day a picture of warmth, tousled hair, disarranged apparel, and a great amount of dirt.

Calling the dog off who is wagging that tail as if it were the unceasing pendulum of time, I present him with an extra bite as a token of my entire forgiveness. Thus is peace once more restored to our midst.

"Say, Bob, what can we do to distinguish ourselves? Do you think there is any likelihood of a bear chase in these 'ere parts? I'm positively aching for an adventure," I remark, as I carefully remove every particle of dust from my revolver, and put in a few loads.

"Don't know 'bout the prospect for "bar" pard, but guess there are a few straggling mud hens left. I didn't quite clean 'em all out."

"Nothing short of a mountain lion will satisfy the craving for blood that holds me."

"Oh, if that's all, a couple of coyotes will do to practice on, and while you are looking for "his highness" I'll lay in a canful of those raspberries we saw yesterday, for pie to-night."

"All right, bring on the can and we'll proceed Ta ta, boys, we'll see you later," and I strike off at a swinging gait with Bobby closely bringing up the rear. 'Tis not long before we emerge into the main road and discover that we are not the only folks astir, for the sound of voices is born to us on the still morning air. The hum of the saw mill, and the rumble of wheels give proof of lively industry somewhere in our vicinity.

"What luck! Just look, Fletcher, aren't these scrumptious? Turn to and we'll have a bucketful before you can think about it!"

The berries are certainly delicious and falling to with an energy that is surprising at that hour of the day, it is not long before we strip the bushes of their fruit and go in quest of more spoil.

Spying a clump on the hillside beyond I propose cleaning them and then move on. The incline is steep and rather slippery owing to the heavy shower of dew still on the ground, but nothing daunted we climb up and are amply repaid for our trouble.

"Suppose we go into the fruit business, eh, old boy? There's millions in it!"

"Berries, you mean. In the first place I haven't capital to start in, and in the second I hardly think wild berries are a profitable investment," is my laughing rejoinder.

"Oh, as to that I will lend you a few bits and" ———

But what is that unearthly sound that breaks in upon this kindly offer?

I look at Bobby to see if he has noticed it and am struck at the expression on his face.

"Hist, lay low, it's a" ———

Again that long, low, dismal cry reaches our listening ears.

"It's a bear!"

"No, that's not a bear's growl. But let's get out of this anyway."

Almost paralyzed with fear we start to run down hill, but I am in such a hurry, I actually slide.

"Come on, Bob," I yell.

Simultaneously we land in the middle of the road; there is a collision; we sprawl.

"Never mind, old chap, no damage done, but let us make for that hollow stump as soon as possible," I manage to gasp as soon as I have swallowed a mouthful of mud. "Get your gun ready and we'll give them a warm reception," and running at a 2:40 or as fast as my number 8's could carry me I reach my haven of safety breathless but unharmed.

"There are wood-cutters near for I hear the sound of the ax," whispers my companion. "Now if we only"——

A long, low, quivering cry, a crash, a thud, a shower of twigs, leaves. rocks, splinters and direct—a violent shaking of the old stump into which we had crawled—then silence—deep silence—prolonged silence.

I looked at Bobby, he looked at me. We continued look-at each other for some time. Perhaps we would have been at it yet if the thought hadn't struck me that it might be just as well to ascertain the cause of all the disturbance. Stealthily, cautiously I stuck my nose into daylight, then my head and finally, as nothing deprived me of these members, my shoulders filled up the background, and I surveyed the landscape. No bear, no lion, in fact nothing in the animal line met my searching gaze. Suddenly my startled eyes lit upon an object. Grabbing my trembling comrade by the collar I dragged him into an upright position and pointed to where but a few moments since we had made a rapid descent.

"Yes, it is somewhat appaling," for the cause of the excitement was nothing more nor less than a giant of this forest primival, which had fallen in our very tracks.

I have never been accused of being over-pious, but I'm not ashamed to say than never have I heaved a deeper sigh of relief and thanksgiving than at that moment. It was quite pleasant to know that we were not atoms of crushed humanity under that massive piece of timber.

The dismal shout, as we afterward learned, is the woodcutter's warning call, and given only when a tree is about to fall.

"So much for our first bear," says Bobby, to whom bravado and fear are not very far apart.

After we have partially gained our equanimity—which heavers were lost with the raspberries—we resume our saunter down the road with lighter hearts but shaky knees. As we turned a corner an ox-team of six yoke swung into view on its way to haul the tree to the mill, and the oaths that driver gave voice to, the epithets he hurled at their stolid heads, and the cracking of the long whip, certainly didn't convey the atmosphere of a Sunday-school class, but was infinitely more amusing.

"Haven't we escaped one death but to meet another?" groaned my unhappy friend.

It did look as if a catastrophe was eminent, for the road was narrow and the banks were steep; the oxen were enormous and their yokes still more so; furthermore they were traveling at a great rate of speed—as oxen go.

We couldn't go on and I wouldn't turn back. Just then I spotted the gnarled line of an oak projecting above my head. To think was to act. Siezing Bobby I boosted him into position and secured a hold for myself and just as the bovine train bore down upon us and swept by.

If you can imagine the picture we presented you can judge of the expression of amazement depicted on that teamster's countenance, especially as the limb which I had straddled began to bend then snapped, and I took an immediate header down below.

"I declare, this is getting quite interesting, don't you think so? Talk about a chapter of incidents—why, this promises to break the record. But if I were you, Fletcher, I'd let up on dust. If you are so very hungry, have a berry."

"Nary a berry, but I'll thank you to look out for self after this. Catch me saving those blonde locks for Betty again. O no! This is the third time I've prolonged your existence and that's gratitude for you!"

"Thanks—thanks awfully old fellow, but you do look so comical in your dusty jacket and that becoming attitude. I am truly garteful, though, and if you can navigate let's go down to the river."

Acting on the inspiration we take a short cut across the railroad track and come upon Davis who is in his element.

"What under heaven has struck you two?" is his opening remark.

"Raspberries, ghastly fears, blood curdling cries, falling trees, an xo-team, the tail end of a cyclone, and two mud baths," comes in a breath from Bobby.

"Well you look it. Better take a swim as the others are doing."

"Don't know how," whines Bobby.

"Learn."

"Didn't bring my suit along."

"Use your suspenders," is the chilling response.

"I'll be sure to sink."

"No fear of that—your head is too light for such a possibility."

"Well, if I must, I must, but my death be on your heads. I see you have determined to take me as a lamb to the slaughter."

The boys are having a jolly time, and quickly divesting myself of unnecessary apparel. I wade in with a delight that only a lover of the water can experience. Bobby soon makes a timid approach, and with the aid of the rest we initiated him to the first ducking and the other discomforting mishaps of a beginner. He bears up bravely however, and masters the first strokes with a rapidity that belies his knowledge of the art. In fact, I am not at all surprised when he makes a wager with Belshaw to swim across the stream, and he wins it too. Yes, Bobby has deceived us and we find it hard to forgive him, but must acknowledge him to be the champion swimmer of the crowd.

All this time Davis has been amusing himself snapping off the heads of water-snakes with a sang froid that is truly amazing. He pauses in his interesting pastime at this point to shout "Hie there! Get out of that you rascal!" as he sees Prince coolly walking off with a pair of trousers (mine) a stray sock and other serviceable and necessary unmentionables of Bobby's.

This direful calamity fills the breasts of all with apprehension, and as the whistle of an engine tells of a near approach, and having no desire to pose as ancient gods to an unfeeling and appreciative audience, we make haste to secure our somewhat scattered belongings before the train goes by. Bobby somehow is out of luck, and is struggling with a refactory garment when a nearing toot signals the unwelcome approach.

"My kingdom for a bush" come in a dismal sound from his corner, and the last glimpse we catch of him is a confused mixture of streaming suspenders, loosely fitting pantaloons, bare feet and a very great deal of crumpled linen, as he makes a hasty departure to a neighboring clump of willows.

Perhaps it is well, for there were a few women leaning out of the car windows and standing on the platform, taking in the beauty of the landscape and us as well. I waved my sock frantically as they swept by, in token of friendly greeting and especially to one fair damsel who threatened to see and be seen.

Why is it, I wonder, that a woman will wave her handkerchief, parasol, lunchbasket, grip-sack or any other convenient article to straggling people she may see in traveling? They do not seem to be possessed with the desire on other occasions. However, wave they did, and I tried my level best to be sociable, with no other result than eliciting a shout from the travelers and the boys.

"Your reception costume is quite becoming, Fletcher, but don't you think just a trifle less shirt-front would lend eclat to the ensemble?" inquires Merrill.

"Perhaps it would, but a race against the lightning express is not conducive to the arrangement of detail or other terminals for that matter."

"Well, while you fellows are getting ready for lunch I'm going across the river," Bobby informs us who, by this time is fully equipped.

"Don't forget the milk." I call out, as he pushes off from the shore in a hurry, thinking I might propose a visit in the same direction.

"I won't," and rapid strokes soon lengthen the distance between us.

"Evidently Bobby doesn't sigh for your company this morning," says Pug with an impressive dig into my ribs.

"No, he longs for Betty," I am forced to acknowledge, and as my remark carries with it a conviction of mystery, I am called upon to explain. I do so, and you may be sure I omit nothing that will leave Bobby a shadow of a chance to escape the guying in store for him.

"I sigh for a biscuit, Belshaw, so don't you think we'd better travel?"

"Yes, it is noon, I declare I never knew time to pass so rapidly," and gathering up the spoils of the morning we strike out for home.

Fulford Again Victorious.

On New Year's day at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, Mr. E D. Fulford defeated J. L. Brewer, the ex-champion for the fifth time. It would seem as though Fulford had come to the front to stay. The match was at 100 birds for $500 a side, Hurlington rules, 80 yards boundary. After missing a few birds Fulford made the excellent run of 81 straight kills. The match closed with 96 kills for Fulford and 94 for Brewer.

Pacific Coast Field Trials Club's field trials, Bakersfield, California, January 18th. J. M. Kilgariff, Secretary, San Francisco.

The Field Trials.

On Monday morning next the field trials of the Pacific Coast Field Trials' Club, will be inaugurated at Bakersfield.

It is now certain that no better or more flattering preparations have ever been made for this event than are noted this year.

It is a matter upon which the club is to be congratulated that the grounds have been placed in such fine condition.

There will be an absence of the horrible dust which choked man and beast last year, and rendered the very best dogs but little better than passable on account of having their noses stopped up with the alkali dust. The quail are plentiful and the conditions for a season of first class sport are all that could be desired.

Never before has there been so much interest and friendly rivalry in the matter of contesting for first honors as appear in the preparations for this event. A number of the membership have entered the contest with the idea of bringing out the good qualities of their favorites and will be greatly disappointed should they fail to stand well toward the front in the matter of honors.

If the weather should remain favorable as to rainfall, it will be of the first advantage to the contest. If the cover be damp the birds will lie better and thus give the dogs a splendid opportunity to work upon the birds. It would seem that it would require considerable work to familiarize the dogs with the restless quality of the quail of this country and no such work can be shown, except under the most favorable conditions, as is noted in the other parts of the country where the Bob White obtains.

Do not fail to attend this event next week for there will be more real sport to the hour, down at Bakersfield, than has been enjoyed by sportsmen since the assembly there last year. When you get to Bakersfield, go to The Southern, kept by that prince of genial and accommodating lanlords, Colonel Morrison. You will find all the Field Trial men at that hostelry.

At last we are to have the Newfoundlands represented in America. Even New York shows cannot bring out more than a pair of true Newfoundlands. We have plenty of black dogs, a good many mongrels and an occasional Labrador dog, passed off as Newfoundlands.

But we learn through the Fancier's Journal that Spratt's treasurer, Mr. C. C. Vickery, will shortly import some good dogs and bitches. England has fostered and improved our national breed until they can muster forty to sixty in a single show. They are very companionable when well bred and we are glad to hear of the coming of some good ones.

The Bull Dog Club of America takes the lead of all specialty clubs in this country or any other. Although this is but the second year of their existence, they offer at the coming Westminster Kennel Show, cups, medals and cash amounting to $1,005 in value. Five of the cups are valued at $650. Mr. Geo. Raper, a well known and justly popular judge in England, will judge the bull-dog classes. A more fitting selection could not be made.

Apropos of bull-dogs Mr. Fred Gresham gives a graphic description of them in a recent Fancier's Gazette: "When solicitude is desired a bull dog may be brought into requisition, not that the breed is savage by nature, for as a matter of fact the bull-dog is, as a rule, a good tempered animal. At the same time visitors, whether intent on burglary or a friendly call, do not take kindly to it. To be greeted on ringing the front door bell by a bull dog is apt to upset the equanimity of most ordinary mortals; an uncomfortable feeling is experienced that he may take hold somewhere, and if he does that no power can shake him off. You cannot tell whether he is pleased or the reverse; all you know is that he has his eyes upon you, and you wish him some place else.

Moreover a bull dog is not always a desirable companion. He snores when asleep, wheezes when awake, slobbers all over you when desirous of showing his affection, and makes an unearthly sound when he tries to bark.

One of the most promising English setter puppies that we have seen in many a long day is the Earl of Essex, by Rover H.—Beasy. He is beautifully marked, with splendid coat and sturdy limbs; a clean-cut intelligent head and good carriage of flag. Mr. Thos, Higgs, the fortunate owner, is to be congratulated,

A Pathetic Incident.

We were pushing over the ground where Hurlbut's men rested on that memorable Sunday morning when the first gleamings of the sun fell on the wooded hills and ravines which form the site of one of the most notable struggles of the war of the Rebellion—the battle of Shiloh. It was Monday morning, early the hour, for darkness yet lay over the bloody field where thousands of the dead and wounded remained, presenting all the fearful terrors of the awful conflict.

The silence was painful. Cautiously our line advanced not knowing what moment we should run into the enemies' pickets which we knew must be very near.

Presently our advance guard made a ruse to draw the attention of the confederate pickets should any one be nigh. The effort was successful, for no sooner was the presence of our guard revealed than flashed forth the fire of a rebel picket's gun—a solitary flash—at which point a half dozen of our boys, holding their guns at "ready" instantly fired. Then all was still. The rain and cloud mingling with the smoke of the confiict had rolled over the field and lay in a solid mass beneath the trees.

We crouched low, expecting a return volley from the enemy, but not a sound reached our ears, save the low "Hist, men, lay low," from our Captain. Our minds were wrought up to the highest possible pitch of anxiety and apprehension. Dead and dying all about us in countless numbers. This feeling was intensified on my part by reaching out my hand and finding the point of contact to be a dead soldier's face. I withdrew it with a shudder, while I began to realize the meaning of the word terror. A low, soft breeze crept among the boughs of the live oaks overhead, and shook upon us a shower from their water-laden foliage.

We lay breathlessly silent for—I know not how long. The mind under such circumstances is incapable of taking accurate measurement of duration. It seemed to me hours, though it could not have been above a very few minutes. We had just determined to push forward again in order to accomplish our purpose, that of locating the line of the enemy, when we heard a voice, and dropped to the earth again to listen. Every ear was strained to catch the slightest of the audible; every sense alert and every nerve prepared for action.

"Sh-h-h-h,—a low childish voice, in plaintive tones, comes through the murky gloom. "Pa! Pa! Pa!" A short interval and again came the voice trembling with the weight of awful fear which lay upon the young terrified heart. "Pa! Pa! Pa!" but no answer came to the plaintive cry. We moved up and surrounded the point from whence the voice came, which was near the spot from whence flashed the rebel picket's gun.

The first light of the dawn now crept through the trees and revealed with sickly gleaming the immediate scene. At the foot of a gnarled and rifted oak the rebel picket lay dead, by his side the empty gun, the last discharge of which, flashing through the gloom, had directed our fire to his bosom. We lay about the spot for a moment awaiting developments, when, repeating the plaintive call, a little boy—a mere child of scarce seven years—stepped hesitatingly from a clump of copse a few yards away, glancing about and again calling anxiously: "Pa! pa! pa! Then his eyes fell upon the fallen form of the rebel picket aud he hurried forward, and as he drew near and realized the awful truth, he dropped the little tin pail containing some rations for his father which he carried and kneeling by the prostrate form of the dead rebel, he stroked his face and hair with an affectionate manner, while his great blue eyes swam in tears, which falling, bedewed the handsome face and long, rich, flowing beard of the father, in whose countenance the warmth of life yet remained, but from whom the spirit had fled.

We silently gathered about the boy, who noticed us not until our Captain stepped near him, when he looked up, and, with a pathos in his sweet voice that I shall never forget, he asked; "What shall Georie do now?" We had all drawn near, and, as the lad observed the tears in each of our eyes, his grief became more expressgive, and falling on the bosom of the dead he sobbed as if his heart would break. A large Newfoundland dog had forced his waya mong us and stood by the weeping boy, who, feeling the shaggy presence, arose, and clasping him about the neck, exclaimed: "Mamma's dead! papa's dead! and only old Guard and Georgie's left. What shall we do? What shall we do?"

"Hastily severing a lock from the dead man's brow, a ring from his finger and some papers from the pocket of his blouse, our Captain fastened them within the folds of the boy's waiste, and raising a flag of truce, set out alone with the lad and the dog which followed, in the direction of the enemies' line. To the rebel pickets he safely delivered the boy, and had but rejoined us when the gloomy morning was broken by the volleys of our advancing lines.

I have often thought during these after years of that little boy and his only friend, the large Newfoundland dog.

Pointers By President Watkins.

Ize done s'posed dat yo' am all gwien down ter Bakersfield to de fiel' trials. Be I 'bout on de squar on sech s'posin? Yo' gwien Brer Goosequill Swansdown? An' yo' Mose Brimblecome? When yo' gets tired, rest an' blow sum mo'."

At a recent meeting of the English Kennel Club, Mr. O'Callaghan proposed that on and after a certain date, to be hereafter decided, any dog or dogs exhibited at shows not held under kennel club rules shall be disqualified from competing at shows held under said rules. The proposition will be brought forward before a general meeting of the club, with whom the decision will ultimately rest. This sounds very arbitrary to the American, but personally we think it advisable in England, not in this country. England, though not as large as California, supports about 70 shows in a year; sometimes more. Many of these must necessarily conflict; consequently many of them do not pay. But what concerns Americans more directly is the fact that the average American does not have the statistics at hand to show him which are the large and which the small shows; which are under K. C. rules and which not. Consequently some ignorant or unprincipled Englishman who thinks all Yankee pockets are lined with gold, offers us a dog at a long price, with a long list of winnings. We purchase, and when we receive the animal find him a third rater. His winnings correct enough, but made at shows where he either had no competition at all or mongrels to compete against. To the average buyer a first at Crewe means as much as a first at Birkenhead or Crystal Palace.

The setter men are crowing over their victories at the Field Trials this year, but they do not want to crow too lond. Mr. J. M. Tracy, the well known Field Trial judge, writes a bit of consolation that the pointer men may wish to remember. He refers to the Central Field Trials as follows:

"From what we observed during the running as regards the respective qualities of the two breeds, it seems almost certain that if the number of pointers starting had equaled the number of setters, one of the former would have won.

The setters excel the pointers in bird finding during a short series, but pointers uniformerly finish the freshest. In a series of five or six braces I feel confident that enough pointers would be left in, after the second round to run the remaining setters to a standstill.

We had two pointers in that stake against five setters. Their work in the stake was better at all points than that of the setter who won in previous trials. Even one more of their kind in the race would probably have turned the scale.

"It appears that the monks are laughing fit to crack their sides at the subscriptions which are being collected for them. Why, they have, on account of the railway, no travellers to attend to nowadays, barring, perhaps, half a dozen peasants who play the "poor" game upon them, and the monastery is enormously rich, owning vast and well-paying estates. So with their tongues in their cheeks, the monks are awaiting the new subscriptions which they "so sorely need." That is as good as a play, but it paid certain people as an advertisement."

We had always understood from those who have visited the monastery that they held rich endowments, and have often wondered at their recently discovered poverty.

The interest in the matter of the coming bench show should not be allowed to abate. The next bench show held in this city should be by far the best show ever held here as there are many more line dogs in the country now than there was last year. In all of the more important classes. save the mastiffs and pointers there will be noticed a decided change for the better.

It is to be hoped that the interest will be kept up during the short interim, before active preparations should begin for this event.

The California Kennel Club has matters well in hand, and we doubt not will handle the show in a far better manner than last year. Let no stone be left unturned to make the show a success.

Drink NAPA SODA

On the Western Plains.

Previous to the episodes of Dr. Thompson and his dog, we had begun to tire of inactivity and had been discussing the subject of whither we should next direct our course. Besides, provisions were running low, except charqui, and it was necessary to replenish. It was finally decided to visit the Rocky Mountains and explore the Sweet-Water, Devil's Gate, Independence Rock, Pacific Springs and Fremont's Peak. We expected to replenish stock at some trading post, of which we had been told there were several on the North Platte. We also wished to relieve ourselves of the unwelcome presence of Dr. Thompson, for, though he was evidently a man of considerable education and had been trained to the profession of medicine and could act like a gentleman if he tried very hard, he was generally morose and disagreeable. We had little regard for, and no faith in him. The dog was all right but the man was an incubus that we wished to get shut of, and we resolved to turn him over to some trader on the North Platte, or to some belated train of Mormon immigrants, to be taken to Salt Lake, where he could get all the forty-rod Vally-Tan his skin would hold, and be transmuted into a howling Latter-Day Saint.

Having once determined on a line of travel there was no unnecessary delay in carrying the plan into execution. By sundown everything was ready. Bright and early next morning we were in the saddle, ready for the start. Doctor Thompson attempted to mount old Breck behind the pack.

He was quickly admonished that such an act wouldn't stand muster, and that if he had any regard for his physical well-being he would better desist. He desisted. He was informed that as he had walked into camp in much worse condition than his present one, he could walk out. He had the choice between walking and tarrying. He walked, but with a sullen, vindictive look on his face.

Old Breck's pack had been greatly lightened by consumption of commissary stores—it is astonishing how much five healthy men, in a condition of chronic hunger, can eat in a few days—but this was made up by the charqui and the peltry, the best of the latter of which we took with us, thinking we might barter it for provisions at some trading post. Our regard for the faithful old servitor was too great to allow him to be doubly burdened by packing such a worthless vagabond as Dr. Thompson.

We made an early start, traveling southwards, and expecting to reach the Platte by nightfall.

There was no occasion for hurry, so we rode leisurely that the Doctor might keep within hailing distance. For, though we disliked him, we had no intention of abandoning him. He found it hard work, for whiskey had weakened his power, but he struggled with all the manhood left in him. Seeing his distress we relented, and each one in turn gave him a lift, now and then, ride-and-tie fashion, so that he got through the day's journey very comfortably. But he was an ungrateful cur; had no appreciation of favors, and growled because he had not been permitted to ride the whole way. His dog, York, was the better gentleman of the two, for he did appreciate favors and expressed it by lively demonstrations. York came into camp in a very delapidated condition, much worse than his master. He had been making side excursions, chasing birds and rabbits as is the wont of a dog when uncontrolled. His feet were sore and his legs weary, and he crept up to his master for sympathy and a caress, but the brute repulsed him with a cuff and a curse. A dog cannot travel on the plains with either man or horse. His feet get sore and give out. In order to take him safely and soundly through a journey such as was that across the plains, thirty-five years ago, from the Mississippi to California, he must be carefully nursed, and permitted to ride occasionally. He must have water also, and cannot travel in the hot sun long distances without it. This is more especially true of a thoroughbred. A mongrel cur and a "yaller dog" with a long, upward-curved tail, seem to stand the fatigue of constant travel much better. Possibly hardier traits have been developed in them, owing to the fact that they have always been obliged to look out for themselves, and never received the fostering care that is tendered by man to the thoroughbred. Be this as it may, the fact remains. The low-bred dog will also give out, and when he does, he will lie down in utter discouragement to die. while the thoroughbred will, at least, make an effort to fight the battle through, strain every nerve and every muscle to reach the goal.

A returned Argonaut who kept a hotel in the town of Marshal, Iowa, and at whose hostelry I once chanced to sojourn for a few days, told me a most remarkable story about a dog crossing the plains to California and back again to Marshal. The dog was his, a magnificent mastiff. In the early fifties he crossed the plains to California in search of gold, and took his dog with him. On the journey the mastiff neither rode nor slept, traveling all day and watching all night. On arriving at the gold mines the faithful canine was not in the least fatigued. The journey involved a travel of over two thousand miles through an unsettled wilderness. In two years time Boniface had made his "pile," and determided to return to his old home. He gathered together his treasures, among which was his faithful old mastiff, and departed from the mines to return by the way of Sacramento, San Francisco and Panama. While in Sacramento he met an old friend who wanted the mastiff, and begged that the noble animal might be left with him. Learning that it would be troublesome, as well as expensive, to take the dog on a long sea voyage, and a long journey by rail after arriving at New York, he concluded to accede to his friend's request, with an injunction that the old fellow be well cared for to the day of his death. This being promised, the dog was tied up in his friend's yard, and the man from Iowa boarded a river steamer and proceded on his way homeward. The intelligent dog seemed to suspect that he was about to be abandoned by his master and whined and howled piteously. He made most desperate efforts to unloose himself, and when he found his efforts unavailing, lay down, and, resting his head on his paws, looked beseechingly and reproachfully at his old master. The dog was left in Sacramento. It took the man from Marshal just six weeks to reach his home. He said: "You can imagine my surprise on my arrival home that the first greeting of welcome was from my old mastiff whom I had left in my friend's possession in California only six weeks before. He was as overjoyed to meet me as though I had never betrayed nor abandoned him. We have never parted since, and, you bet, we never will part as long as we both live. He had escaped from my friend, and, knowing instinctively that I had returned home, had taken the back track, over mountain and across plain, and, traveling night and day, had beaten me home by thirty-six hours." I mildly expressed a doubt that any dog, however intelligent and powerful, could traverse so great a distance in so short a time, especially as there were long stretches where food was absolutely unobtainable. Mine host stepped to the door and called, "Nero," whereupon a huge mastiff came bounding into the room. Patting Nero affectionately on the head, in triumphant voice he exclaimed: "There is the dog; do you believe it now?" I didn't believe it, but didn't say so. It was knock-out testimony and I leave it to lawyers to decide its value..

Well, we didn't make the Platte that day. About three o'clock in the afternoon we came across a party of hunters on a small stream, where were plenty of water, grass and wood. They had a peculiar outfit and we became curious to learn what sort of game they were after. A request that we might camp with them was cordially responded to in the affirmative. As soon as camp was made snug, we called upon our neighbors, mingling with them and talking with them with that freedom and familiarity which characterizes plainsmen.

They were as curious to know the object of our expedition as we were of theirs. We satisfied them on that point. Were just hunting for sport and adventure, and knowledge of that vast, unexplored, or only partly explored, region. They informed us that they were hunting buffalo calves. They cared nothing for the grown buffalo nor other game, except what was wanted for meat. They wouldn't even bother with pelts, as the skins of wild animals killed at that season were of little value. They were asked: "What will you do with the calves?" The reply was, "Oh, breed them with domestic cattle, or try to propagate them pure; both can be done. Some we will sell to the zoological gardens, and some to the menagries. Barnum will take several of them and pay well for them too. There will be no hitch in disposing of them, and at good round prices." While talking with them I discovered that there were four of the party whom I had met before. Old Joe Hewitt, of Clear Lake, Iowa, hunter and trapper, Rufus B. Clark, of Red Cedar Rapids, Charles City, captain and leader of the party and an old plainsman, Chas. E. Bigelow and his brother James L. Bigelow, of Wapsipinicon, now Independence. The party and outfit consisted of eighteen men, twenty horses, two six-ox teams and wagons and fifteen milch cows; lassos for lassoing the calves, and several heavy oak clubs about thirty inches long, somewhat tapering, and armed at the but with an iron knob; at the tip with a sharp spike. They had grub, galore and arms ad libitum. Though bent on business they were a jolly crowd and enjoyed themselves hugely. They made us welcome, and from their generous store of old bourbon, frequently passed the bottle, to which Dr. Thompson paid such assiduous attention that he soon got so drunk he couldn't stand on his legs. On asking for what purpose or use all this equipment was intended, we were told that if we would join the hunt we could see for ourselves. At the same time a cordial invitation was accepted with great pleasure.

At break of day next morning two men started out to reconnoitre. They returned in about an hour, reporting a large herd of buffalo about five miles to the northwest, and numbering, according to their ettimate about two thousand, among which, they thought, were plenty of calves though they could not see them. But they saw many of the great, gaunt, gray wolves of the plain prowling about the flanks of the herd, from which sign they deduced that there were calves in the centre of it, which these hungry wolves were watching an opportunity to gobble. The wolves always follow a herd of buffalo where there are calves, but seldom get a chance at them, for, whether feeding or running the calves are kept in the centre; the cows come next, while the bulls are on the outside. While feeding the bulls face outward, thus forming a double cordon around the little fellows which no wolf can break through; nor will he attempt it for he would be trampled and gored to death instantly. A Travesty on Justice.

If ever there was a travesty on justice it occurred at Guerneville, Sonoma County, this State, on the 7th inst. It appears that Thomas Tunstead, Chief of Patrol, and John P. Babcock, Deputy Fish Commissioner, caught two men in open and flagrant violation of the fish laws on the Russian river. The men had a large net fastened securely to a stake driven in the bank of the river, and had fastened the other end to some rocks in the river opposite and a little above the point where it was fastened at the bank. The two officers waited until they saw the men strip the net and take from it fish, when they placed them under arrest and proceeded with them to Guerneville and turned them over to the authorities there, filing the proper complaint against them charging them with violating the statutes in such cases made and provided.

The case came on for trial before the local court and a jury on the 7th inst.

The district attorney conducted the prosecution, Messrs. Tunstead and Babcock testifying fully and distinctly to the facts as above stated. The defendants, Pennie and Butler, on the stand admitted every material fact, and there was no possible lack of testimony to convict. The Justice, Mr. Bartley, gave fair and explicit instructions, but in the face of the most unquestioned testimony and the virtual confessions of defendants, the jury went out, and in less than ten minutes returned with the surprising verdict of "Not Guilty!" Then followed a scene which would put to shame a police court lawyer or a Barbary Coast hoodlum.

The law-defying wretches followed the representatives of the Fish Commission to the hotel in great numbers and hooted, and yelled in derision like the band of foul-mouthed ruffians which they are. It was, no doubt, from this same class of law-defying wretches that a jury was chosen, who did not hesitate to override every obligation—the sanctity of an oath having no weight with them—when it came to passing upon the guilt of men who make a business of ignoring the plain provisions of the law. If such vandals are allowed to go unwhipped of justice, as evidently will be the case so long as any community, such as Guernville has proven itself to be, exists in this State, then, in that much is a free republic a failure, and all such persons should be sent to Russia, where, under the Czar, they would be compelled to respect the law.

It is poor encouragment for the Fish Commission to have to contend with such conditions, and more especially when the press gives the matter but a passing mention and raises its voice in tones of criticism rather than commendation.

While the officers of the Fish Commission were standing in the hotel at Guerneville after the trial above mentioned and the announcement of the outrageous verdict of the shameless jury, a big ruffian swaggered to the door, and looking in upon the two representatives of the Commission, who were talking over the outrage with the Justice and the District Attorney, he spoke up so that all could hear:

"Why the d——n fools, they thought they were going to convict those fellows when I'm a fisherman and my pardner was on the jury."

Such scoundrels should be taught that a proper respect for the laws of the land are essential to the enjoyment of their liberties.

Whelps.

Mr. Samuel L. Sachs' black and tan Toy, terrier bitch Rosy, prize winner at recent bench show, threw on the 5th of December a litter of five pups weighing when five weeks old but 5 oz. each. Mr. Sachs is making additions to his kennels of a number of other varieties of dogs.

We had the pleasure one day recently of spending a day at Rancho Resaca, the country seat of Col. Harry I. Thornton. It seemed like old times to be placed once more in surroundings so suggestive of the comforts of the old Southern home. The house with a central hall extending through it; the commodious appartments, large, open fireplaces in which the cheerful fires crackled and roared with that pleasing hospitality which is peculiarly their own; the adjacent buildings and mamoth rambling barns,all recalled our childhood's memories. We rambled along the winding brook and enjoyed the day shooting quail and other game. One incident worthy of special mention was the opportunity offered us, which we at once improved, of sending both charges of fine shot into the body of a sneaking coyote which darted out from a wooded ravine but a quarter of a mile from the house and sped away over the hills. When the first charge of No. 10's struck him at about 30 yards, every hair on his body assumed an upright position, with the further noticeable effect of causing him to swerve away and repeat the manuver at the second dose of the homepathic pellets. The genial hospitality with which our party was received made us all feel at home and enjoy the outing. With us was Mr. W. G. Layng, of the Breeder and Sportsman staff, and his father, Mr. John Layng, the well known Superintendent of the shot tower of this city. The latter, though now gray with the frosts of years, can shoot both gun and pistol, and tramp about the hills as well, if indeed not better, than most younger sportsmen.

The New York Times has this to say of a practice which in this country is only known to the Indians:

"The usual complaint this fall has been made that many ducks were netted. This is illegal,but the old excuse is handy—that the fisherman cannot prevent the ducks from getting into the seines put out for fish. Another law that has been broken considerably is that prohibiting the killing of ducks from a yacht or sailing vessel. Sailing down the ducks was formerly quite a common method of getting them; and even now, though it is illegal, not a few try it, and no one seems to make any move to stop it. Altogether the ducks have a hard time of it. From the 1st of October to the 1st of May—indeed during the whole time that they are in this part of the country—it is lawful to shoot them. The suggested law to prevent the spring shooting has only caused a howl from those living on the shores of the bay who shoot for the market.

Mr. M. Phister, of Cincinnati, Ohio, has sent the greyhounds Bennerit's Nettle, Carvick, Field, Norwegian and Belle of Elthan to D. C. Luse, of Great Bend, Kansas. These are the hounds recently presented to Mr. Phister by Col. North, the owner of Fullerton. Four of the above are half-brothers and sisters to Fullerton. The Eastern men are getting the right blood. But we have one consolation. They have not got our climate, and cannot train their hounds the whole year round.

Mr. Geo. Crocker, of this city, has purchased of Mr. Geo. W. LaRue, of New York, the English setter dog Bob Gates Jr. 19370. He is by Bob Gates 7127 Count Rapier—Belle of Hatchie ex Flo Maclin 16295, she by Gath's Mark—Cosey. Cosey by Dan Purcell, he by Duke Gladstone. Bob Gates Jr. was whelped July 5, 1889, and should be a good one; at least his breeding is about right.

The Occidental Coursing Club will hold its next meeting on February 22d. There will be an unlimited All-Aged Stake, entrance $6. The officers of the day will be as follows: Judge, John Grace; Slipper, James Wren; Slip Steward, J. R. Dickson; Flag Steward, P. Gallagher; Field Stewards—H. Wormington, Thomas J. O'Keefe and F. Hind, of Redwood City.

There is no more popular dealer in the sporting goods line than Uncle Robert Liddle, the veteran gun maker on Washington street, near Montgomery.

There will be no more active man at the field trials this week than Uncle Robert, and many will be the quail to fall as a result of his clear eye and steady nerve.

The Forest and Stream comes to us this week enlarged to thirty-two pages and full of excellent matter. The old imprint is retained, but it will require some time for one to realize that they are looking at the old publication, the absence of its old cover makes so great a change.

On New Year's day there was a rabbit drive in Kern County about six miles from Bakersfield, which resulted in the slaughter of 2500 of the long-eared pests. There were about 100 men engaged in the drive.

It is rumored that Mr. Dominick Shannon's greyhound bitch Verdure Clad will shortly be bred to El Rey. We wish him good luck with his litter. Her Eastern progeny are doing well.

The World's Fair Dog Show will open the second week in June, 1893. Entries close May 20th. It is stated that the managers have fifty sheds at their disposal, each 50x300 feet.

Mr. John Davidson will judge the following classes at the Chicago show, Irish and Gordon setters, cocker, clumber and field spaniels, fox hounds, beagles and blood hounds.

Do not fail to remember that all the sportsmen will be found quartered at the Southern, in Bakersfield, during the week, Col. Morrison will make it pleasant for every one.

End of Los Angeles' Winter Meeting.

THURSDAY, January 7, 1892.

The meeting was characterized by the fact that all races were decided on their merits. There was something wrong in the half-mile handicap, judging by the betting. The starters were The Jew, Hercules and April Fool. The latter was a 2 to 1 favorite in the overnight pools. A few minutes before the race Hercules was made a terrific favorite. The matter was reported to the judges, who,instead of changing the riders, contented themself with publicly cautioning the jockeys. Hercules won the race with very little to spare in the excellent time of 48 seconds. A big howl went up from the crowd, who had played The Jew and April Fool. The judges ordered the race run over, and put up Rafour on April Fool and Cook on The Jew, instead of Moore and Sammy Cooper. The event was set after the last race, in order to give the horses a chance to get well rested up. April Fool and The Jew were accorded a much warmer support, while Hercules took a little tumble in the betting. This proved to be one of the grandest races ever seen in California. The two finished neck and neck, all being ridden out for all there was in them. April Fool gained the verdict. Many thought that it was a dead heat for second place, but the judges gave The Jew the place. The time was 48 seconds, identically the same time as the previous run. After announcing the result the judges ruled Cooper and Moore off for a year.

It appears that The Jew, in the first run, ran out very wide, and lost at least three lengths at the start. This was the main reason why Cooper was suspended, especially as there was a suspicion before the race that The Jew was not "out for the stuff." It is said that Cooper induced some of his warmest friends to play The Jew. A strong petition has been sent in asking for the reinstatement of Cooper, The fact that The Jew did not win the second run should doubtless count in his favor.

Los Angeles Turf Notes.

CHARLES KERR, the genial horse breeder of Bakersfield, has a happy faculty of naming horses. E. J. Baldwin, as a general thing, names his horses after towns that have Spanish names. Mr. Kerr stays with old Ireland. For instance, he owns Ulster, Antrim, Tyrona, Connaught and several others typical of the place "Where the grass grows so green." The good-natured Billy McCormick is training for Mr. Kerr this season, and the trainer of the celebrated El Rio Rey can be relied upon to have one or two good ones up his sleeve when the bell rings for the opening of the spring season. The following horses are now being trained at the Antrim Stock Farm:

Munster, br h, 4, by Darebin—Mariposa, by Monarchist.
Herald, br c, 3, by Kyrle Daly—Cinderella, by Catesby.
Ulster, ch c, 3, by Warwick—Maid of Stockdale, by Shannon.
Bay colt, 3, by John Happy—Rosa Bella, by King Alfonso.
Jennie K., b f, 3, by Sir Modred—Wild Rose, by Norfal.
Nellie K., b f, 3, by Tyrant—Johanna, by Wheatley.
Tyrona, br f, 3, by Tyrant—Ona, by Onondaga.
Linda Vista, b f, 3, by Wildidle—Tricksey, by Joe Hooker.
Antrim, b c, 2, by Apache—Brook, by Ten Broeck.
Bay colt, 2, by Apache—Cinderella, by Catesby.
Connaught, ch c, 2, by Joe Daniels—Santa Rosa, by Wheatley.
Chestnut colt, 2, by Bpache—Emma Longfield, by Longfield.
Virginia Dare, br f, by Apache—Virgie, by Virgil.

The writer hopes that this string will land several of the big events of the year, for the California turf needs more such honest old men as Charles Kerr connected with it.

THEODORE WINTERS will not race his horses in California this spring. It is his intention to ship his entire string to St. Louis in the middle of March. He has eleven in training. I am unable to give the age and breeding of all. In the string are Haskell, Bueno, Pyramid, Rose Hickman, G & C, Advance, Tahoe, Bo Bo, Trembo, Echo and Gumbo. Some of these horses are peculiarly named.

TALKING about the Winters horses reminds me that I desire to make a prediction this early in the year. Don't overlook Yo Tambien. She will be one of the sensations of the season.

I HEAR that Billy Donathan is seriously ill at San Jose with pleuro-pneumonia. Billy is very popular among horsemen,who hope for his speedy recovery.

OREGON ECLIPSE has been sold to a Mr. Leihy, of Chicago. He paid Foster a pretty stiff price for the horse. The amount was not made public, but it was reported to be $7,000. Mr. Leihy left Los Angeles with the avowed intention of buying Zaldivar. Nothing but a prohibitive price will stop him. The Chicagoan may also purchase several older California-bred horses before he returns East.

THE holiday meeting given by the Los Angeles Association was not a financial success, although the racing was first-class. The fields were rather small for betting. There was a combination of circumstances which mulitated against the success of the meeting the cold weather on the two opening days very materially affecting the attendance. The feature of the meeting was the fast time made by Acclaim, John Treat, Hercules, April Fool, Ida Glenn and several others. April Fool covered three-eighths of a mile in 34½ seconds which is within half a second of the world's record. The Jew ran a second half-mile heat in the excellent time of 48¼ seconds, and Idaho Chief's time of 1:36¼ for fifteen sixteenths with 125 pounds up should not be overlooked.

ACCLAIM ran a mile with 101 pounds in 1:40 4-5; John Treat, carrying 117 pounds, made a mile and a half in 2:36½; Hercules and April Fool both made a half in the same afternoon in forty-eight seconds. Ida Glenn beat Motto a nose in the five-eighths mile handicap in the excellent time of 1:01¼.

DAGWORTH.

The Dam of Cœur d'Alene.

I have noticed during the past summer that many turf papers have claimed that the little black gelding, David L., 2:19½, is the smallest horse that ever entered the 2:20 list, which is undoubtedly correct, but some of them have gone so far as to claim that he was also the smallest horse that has ever beaten 2:25. The latter statement is not so. Mollie Morris, 2:22, who made her record at Buffalo, N. Y., August 10, 1875, was the smallest horse that ever beat 2:25.

She was not quite fourteen hands high, and weighed less than seven hundred pounds. Still she was a game campaigner and good race horse in her day. Reuben Armstrong, an old-time horseman and driver of some repute, bought her near Chatham, Canada, when four years old; she was a dark chestnut in color, without white, and like many fast trotters of her time was a converted pacer, and nothing was ever known of her breeding. The late "Bill" McLaughlin who drove her in most of her races and gave her the record of 2:22, always claimed that she could pace faster than see could trot. She began trotting in 1870 under the name of Kittie Fisk, which name was changed to Mollie Morris in 1872. She was on the turf nine years, and was used on the road in Boston from 1879 until 1886, when a Michigan man bought her, brought her back to this State and tried to breed her, but she never got in foal. During all those years of hard campaigning and road work she remained perfectly sound, and still she was a "toe-weight trotter."

I see that the old Michigan mare, Belle H., 2:24½, has produced a fast trotter in Cœur d'Alene, 2:19½, and as he is in the hands of that famous driver, Orrin Hickok, he may yet be quite a little faster than his present mark.

Something of the blood lines and early history of his dam may be of interest. In the fall of 1861 a Baptist preacher came to Rochester, Mich., from somewhere in Canada. He brought with him a nice black mare and sold her to a farmer named "Jake" Hadley. The preacher went away shortly after selling the mare, and nothing more was heard of him. In the spring of 1862 she foaled a fine brown filly, which grew up to be a splendid mare and a great roadster. Mr. Hadley did not know that the black mare was in foal when he bought her. The preacher said nothing to him about it.

In the spring of 1870 Mr. Hadley bred the young mare to Grey Belmont, 4468, and in the spring of 1871 she dropped a chestnut filly that afterward became known as Belle H., 2:24½. The mare was again bred to Belmont,and in 1872 she produced a gray colt foal. He grew to be a large, powerful horse, and was called Jeff Davis. After he had been worked on the farm, driven on the road, made to haul a butcher's wagon and in other ways received abuse enough to kill a horse, he was put in some races on half-mile tracks at county fairs, and got a record of 2:40. Belle H. was always a handsome mare and a natural trotter from the start, and had she been in good hands when four or five years old her record would have been 2:20 or better. She was smashed and banged over country roads and half-mile tracks when four and five years old, enough to kill an ordinary horse, still she remained sound. She was six years old when Hadley sold her to go to California for $2,500. Orrin Hickok became her owner, handled her judiciously,and gave her a record of 2:24½.

When Belle was sold to go out to Michigan her dam was given as by Magna Charta. That gave the Magna Charta mares a little boom when she got her record, and shortly after Edward made a record of 2:19 his dam was given as by the same sire, and immediately everybody who owned a mare by the old horse began breeding to some trotting stallion, and now the daughters of Magna Charta stand in advance of those of any other Michigan horse as speed producers, and the son of John Henderson's Morgan Eagle is known as the Pilot Jr. of Michigan. Both Belle H. and Edward were given in Wallace's 2:30 list as being out of mares of unknown breeding, but many other publications hung on to the Magna Charta theory and continued to so credit them in their 2:30 lists. A certain Chicago publication still sticks to it. Your humble servant knocked the Morgan blood out of Belle H. several years ago for "Old Man" Wallace. It is rather strange that the two first trotters to give "Old Mag" a reputation as a brood mare sire did not carry one drop of his blood.

Bellfounder.

There are scores of papers and thousands of men interested in and continually talking about the American trotter, and his great progenitor, imp. Messenger, but the name of Bellfounder is rarely mentioned. It is well known that Hambletonian 10, the greatest progenitor of trotters, was sired by Abdallah 1, a son of Mambrino, by imp. Messenger, and that his dam, the Kent Mare, was by imp. Bellfounder.

Messenger was not a trotter or sire of trotters. Bellfounder was a great trotter, and previous to 1822 had trotted two miles in 6:00, and had won a wager of 200 guineas by trotting nine miles in 29:38, and as his sire, old Bellfomnder, and his dam, Velocity, were both remarkable trotters in England in the first part of the century, it is pretty certain that Hambletonian 10 is much more indebted to Bellfounder, the sire of his dam, than to his great grandsire, Messenger, for his marvelous power to beget trotters and producers of trotters.

Let us examine the pedigree of Green Mountain Maid, the the greatest broodmare ever foaled. She was sired by Harry Clay 45, whose dam was by Bellfounder. Green Mountain Maid, the dam of eight trotters in the 2:30 list, is a granddaughter of Bellfounder, and Hambletonian 10, the greatest progenitor of trotters, is a grandson of Bellfounder. The greatest sire of trotters is Electioneer, with 100 in the 2:30 list, including the fastest trotter in the world,Sunol, 2:08¼, and the fastest stallion, Palo Alto, 2:08¾, and the fastest two-year-old, Arion, 2:10¾, and the fastest at all ages except that of yearlings, and one of his yearlings also for a time held the record for that age.

How was Electioneer bred? Electioneer is the son of Hambletonian 10, grandson of Bellfounder, and of Green Mountain Maid, grandaughther of Bellfounder. Thus in Hambletonian, the greatest progenitor of trotters, and is the greatest dam of trotters we find twenty-five per cent. of the blood of Bellfounder. The son of this greatest progenitor and greatest broodmare is Electioneer, an inbred Bellfounder.

There are many phenomenal youngsters that have made their appearance on the track this year, but all who study the science of breeding the trotter will probably admit that the greatest of all these is Arion, two years, 2:10¾. Arion's pedigree is an interesting and useful study. His grandsire, Hambletonian 10, is the greatest progenitor of trotters; his granddam, Green Mountain Maid, is the greatest dam of trotters; his sire Electioneer, is the greatest sire of trotters, and he is an inbred Bellfounder, with twenty-five per cent. of that blood. Arion's dam, Manette, is by Nutwood, 2:18¾, the greatest living sire of trotters, and a grandson of Hambletonian 10, grandson of Bellfounder. Manette's dam, Addie, is by Hambletonian Chief, son of Hambletonian 10, grandson of Bellfounder, and Addie's dam, Manton, is by Harry Clay 45, grandson of Bellfounder. From this it is seen thas Arion gets the blood of Bellfounder through five different lines, viz., twice through his sire from Hambletonian 10 and Harry Clay 45, once through his dam's sire, Nutwood, and twice through his grandam, Addie, granddaughter of Hambletonian 10, out of a daughter of Harry Clay 45. This gives Arion twenty-nine and five-sixteenths per cent of the blood of Bellfounder—nearly one-third.

As the amount of Bellfounder blood in Arion exceeds that in many of his illustrious ancestors that by the records are the greatest of their time, and as Arion is conceded to be the greatest of his day, would it not be proper for us to frankly acknowledge the great influence of the blood of Bellfounder, and accord to him the first place of honor among the antecedents of the American trotter?—[Dudley Miller in Horse World.

Turf News From Modesto.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—As the readers of your paper have not heard from this part for some time, I now ask you for a small share of your valuable space.

The Stanislaus Stockbreeder's Association held a two days' meeting during the holidays for local horses, which had the effect of bringing out some very good ones. Jones & Dunlap, of Oakedale, entered Joshua in the half-mile dash for two-year-olds, and he proved a winner, coming in under the wire under a strong pull, six lengths ahead in 0:52. I do not remember his breeding, but he will be heard from. The race for Maidens had three entries. Antrim proved the winner, he shutting out all competitors in the first heat in 2:59½. Antrim is by Anterous, and was handled but four weeks for speed. He is the property of R. M. Wilson, of Newman. The one-fourth mile dash for yearlings had two starters—Nicotain and Dynamo. Nicotain was the winner in the very good time of 0:24½. Both yearlings are by Pickpocket, a fast horse who broke down early, but seems to be a success as a producer.

The most interesting race of the meeting proved to be the five-mile race for buggy horses. The first two heats were taken by S. Craig's Midnight, the last three by W. B. Williams' Bay Frank; time for the five miles, 16:20. Bay Frank is by Richards' Elector, and bas been kept by Mr. Williams for a driving horse, but his perfect gait and staying qualities proved him worthy of a higher position.

For the purpose of getting our fine winter track in the pink of perfection, the Directors will have the track replowed and worked over, which will make the course springy, and it will furnish to the public one of the best winter tracks in the State. Our Spring meeting will come immediately after Fresno. The directors will use every effort to make this meeting one worthy of being called a race meeting. Our city and track is located on the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, thirty miles south of Stockton. Modesto's people like good horses and appreciate a good race, and cannot refrain from putitng a few dollars in the pool box when the time comes, so ye men with good horses and a little loose change in your pockets, come and see us, and we will use you the best we know how.

Catalogues Received.

The Du Bois Farm catalogue reached our office this week. Its 94 pages are printed neatly in two colors, and the stock catalogued represents a grand collection of colts, fillies and broodmares. The Du Bois Bros., of Denver, certainly know considerable about correct blood lines for broodmares, for the matrons belong to some of the most noted broodmare families. The youngsters embraced in the list are the get of Superior, Brown, Baronstein, Hambletonian Wilkes, Wilton, Valensin, Capt. Woodson and other noted sires.

We received this week the catalogue of Palo Alto Stock Farm of fifty-six finely-bred broodmares offered for sale at Killip & Co's salesyard, this city, on Wednesday, February 24th. The catalogue is well gotten up and the stock offered is gilt-edged, so far as breeding is concerned. Many of the number are in foal to the great stallions at Palo Alto Farm, and doubtless there will be some rare bargains picked up.

Captain Thos. B. Merry ("Hidalgo"), formerly connected with the editorial department of this journal, has associated himself with J. M. Reuck, editor of the Californian, of Bakersfield, Kern county, in the publication of that live horse paper, The Fresno Turf. Captain Merry is an accomplished writer, a genial gentleman and an authority on all matters pertaining to thoroughbreds and trotters.

A great trio of trotters, Direct, 2:17, James, 2:17¾, Director, 2:18¼, trotting, 2:06 pacing, will leave California for Kentucky soon.

THE Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association have appointed a committee which will formulate programmes for their two meetings this year that will be approved by all the members and the public.

IN our next issue we will publish statistics which will be of inestimable value to all horse owners.

L. A. Richards, of Grayson, Cal, is seriously ill with an attack of la grippe at his residence.

Arion, the King, Leaves California.

In the trainload of Palo Alto youngsters that left this city last Wednesday was Arion, the world's champion two-year-old, that was sold the day previous to J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, for a sum of money that far exceeds any amount ever paid for a trotting horse. The price is said to have been $150,000. The fortunate possessor of this magnificient youngster arrived in this city last Sunday, and as negotiations regarding this sale have been pending some time, he visited Palo Alto, and was convinced that all the horsemen and turf journals had said regarding Arion were not exaggerations. As he is considered one of the best judges of horses in the United States, he immediately offered a certain sum for the colt, which was accepted, so Arion is now the property of this gentleman, who has been for years quietly picking up the choicest trotters. Like Robert Bonner, of New York, nothing but the best suits him. He owns Jack, 2:12¼, the Pilot Medium gelding that Budd Doble drove during the memorable season of 1890; he also owns the beautiful Happy Medium mare, Nancy Hanks, for which he paid something like $41,000 after she trotted in 2:09, and Arab, 2:15; besides these he has a number of other good ones in his magnificiently fitted-up stables.

He intends to have Arion developed by the best trainer he can find, and Californians can look forward with interest to this colt's performances on the turf. In years to come they will try to keep informed as to what he is doing in the stud, just as they do regarding Anteeo, that sold for $65,000; Bell Boy, for $51,000; Mascot, for $20,000 as a yearling, Alcazar for $18,500, Woodnut for $20,000, Norval for $10,000, and the many other California-raised trotters that brought $10,000 and over. The sires of these came from the East, and were sold for small sums (comparatively speaking), but thanks to the glorious climate, the feed and the superior advantages which this equine Paradise possesses their progeny leads the world in everything—prices included.

While many may feel sorry that California has lost the services of such a colt as Arion, yet there is cause for rejoicing in the fact that such gentlemen as Messrs. Forbes, Miller & Sibley, W. T. Allen and H. S. Henry are not slow to recognize the superiority of our horses, and will develop them. Their example will be followed by others, who will come to choose for themselves. The best horses that have been sold have been purchased by these gentlemen, who have made a trip to this State for that purpose, and no one can say that they are dissatisfied with any selections they made.

California will be the market for nothing but the best, and it behooves all intelligent breeders to study well the problems of breeding and developing and do all in their power to induce such men to come and find that nothing is exaggerated and that honesty prevails in all our transactions.

Is the Thoroughbred Deteriorating?

The avowed object of racing associations is the improvement in point of speed and stamina of the equine race and furnishing interesting racing contests to the public. The trotting associations are carrying out their contracts; the thoroughbred racing associations are not. "Explain yourself," says the enthusiastic lover of the galloper. "All right," we answer, "the plaintiff is ready." Twenty-five years ago the shortest distance run by thoroughbreds three years of age and over was mile heats. To day it is three-eighths of a mile, and racing at mile heats is considered almost too severe a task to set for horses of any age. A quarter of a century ago the "quarter horse" ranked so low that men of respectability sneered at him, and would not think of owning one of the beasts. With the gradual drift toward short distance racing, the "quarter horse" may yet be the popular racing idol.

"But horses are speedier nowadays," say the owners and lovers of sprinters. We don't believe it. Longfellow, it is asserted on good authority, ran the first mile in his memorable race with Harry Bassett in 1:40 flat, and tracks were not so good then as at the present. If speed is all that is desired, why not breed to "quarter horses?" Surely they had plenty of speed. Where are our families of game, iron-limbed, long-distance thoroughbreds? But a memory, we would fain believe.

In bold contrast to the thoroughbred sprinters of the present stand the many excellent families of sturdy trotters, who fight to the finish of seven and eight-heat battles of the turf, and go half as many more miles at the score generally. Which animal, then, is to be admired the most? Surely not the runner, who is asked to go a mile and a quarter and throws up his tail in token of distress before the homestretch is reached. It is no wonder, then, that trotting races are every day growing more popular and the time-honored "sport of kings" sinking lower in public estimation.

Several so-called "Derbys" in this country are but mile and a quarter races, when it should be universally known that the "Derby distance" is a mile and a half. A "Derby" was run at Los Angeles the other day at a mile and a sixteenth. At the present rate, in twenty years' time a horse with the ability to run a fast mile and a half will be considered a freak of nature, and when his racing days are over the lucky owner can exhibit him as such in a museum to vast admiring throngs.

There is a certain element that will attend any kind of a race meeting, not because they love to see a grand contest or admire game thoroughbreds, but because they desire to speculate, and think that by going to the track they can get a "straight tip." Until a move is made in the direction of lengthening the distances in races and it is shown that thoroughbreds are several degrees superior to "quarter horses," the attendance at running races will continue to drop off and trotting races will rightfully be considered by far the best sport.

The Coast Racing Situation.

Winter racing in California has been weighed by the public scale and found wanting in several respects. It is now hoped that the experiment will not be tried again until the State is far more populous and the quantity and quality of the entries of such a character that spectators can be reasonably certain of witnessing a horse race. The late Los Angeles meeting was a howling non-success financially. Not above twenty-five horses took part in the races, and of these Acclaim, John Treat, Motto and April Fool were so far superior to their fields that the result was seldom in doubt. Robbed of its speculative feature, that the meeting could not be a success was apparent at the outset.

Racing in the winter would materially injure our meetings booked for the regular season of sport, because the horses participating would scarcely be in condition to race on our tracks during the spring and summer if thus campaigned.

Owners who are not attracted by the large stakes offered at the East are getting scarcer every year, and something must be done to check the alarming exodus. Once more we say to our racing associations, form a Pacific Coast circuit, and do so without delay.

Of course the size of our cities will not permit the offer of such large stakes as are given at the East. That is a settled fact. When the cost of transportation and danger attendant upon sending strings of horses over the Rockies are taken into consideration, if we offer purses and stakes within hailing distance of those at the far East it is only fair to assume that a majority of our owners will remain at home.

What we would suggest, then, is the forming of a racing circuit, starting in at Los Angeles, and taking in Fresno, San Jose, San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and possibly Spokane—ten cities in all. Let there be five days' continuous racing at Los Angeles, commencing about the first of March, the same number of days at Fresno and San Jose, twelve days at San Francisco, six at Oakland, five days at the Capital City, six at Portland and Tacoma, five at Seattle and Spokane, then have racing again in the latter part of July until the last of August (before the rains set in in Washington and Oregon), and wind up the season in the fall with meetings at Sacramento, Oakland San Jose San Francisco, Fresno and Los Angeles—or any intervening points where good purses are offered.

Make the value of the purses $500, with a guaranteed value to stakes of not less than $1,000 in any case, with at least two stakes at a meeting worth $2,500 to the winner, cut down the number of sprint races, and let us have some good, old-fashioned long-distance racing. Have paid judges who will administer justice to friend and foe alike—men who have no ties in the section, and consequently no axes to grind. Don't say, "It can't be done," for it can. If a town like Independence, Iowa, with only 4,000 inhabitants, can give out $100,000 for a seven-day trotting meeting and clear considerable money, surely our associations can adopt their plan in regard to paid judges and give out $15,000 for a six-day running meeting. But there will have to be more interest awakened in the public regarding the stakes, and the question of strict paid judges that they clamor for must be agreed upon, or racing will soon be dead on this coast. If the stakes are "raised" we will get enough good horses to stay here to make racing interesting, and when you get large fields of high-class animals to contend for the stakes, crowds will come to see the sport—at least it has always been so in the past.

Therefore, weigh well these matters, members of Coast racing organizations, and let not the people on the other side of the continent have any right in the future to say, as they are saying now—that all the good horses are going East, leaving us but the riff-raff and worn out skates, and that we cannot support a good racing organization. Let us show that we have some pride as well as enterprise, and that we will not let our horses leave their native heaths without a game struggle.

Conformation.

There may some day be a breed of horses that will come up to the connoisseur's ideal, but that period is without doubt far-distant. There are so many points about a horse that are indicated by supposed experts as showing where the speed comes from, and then the theories are so rudely exploded when another "phenom," an exact opposite in appearance, comes out and smashes a record, that the correct conforma ion of a world beater is indeed hard to describe. Even among thoroughbreds, whose pedigrees can be traced for more than 150 years, there is great dissimilarity. Among this class, however, the world-beaters have uniformly been horses that were long-bodied. Some have been leggy like The Bard, Esquirer, Raceland, Maori, Eon and Eurus, some squatty and with heavy barrels, like Volante, Prince Royal, Bob Miles and Bramble, while others were what would be termed trim-built racing crafts, to which type Hindoo, Luke Blackburn, Racine, Freeland, Miss Woodford, John Davis, Pearl Jennings and Troubadour belonged. Then there is the giant type, in wh ch we clase Longfellow, Lucky B., Eole, Hidalgo, Thoa, Bancroft, Leonatus, El Rio Rey and Kingston. A few under-sized thoroughbred horses have been great, in which ca'egory we might mention Boo'jack, Brambaletta, Firenzi, Aristides, Badge and Lizzie S. However, Firenzi and Aristides stood over considerable ground, and a look at the cracks of the past on the running turf will show that over ninety per cent of them were extremely long-bodied, whether only 15 hands or full 16.2 in height. If this great length be the correct thing in runners, why should it not be proper in the trotter? The horses we have mentioned above were nearly all good over "a distance of ground," and were stayers of great renown with very few exceptions. The get of Great Tom, a magnificent individual standing 16-2, are generally both leggy and short, and few, if any were ever noted as good over a mile or in a heat race. The Bonnie Scotlands were of the long and rather low order for the most part, though Bancroft was a tall horse weighing in racing trim 1,250 pounds, They had wonderfully heavy quarters and strong legs, and in the mud were never equalled by any class of horses in America, if indeed they were on dry tracks. The Electioneers, among the trotters, resemble the Bonnie Scotlands as much as any family we ever saw. They are "deceivin' cusses," being generally well-rounded, with long and heavy bodies and height that is calculated to deceive. There are several tall fellows amongst them, however, like Anteeo, Electricity, Antevolo and Palo Alto, but these had the thoroughbred cross mighty close up. Arion, who is 15 1 in height, would fool nine men out of every ten, for, on taking a look at the young king they would guess him to be about 14 3. Advertiser is a very deceiving horse also. The Directors are a well-rounded, powerful lot as a class, and are not tall. The Anteeos and Antevolos are generally big, as are the Piedmonts. As to the height behind and shape of the rump—sloping or gradually rounded—examples can be brought of great performers with both kinds. For beauty we should prefer the rounded instead of the sloping rump. Allerton, Dexter, Goldsmith Maid, Silas Skinner, and many other speedy trotters had the sloping rump, and were also higher in front than at the coupling. It is claimed that Red Wilkes' progeny are noted for their sloping rumps, while the Nutwoods, Electioneers and Wilkes generally have the gently-rounded, and are much higher behind than at the coupling. It is admitted that race horses must be deep through the heart. That point is settled. If they are going to be campaigners with the ability to stay through a long-drawn-out and hard-fought trotting contest, they must have a strong body, set on legs that are not greyhoundish by any manner of means; that is, if you want a strong campaigner you do not want the greyhound conformation. In trotters and pacers probably more small ones have been real top-notchers than those of the giant type. Flora Temple, the first trotter to beat 2:20, was but 14 3 in height; Dexter was 15 1; Small Hopes, 14 hands; Jay-Eye-See, 15 hands; Direct, 15.1; Nancy Hanks, 15 1; Goldsmith Maid, about 15 hands; George Wilkes, 15 hands; Ed Annan, 14 hands; Hopeful, about 14.2. Taking all these things into consideration, it looks to us as if the horse does not trot with his back, withers or rump, but that the strength of the limbs and their development are of greater import, coupled with a long body, strong shoulders, heavy stifles, deep chest and powerful lungs. More attention should be given to leg conformation than that of the back, since the trotter is not to be ridden, but is supposed to pull a light sulky with a medium-sized man in the seat. If we want to get giant trotters with stylish gait we can do it by mating thoroughbred mares with trotting-bred stallions, for almost invariably is the result of this union a big fellow with plenty of bone and muscle. Bonnie Wilmore, 16 1; Palo Alto, 16 1; Big Jim, 16 3, and many more instances of this kind might be cited: in fact, so fine are breeders getting the subject of "nicking" down that they can build almost any style of horse desired for the market. But when it comes to uniform speed, that is another problem which has not yet been solved, though it seems that the successful campaigner is not of the nervous, "leggy" and wasp-bodied order, but rather the level headed, well rounded, big-quartered, heavy-loined, strong-limbed kind and that breeders will discover other happy "nicks" besides the goodly Electioneer-Nutwood ere many moons have waxed and waned is to be expected. The leggy horse with the light body does not last long at either the trotting or running game, and so we are in favor of the Arion, the Director and Sable Wilkes type for race horses that will remain in the family and win money for you many seasons as against the tall horse with a great turn of speed and no legs or body to allow him to sustain the flight to the end of a hard race. Try to give your youngsters the low, skimming, close to the ground, folding gait that we all admire so much in Arion, and if you have a tall, long-legged colt or filly, go very light with it and never put it into a race until the animal's legs look staunch and capable of holding up their end of the institution. An overgrown youngster should never be trained for a bruising contest until he is at least three years old, and if breeders, owners and trainers studied the legs first, body and head next, and back and rump last they would have more race horses and fewer cripples

Approach of the Breeding Season.

Owners of stallions are beginning to awaken from their lethargy, and are bringing in their advertisements on which they depend to extol the merits of their horses and by which they may reach the owners of broodmares. Our journal will have its columns filled with the name, pedigree, description and location of all the leading horses in this State, and breeders can then decide what to select. The great benefits that have resulted from the commingling of the blood of the leading families during the past year will be a guide that will not lead anyone out of the way. The union of the Electioneer, Nutwood, Wilkes, Moor, Almont, Director, McGregor, Steinway, Sidney and Flaxtail families has produced many great trotters—aye, wonderful trotters,—and the more names of these sires that appear in the pedigree of the forthcoming generations of the equine family the better. The individuality of each and every stallion that stands for public service must be carefully scanned, and if the animal shows any inherited weaknesses he should be set aside. The trotter has made prodigious strides in improvement during the past five years, and conformation, soundness, color and disposition are important factors in summing up a horse's qualifications. You cannot get figs from thistles, neither can you hope to get your ideal of a trotter by breeding to a deformed and vicious, rattle-headed stallion. No matter what your choice mare may be, the chances are that in four out of five cases the progeny will be unsalable if you breed to such a horse.

Every horseman has his own ideas of breeding, and prefers to study for himself. This independence of thought, when founded on personal investigation and study, has done more than all the old mouldy assertions of the owner of the cross-roads stallion who has had to get under the fence and dodge the onward march of progressiveness. This is an enlightened age. Every successful horse owner takes a delight in perusing his turf journal and learning of the whereabouts of some of the relations of his favorite animal. The man who does not is almost in the same position as the owner of a mule farm, for whatever he raises is stamped with the brand that some wit applied to them, which was: "They had neither pride of ancestry nor hope of posterity."

Trotting Horse Breeders Association.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association was held in their rooms last Monday. There were present Messrs. Simpson, Page, Tompkins, Hatch and White. President Simpson in the chair.

"SAN FRANCISCO, January 4, 1892.

JAMES P. KERR, ESQ.,
Secretary Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association,
313 Bush Street, City.

DEAR SIR:—I have written to Mr. Morse, Secretary N. T. A., that I intend to re-open the case in regard to the Aspirant Stakes for the year 1891, and hereby protest against your issuing any checks or paying out any money from those stakes. I also have notified your Treasurer, Mr. N. T. Smith. Yours respectfully,

PALO ALTO STOCK FARM,
ARIEL LATHROP, Atty."

It will be remembered that the Palo Alto Stock Farm was the only one to make last payments in these stakes, and that they failed to appear to walkover for same, and it was declared from the judges' stand that the stakes were forfeited to the Association. This decision was protested by Palo Alto and the matter submitted to the Board of Appeals of the N. T. A., where it was decided: That the right to win was forfeited by all the parties by failure to comply with the conditions and suggested that the Association refund the money to the parties who paid it.

The Board of Directors, in acting on Mr. Lathrop's communication, ordered that the money should not be paid out before the case had either been rejected or had a re-hearing by the Board of Appeals of the N. T. A.

After auditing bills amounting to $84.30, the Association took up the matter of electing a Secretary for the current year. Mr. Jas. P. Kerr and Mr. C. E. Trevathan were nominated. Out of the five ballots cast Mr. Kerr received four, and was declared elected at the same salary as paid last year. The Secretary to supply the Association with the present rooms.

Messrs. Gilbert Tompkins, J. H. White and Fred. W. Loeber were appointed a committee to prepare and recommend a programme for the Colt Stakes and regular purses to be given by the Association this year, and requested to report at a meeting of the Board of Directors to be held February 1st.

The Board decided to make the conditions of the Stanford Stakes closing March 1st next to conform with the other stakes given by this Association in respect to membership. The Board also decided to hold two racing meetings this year.

Some Reminiscences.

While speaking of Frank Covey (son of the late Harris Covey) at the Palace Hotel the other evening, a number of influential horsemen told stories of his father's great love for a horse and his remarkably correct judgment in selecting the best. No one ever heard of him choosing a poor one. While in Kentucky he became very much interested in Alma Mater (now at the Hobart Farm) and her two sons, Alcantara and Alcyone, and advised Samuel Gamble to take Alcantara in preference to Steinway, but that gentleman was acting under orders and could not make any change. Mr. Covey then telegraphed to the Governor about the three and spoke of the greatness of the mare as an individual and the wisdom of crossing the Electioneer fillies with Alcantara and Alcyone, and vice versa, but the Governor had his theory about crossing the thoroughbreds with Electioneer in his mind's eye, and therefore Mr. Covey did not get permission to purchase these great individuals. He saw Dame Winnie and liked her; she was then in foal to Smuggler, and W. H. Wilson, of Cynthiana, said that she ought to produce trotters as soon as Mr. Covey called his attention to her remarkable conformation. When she was brought to Palo Alto the Governor was more than pleased with her; that was in 1878; in 1879 she dropped a filly that died. She was then stinted to a thoroughbred (by mistake) and proved barren; in 1881 she produced Big Jim, 2:23½, to the cover of General Benton; the next year, 1882, Palo Alto, the King, was foaled. In 1883, the bay mare Gertrude Russell, 2:23½, came, and the next year Dame Winnie was bred to Shannon, by Monday, and produced Diavolo, but he was sold and last heard of in Montana. She was thereafter bred to Electioneer and produced Winna O., Paola, Pacolet, and last year another youngster came, a handsome bay colt. Time has proven that Frank Covey's father was not wrong in his ideas, either of choosing stallions or broodmares. His sons, Frank and George, seem to have rightfully inherited their excellent judgment in all matters pertaining to horses.

***

When Leland Stanford was showing the two stallions, Mohawk Chief and Electioneer, to Harris Covey the day they arrived at Palo Alto, he asked the latter which of the two he preferred. Mr. Covey replied: "That is a hard question to decide as Mohawk Chief is in splendid condition and is remarkably handsome, while Electioneer is hog-fat; let me take him for a while and get some of the surplus flesh off and I will be better able to judge. I like his blood lines better than I do Mohawk Chief's, and the more I see of him the better I like him." The Governor allowed Mr. Covey to take him, and after that reinsman got him in condition he drove him a mile in 2:23 on the track at Palo Alto. Electioneer's forward legs were always "dickey" from the handling he received prior to being sold by Mr. Bachman; nevertheless, he moved gamely and often trotted quarters at a 2:20 clip. His hind action was perfect, and no easier horse to drive was ever hitched. Mr. Covey weighed 210 pounds the day he drove Electioneer so fast.

***

Everyone who witnessed the first yearling record-breaking meeting at the Bay District track, in 1881, will remember how well Frank Covey drove the nice-moving black mare alongside of the youngsters and seemed to have perfect control over her the entire route. That mare was Gilberta, dam of the famous Richards' Elector that stands in the front rank as a sire. She could trot very well, but, like Manette, dam of Arion, she enjoyed pulling a sulky around a track, and felt that she must keep just so far behind the youngsters to encourage them. She never seemed to tire, and would come out repeatedly during the day as fresh as when she started.

THE FARM.

Night in the Country.

Kate A. Carrington.

Oh, bird that lingers in the hush
  Of twilight as it falleth,
Return ye now unto your nest:
  List how your sweet mate calleth!
Oh, lowing cows, haste to your fold,
  Or you will be belated—
Even now the milkmaid loudly calls,
  Too long for you she has waited.

From yonder church the chiming bells
  Ring from the Angelus sweet,
And pious souls, with bended heads,
  The evening prayer repeat.
The locusts, with discordant notes,
  A merry concert hold,
As though the coming on of night
  Made their small hearts more bold.

The jasmine vine that shades the porch,
  Breaks out in sweetest scent,
And wafting from the lily bed,
  Are with its odors blent;
The low of kine and notes of birds
  Grow fainter and more faint,
Even the tireless katydids
  Have hushed their loud complaint.

The glimmering light begins to shine
  From many a window pane,
And mothers rock their babes and sing
  A sweet good-night refrain;
To all there comes a country peace,
  The quiet of a night,
That is removed from out the world,
  From out the city's sight.

Poultry Paragraphs.

Lime should be kept by chickens at all times.

Hens, in order to lay, must have milk or meat quite regularly.

The water vessels must be kept clean, or else disease will infect the chickens.

System must be adopted in caring for fowls, or a failure will be the result.

Hogs and chicks were not made to run together: Chinamen and hogs do better.

Eggs remaining out doors over chilly nights become chilled and will not hatch.

If the poultry houses are whitewashed two or three times during the year, lice will not trouble much.

Eggs for hatching should be gathered every evening, and put in a room that is not extremely warm nor extremely cold.

Following is a good remedy for roup: Sugar of lead, teaspoonful; vinegar, two teaspoonful; blue vitrol, one-half spoonful; carbolic acid, ten drops. Mix and apply externally two or three times a day to parts affected. Two or three applications are usually sufficient.

A correspondent to N. Y. Tribune has the following on selling eggs by the pound: "When eggs are sold by the pound, as they must be by and by, we shall all be surprised to learn that feed has more to do with size and weight of eggs than has breed. My hens, when at large, lay a far bigger egg in moist weather, when worms are plenty, than during dry times when the angler bait has to bore deep for moisture. I believe meat is the poulterer's best food material, especially when the birds do their own chopping."

We sometimes see an advertisement or an article of some breeder who will claim that some one breed is the best, but such a claim for any breed is always a sure proof of untrustworthiness. It is true that Plymouth Rocks are one of the best table fowls; but other breeds, which are not nearly his equal in flesh, will discount him in eggs. It is true that a Leghorn will lay many more eggs than a Brahma, Cochin or a Plymouth Rock, but how would the Leghorn compare with a fowl of one of those breeds for table use? But as a general purpose fowl some one of the medium breeds would no doubt fill the bill much better than one of the small ones or one of the very large ones.—Washington Farmer.

Sheep Items.

Sheep have two teeth in the centre of the jaw at one year and add two each year until five years old, when they have a "full mouth." After that time the age cannot be told by the teeth.

The wool and manure pay for the keep of the sheep; but then, if a man doesn't know how to utilize the manure, as hundreds of thousands do not, it is to them valueless. One half the men who keep sheep do not know their best services and uses.

Mr. Stanley, the Australian Government veterinarian, says that although some benefit may accrue from the use of various drenches to destroy worms in sheep, still the surest method of prevention is breeding from mature parents, liberal feeding and never starving the sheep, with a free use of salt with a little sulphate of iron.

A New York correspondent of the American Sheep Breeder says: "There is no better way to market clover hay than to feed it to sheep. Sheep are the best stock to put in the orchards, but I would not put them in when the trees are too small. Our markets are in continual demand for mutton, and are never thoroughly supplied. Lambs can be marketed in your local market, or by shipment to the city. I would keep the Merino ewe, but for lambs for mutton would certainly use a thoroughbred, coarse-wool sheep for the sire. A good grain ration for sheep and lambs is brewers' grain up to lambing time. Do not leave sheep out in the fall too late. Begin the first of January to feed a small amount of grain. Lambs should be watched closely when they are dropped. Separate the sheep from the flock when they are a day old, as the lambs sometimes get confused at that time. In order to raise early lambs it is necessary to have warm quarters, proper attention and good food. The lambs should have a small apartment where a trough is kept supplied with bran, corn meal and linseed meal. They may, by proper care, be sold at eight weeks old with more profit than if kept later. I think the Dorset is the coming sheep for raising winter lambs. Lambs can be bought in the fall cheap, that are six or eight months old, and be fed very profitably. Put them in a pen with not over fifty in a flock: give them clean water. Never overfeed them. Give them what clover hay they will eat clean. I feed a bushel of corn for grain in the morning, two bushels of turnips cut and covered with two pints of bran and one of cottonseed oil at noon. I can make a gain in both weight and price per pound. I would shear sheep unwashed in March, but of course they must be afterward kept in warm quarters. Persian insect powder will kill ticks if sifted thoroughly in the wool.

Spare Ribs.

Clover hay run through a feed cutter and then scalded makes a good winter feed for the hogs.

While there may be no infallible cure for cholera, much can be done in the way of preventing it.

Sour swill is not a healthy food to give at any time, and especially with the sow and young pigs.

It costs something more to get started with the best, but the results are more profitable in the end.

When hogs are confined in close quarters and are fed exclusively on corn, the risks of disease are increased.

When young pigs are beginning to eat, and for a short time after weaning, oats soaked in milk makes a good feed.

The hog likes to wallow in hot weather, but that is not the slightest indication that the hog is naturally a filthy animal.

Nothing contributes more to the health and thrift of fattening hogs than good dry bedding. It is a great mistake to leave either fattening or stock hogs to the mercy of the elements and wet bedding. There is a very little labor or expense in providing dry refuse hay, straw, or leaves for swine shelter.

The first two months of a pig's life will decide its profitableness for any purpose. If it is kept growing during that time, with plenty of exercise to prevent too much fat, it is then all ready to go independent of the dam, and can be pushed along with proper food supplies to certain profit. But an undersized, stunted pig, at two months, never pays for its keeping.

Save the Feathers.

If the feathers from all sources on the farm should be carefully cared for and sold they would amount to a neat little sum in the course of a year. While geese and duck feathers are preferable, yet there is a demand for chicken feathers, when properly assorted. In doing this the shorter and softer feathers should be put by themselves and cured either in the sun and air or by artificial heat. It is very necessary to cure the green feathers in order to keep them from spoiling at the quills and yielding a bad odor that might ruin the whole lot.

We priced some pillows to-day in a furnishing house and were considerably set back at the price asked for them. Three dollars for a couple of pillows that weighed only four pounds and the feathers were only second-class at that. The best quality of fresh home-grown, put up in factory at Nashville, were quoted much higher. The first quotation was on pillows made in Chicago and simply guaranteed to emit no unpleasant odor. The feathers in them felt bunchy and harsh. Prime geese feathers bring fifty to seventy cents a pound. White or Pekin duck feathers sell nearly as high as geese feathers.

It strikes us that in a State as well watered as the State of California, where water fowl may have the advantages of the very best and most natural surroundings, it would pay well to raise ducks and geese for their feathers and meat. The latter can certainly be sold at cost of production, which would leave the feathers produced as clear profit.

A prominent Dubuque physician was seen buying a barrel of onions, and being guyed about his purchase, said: "I always have boiled onions for dinner for the benefit of the children. I like onions too. They are the best medicine I know of for preventing colds. Feed onions raw, boiled or baked to children three or four times a week, and they'll grow up healthy and strong. No worms, no scarlatina, no diphtheria where children eat plenty of onions."

A growing hog will, if of good breed, increase fully one pound in weight every day of its life. If it does this it is pretty sure to leave a profit over cost of feeding, aside from its addition to the manure pile. If it does not, dispose of it in some way, and get pigs that will do this. There are several breeds that can be fed with profit, and the grades of these for feeding are as good as the pure blood.

The Dutch Belted cattle, which are now becoming very popular in Pennsylvania and other Eastern States, are similar to the well-known black and white Holstein Friesians. They are not quite so large, however, averaging about 1,000 pounds, while the Holstein Freisians will go near 1,400.

E. W. Stewart, being asked the proper milk diet for a medium-sized Holstein cow giving 60 pounds of milk per day, replied: 16 pounds of cut hay, 4 pounds corn meal, 6 pounds of wheat bran, 4 pounds gluted meal and 2 pounds N. P. linseed meal.

Probably the cheapest method of manufacturing good beef cattle that is now pursued in this country is that of feeding upon alfalfa. A good alfalfa ranch in this State is better than a gold mine. This grass should be generally introduced and cultivated.

Extra Uterine Pregnancy.

San Francisco, January 10, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman: —As the foaling season is at hand, the following may prove interesting to those who have not had the opportunity of meeting with a similar case. The subject was the well-known trotting mare Sister, belonging to Wm. Corbitt, Esq., of San Mateo.

I received a telephone message on Friday morning, December 25, 1891, to come to the farm on the first train. I was given to understand she was foaling a little before the usual time, and was in great difficulty, and to bring instruments suitable for difficult parturition.

On my arrival at the farm I found her in a box stall, laid on her off side. She died as I was on my way from our office to the farm. From a casual observation, and from symptoms presented and the history of the case, I at once suspected abdominal pregnation; the abdomen was very much distended and swollen inferiorly. It was supposed by those in attendance that she was carrying twins. As I had only a limited time before the next train left, I made a hurried post mortem to verify my opinion, and for the satisfaction of the owner. On making an incision through the inferior abdominal muscles, the fœtal membranes were at once presented; as the cavity was laid open the fœtus presented itself immediately through the opening, apparently free from any attachments, excepting the umbilical cord, which was extending from the left fallopian tube.

Site of Implantation.—When the ovary takes its regular course and reaches the uterine cavity, it finds the soil prepared for it from which it may obtain the elements indispensable to its development. The modifications in the mucous membrane of the uterus produced during menstruation, the swelling, the vascularization, are the beginnings of the work to be continued by conception, and the ovum, on its arrival in the uterus, finds its conditions most favorable for development. Conditions are very different when the ovum ingrafts itself in some other portion of material organism. Nature must supply at once the elements necessary for the development in the usual site.

The ovum must find not only the site, but the conditions necessary for its development, conditions which must approach as far as possible the normal. Therefore, as soon as the ovum ingrafts itself a more thorough vascular system developes at the site. The peritoneum becomes vascular, large veins appear in the tissue, and the arteries in the neighborhood double in size, and thus is formed a species of erectile tissue, where the placenta are implanted; whatever the site, the modifications are the same.

Course of Ovum After its Development.—After its escape from the ovary and impregnation by the spermatozoid of the male, a peculiar arrangement exists in the presence of the fringed border of the fallopian tube, which grasps the ovum and permits it to be conveyed in the canal on its way to the uterus. From certain causes which are not yet clearly understood, it sometimes chances that the ovum, instead of taking its normal course, either remains in the ovary, is arrested in its progress through the tube, or, escaping the fimbriated extremity of the latter, falls into the peritoneal cavity, or slides between the folds of the peritoneum constituting the broad ligament, or between the mucous and serous membranes of the uterus; in all of which situations Nature makes an effort to afford space and nutrition for the embryo, and thus supply the place of the uterus. This effort, however, as might be supposed, is only partially successful, and after attaining a more or less imperfect development, the fœtus perishes from lack of nourishment, and fatal results to the parent follow, as a rule.

The Holly Sale.

The advertised sale of trotters and thoroughbreds belonging to B. C. Holly took place at his well-known farm near Flosden, on the Napa road, last Thursday. The day was perfect, therefore a large number of horsemen were in attendance. The prices realized for the best offerings were fair, but many very promising youngsters were sold remarkably low. The thoroughbreds, however, sold well and helped to swell the day's average. Sam Bowley, the old-time auctioneer, officiated, and demonstrated his ability to hold the crowd's attention and catch the eye of every bidder. The following were the animals sold, the buyers and the amounts received:

Senator Fair has purchased through Dr. W. H. Carpenter, from Theodore Skillman, of Petaluma, a fine Suffolk Punch stallion, three years old, imported from England by the Skillman Brothers, paying $2,000 for him. It is the intention of the Senator to breed the stallion to some of the Biehler mares. This should result in the production of a fine quality of draft and cart horses.

FIXTURES FOR THE FUTURE.

Jan. 28th—Acme Athletic Club, Ladies' Night exhibition in the club rooms, Oakland, Cal.

Feb. 22nd.—Olympic Club, spring out-door meeting at the club grounds.

May 30th.—Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, second annual out-door championship meeting at the O. A. C. grounds.

SUMMARY.

The annual wrestling championships began in the gymnasium of the Olympic Club on Thursday evening last, and a report of the results will be given next week. The athletes are rather quiet in their movements just now, but very shortly the present smooth condition of the Olympic Club cinder path will be disturbed by the spikes of the runners and walkers who will take part in the handicap games on Washington's Birthday. The wheelmen are unusually active for this time of year, and the coming season will, no doubt, be a very busy one.

The Amateur Athletes, Wheelmen, Oarsmen, &c.

Last Monday evening the Alameda Bicycle and Athletic Club elected the following officers to serve for the ensuing year: President, J. F. Ives; vice-president, Will H. Foster; secretary, H. R. Williams, Jr.; treasurer, Tom Vincent; captain, Frank Howlett; first lieutenant, Clyde Conkey; second lieutenant, Frank Boyle; bugler, F. C. White; board of directors, J. F. Ives, G. H. Mastick, L. Van Orden, Charles Uzney, F. G. White, Will H. Foster, H. R. Williams, Will H. Hebard and E. K. Taylor.

Last Sunday a meeting of the Pacific Rowing Association was held in the boat house of the South End Rowing Club at Long Bridge. The following officers were elected: J. J. McCarthy, South Ends, president; W. C. Epsey, Pioneers, first vice-president; L. Schroeder, Alameda R. C., second vice-president; M. J. Ballard, Pioneers, secretary; A. P. Rothkoff, Dolphins, treasurer; J. Conlon, South Ends, sergeant-at-arms. Resolutions over the death of the late vice-president of the association, Dr. M. P. Dennis, were passed and ordered sent to the Alameda Boat Club, of which deceased was a member. It was decided that the next amateur barge race for the trophy offered by the Association shall be rowed on the last Sunday in the present month.

The members of the Gentlemen's Club held a very successful cross country run from Sausalito to Point Bonita last Sunday. About a dozen athletes took part in the trip.

The Acme Athletic Club, of Oakland, will hold a Ladies' Night exhibition in their club rooms on the evening of January 28th, when the medals won at the tournament of the club on last Thanksgiving Day will be distributed to the winners. All the successful athletes and wheelmen are requested to be present.

Champion Wheelman B. C. Lund, of the Acme Club, has challenged W. R. Lippset, of San Jose, to race him another three miles for a valuable diamond medal. Lippset defeated the Acme man at the Thanksgiving Day tournament, in the three-mile State championship race, but the latter is not satisfied at the result of the contest and thinks that he can redeem his lost laurels if given another show. The match will be watched with much interest by the wheelmen.

Robert McArthur, O. A. C., has been appointed a delegate to the P. A. of the A. A. U., vice V. Stowe, resigned.

The wrestling tournament to decide the championships of the Pacific Coast in the different weights bagan in the rooms of the O. A. C. last Thursday evening, and a full report will be given in our next issue.

Thirty boys have joined the juvenile annex of the Acme Athletic Club. Professor Robert Leande has charge of the class, which promises to be a very large one before long. An effort is being made by the club to secure the services of Mr. De Witt Van Court as boxing instructor; At present Mr. Van Court is giving all his time to the O. A. C. members, but as soon as Professor Walter Watson relieves him he will have more time at his disposal, and the Acme members hope to be able to engage him to teach a couple of evenings a week.

The recent rain did no further damage than to lay the dust on the interior roads, and the cyclers are happy, because they are able to take long rides in the middle of winter.

It was exceedingly cold last Sunday, but still several of the Bay City wheelmen and Oriental Bicycle Club members rode out to the Ocean Beach through the Park.

The championship boxing tournament has been declared off for the present. Some of the boxers made a kick over the prizes and refused to enter the tournament unless they were offered more valuable ones. The directors of the Olympic Club will probably try to hold the tournament later on, and it is to be hoped that the amateurs will reconsider their decision and be more willing to box for glory and the love of the art than for value received,

The O. A. C. received its members on New Year's Day in the club rooms, and a very enjoyable time was had. Eggnog was served in the parlor, and several of the athletes gave fine exhibitions in the gymnasium. It is said that several of the boys broke records during the day. Cooley, Foster, Yates, Casady and McArthur are reported to be among the record breakers. While the jumping bar was at six feet six, Foster cleared it without an effort. McArthur ran a mile under four minutes. Yates lowered the potato racing record by a spud and a half, and Cooley walked around the railing of the gallery on his hands in forty seconds. Peter McIntyre now advises the boys to rub down with eggnog instead of alcohol.

Skating is becoming more popular every day, and the attendance at the Mechanics' Pavilion skating rink is constantly increasing. During the cold weather skating is a very fine exercise, and when practiced moderately it improves the general health.

Every evening the managers of the rink offer some new attractions, and it is worth while paying an occasional visit to the Mechanics' Pavilion.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. A. H., Santa Barbara.—1. If Blind Messenger (of California) was a mare or a horse, and if registered as standard. 2. The pedigree of Hood's Lawyer and Harry Bluff, and are they registered among the thoroughbreds? I understand Hood's Lawyer is an imported thoroughbred and that they are both in the stud book. At the same time I have heard that the pedigree of Hood's Lawyer is by Old Dick (Messenger), and from a Hambletonian mare, though I think this must be wrong. Answer.—1. Blind Messenger is not registered, and we can not tell at this writing whether it was a mare or horse; however, presume it was a horse. 2. Imported The Lawyer, foaled 1852, was by Flatcatcher, dam Royalty, by Bay Middleton; second dam Hoyden, by Tomboy; third dam Rochana, by Velocipede, etc. There are two Harry Bluffs to be found in Bruce's stud book. The first was a black horse, by foaled 1838, bred and owned by Willie Taylor, of Tennessee; sired by imp. Autocrat, dam by Packenham. The other Harry Bluff was a chestnut horse, foaled 1831, owned by Ichabod Grammer, of Ohio, sired by Boxer (son of imp. Expedition), dam by American Eclipse, second dam by imp. Messenger, third dam said to be thoroughbred, breeding not traced.

O. D., Selma.—1. Please publish in your valuable paper the pedigree of Dr. Lindsey, Jr. (thoroughbred). 2. Did he win a colt race in Salem, Oregon, at the fall meeting of 1883? If so, please state the distance, time and the colts defeated in that race. Answer—1. By Dr. Lindsey, dam Rose Mansfield II., by Rivoli; second dam, Estelle, by Star Davis; third dam, Victoire, by imp. Margrave; fourth dam, Argentile, by Old Bertrand. Dr. Lindsey was by Lexington, dam Kittie Clark, by Glencoe, and was therefore full brother to La Henderson (dam of Ferida), and Maiden (dam of Parole, Pawnee and Powhattan). 2. Dr. Lindsey, Jr., at Salem, Or., on September 18, 1883, when two years old, won a $300 purse, distance five furlongs, beating Big Klickitat, another two-year-old, easily. The time was 1:07½.

J. F. Stockton—1. Will you be kind enough to inform me the produce of Geo. M. Patchen, with records? Is he sire of the dams of any in the list? 2. I should also like to ask the same questions about General McClellan 143 and Blood's Blackhawk. I notice you publish that there is a full brother to Frank M., and the only brother to Frank M. is owned by Mr. Worthing in this city. Answer—Supposing you mean George M. Patchen Jr. 31 (California Patchen), we answer accordingly. He sired ten in the 2:30 list, all trotters, and six dams who have produced eight trotters. 2. Gen. McClellan 143 did not sire any in the list or the dams of any 2:30 performers. Blood's Blackhawk did not sire any in the 2:30 list, but did have three daughters who were dams of three 2:30 performers.

F. H. J., Sacramento.—Please give breeding and record, if any of mare named Sweetmeat, trotter. I believe she was owned by Mr. McLaughlin at time of his death. Answer.—We find but one Sweetmeat, and her breeding is not given. She had a record of 2:36½, made at New Dorp, Staten Island, October 17, 1874. Whether this is the one you refer to we cannot say.

E. I. Made to I want your authority on a race. The race was a free for all mile dash, purse $100. The conditions of the race were that it was to be run under the Blood Horse rules. I entered two horses and two more were entered, and they did not scratch the night previous to the race. I scratched one, and that left three to start, and when it came time to start I was ready; the judges said it would not go. They had no excuse for not starting, only that I would not agree to divide the purse, and I have a witness to that effect. I want to know if I have not a right to the purse. They also kept my dead entry. Answer.—We can find nothing in the rules justifying the judges, but we will not decide against them until you send the exact conditions of this particular race. There may have been something in the conditions making the the position of the judges correct.

Inquirer, Woodland, Cal.—Please state whether Napa Rattler and Werner's Rattler are two horses or one and the same animal? Answer. —The stallions Napa Rattler and Werner's Rattler are one and the same. Rattler 262 (Werner's) is registered in Volume 4 of Wallace's Trotting Register, as sired by Biggart's Rattler, son of Sir Henry; dam by Mars; grand dam by Defiance; bred in Washington County, N. Y.; brought to California in 1858, died in 1865, record 2:35. Sire of Mary Davis 2:25¼, Plumas 1699—sire of Ashley 2:25½, Wallace G. 2:23½, and of the dam of Alexander Button 1097, the sire of Rosa Mark 2:20¾, Belle Button 2:19¾, Tom Ryder 2:18¾, Yolo Maid 2:12, Laura Z. 2:24½ and General Logan 2:23¾.

J. M., Modesto—1. Please state the number of colts Abbotsford has in the 2:30 list; give names and records of them. 2. Is Waterford by Abbotsford, what is his record, and how many races did he win in 1891? Can you give breeding of a mare called Lady Softley that was owned by Mr. Whipple at San Mateo? He brought her from Tennessee. Answer—1. Abbotsford sired seven in the 2:30 list—Conde, 2:20; Lucy Abbott, 2:25¼; Sunrise, 2:25½; Waterford, 2:27; Nutford (pacer), 2:28; Free Coinage, 2:27¼; Abbotsford Jr., 2:28¾. 2. Waterford is by Abbotsford. Find two races that he won in 1891, but this may not be all. 3. We find no trace of Lady Softley.

J. A. C., Oakland.—1. Will you please tell me what year Belmont (Williamson's) died? 2. What horse Jenkins and Shanway (and what year) imported or brought from the East into Santa Clara in the early days? Was it Hercules or Nena Sahib. 3. What year did Argyle come here? Answer.—1. Williamson's Belmont died in 1865. 2. It was probably imp. Hercules, because Nena Sahib was brought here in 1862 by John Butterly. Hercules was brought here in 1863. 3. We cannot answer this at present; that is if you mean the old Argyle who figures in a number of pedigrees of horses in the southern part of the State.

Subscriber, San Francisco.—Is Flaherty's Fearnaught standard? He sired Dick Flaherty, 2:30 at Portland. Can you give any information regarding the former? He was bought in Boston as a yearling, and brought to California and called Baker's Fearnaught. Pedigree given: sire Old Fearnaught, 2:23¼, dam Haidee, by Old Columbus. Answer—We can find no trace of his registration. Mr. Flaherty of this city owned him and drove him in 2:20 at the Bay District track, but not in a race.

Answers for this department MUST be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

E. R., Los Angeles.—What was the record of the trotting horse Senator as a two-year-old, and who drove him in it? Answer.—We find no to race of any two-year-old record made by Senator.

"HOW'S YOUR LIVER?"

When the Liver is Torpid the Bowels are Sluggish and Constipated, and the Food lies in the Stomach decomposing poisoning the Blood.

Frequent headache ensues, and a feeling of lassitude and despondency indicates how the whole system is deranged. No agency on earth has restored as many people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy liver as

"As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I always use Simmons Liver Regulator, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced. It seems to be a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels."—W. J. McELROY, Macon, Ga.

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16½, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander 190; second dam Belle by Gen Taylor, third dam Belle by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Blackhawk, out of Rose-on-Gir[illegible], an imbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centerville Course, Long Island, in 18[illegible], two miles in [illegible] and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most promising fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with fine muzzle and flanks. He is [illegible] hands high and weighs 1[illegible] pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO,

CHALDEAN is a black colt, not a white hair; long, stylish neck, immense cords and muscle; fine way of going; in fact is a trotter now; can easily show quarters in 33 seconds with very little work, and is destined to be very fast as well as very large and handsome; his breeding is unexceptional, combining the blood of Nephew and Fanny Fern and the double Wilkes cross. This should make him a great stock horse. His pedigree bristles with performers, crowned with the wonderful Freedom, 2:29¾ as a yearling. Address for price and particulars, J. A. McDONALD,

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, fifteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in thoroughbred crosses he may be expected to exceed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney, 2:12¼, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, son of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼, (who was shown trial at the past season in 2:14), Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:24½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12¼, one of the sensational trotting fillies of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, (the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams. Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, sound and in good form for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29¼. After this fine season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS. He will make the season of 1892 at Wolfe's table in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

*Balkan.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 11¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¼. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¼. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:30 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000, and his service is offered at $200.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

Address this office till further notice.

SONS OF ELECTIONEER ✣1892✣ ✣1892✣ AT THE SOUTHER FARM

All mares bred to the Souther Farm Stallions in the season of 1892 will be kept free of charge from March 1st to July 1st. Mares may be sent to the farm at any time, and will be kept at reasonable rates until March 1st, when the free care begins. Best of attention given to mares at foaling time.

The Reputation of the Souther Farm is a guarantee of fair treatment for all animals sent there.

EL BENTON

(Three-quarter brother to SUNOL, 2:08¼; NORVAL, 2:17½)

Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¼; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

GLEN FORTUNE

(25 per cent. of the blood of Shanghai Mary; the exact amount carried by Electioneer himself.)

- ELECTIONEER 125 — Sunol, 2:08¼; Palo Alto, 2:08¾.
  - HAMBLETONIAN 10 — His sons have produced nearly 1,000 in 2:30

  - GLENELLA — Out of the dam of Green Mountain Maid.
    - WOODWARD STAR — Son of Seely's American Star.
    - SHANGHAI MARY — Grandam of Electioneer.

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

Fourth to fourteenth dams thoroughbred.

By The Grand Moor.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

When Your Blacksmith Tells You

that he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP; that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mis-taken. However, don't point out the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut; and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing on both heels and the entire wearing surface.

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Young Fashion — Fashion — Bonnets o'Blue; Trustee (imp.) — Monarch — Delphine; Priam
Hurrah (imp.) — Jovial — Sister to Grey Momus; Bay Middleton — Newminster — Beeswing; Touchstone

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIRCHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

Good pasturage at $5 per month. Mares cared for in any manner owners may desire and fed on hay and grain, either or both, at reasonable rates. None but competent grooms employed, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

Dr. M. W. Hicks, Sacramento,

(Sold on Account of Ill-Health)

— ON —

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1892,

AT 10 A. M., AT

SALES YARD, CORNER VAN NESS AVENUE and MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

The continued ill-health of Dr. Hicks compels him, reluctantly, to permanently retire from the business of breeding standard-bred horses. He has leased his stallions to parties in Indiana, and through the medium of the auction block proposes to dispose of his broodmares and young horses. His splendid array of broodmares, with their produce, collected and bred with such care and excellent judgment, will be placed unreservedly in the hands of the public, he feeling confident their merit will be recognized and fair prices obtained. His stock runs largely to the great speed lines of the country, and judicious crossing has produced broodmares which are invaluable to the breeding community.

Full catalogues giving breeding, registry, etc., together with breeding of stallions, for reference, may be had upon application to the undersigned, 22 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Cal.

ANTI-STIFF

To Strengthen the Muscles.

To Strengthen the Muscles.

It is a marvelous preparation for Strengthening the Muscular System. With Anti-Stiff there is a faith required. It goes straight for the muscles, and you can feel it at work. It has a peculiarly warming, comforting and stimulating effect on all weak or stiff muscles and sinews. Quick in its action, cleanly and pleasant in use.

Rub it into the muscles every night for a fortnight and you will be pleased at its supporting and strengthening properties. There is not, nor has been, anything like it till now. It differs from all Oils, Embrocations and Liniments, both in substance and effect. Some athletes are so fond of it that they rub it all over them.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3.50.

To Tell the Age of Horses.

To tell the age of any horse,
Inspect the lower jaw, of course;
The sixth front tooth the tale will tell,
And every doubt and fear dispel.

Two middle "nippers" you behold
Before the colt is two weeks old.
Before eight weeks two more will come:
Before eight months the "corners" cut the gum.

The outside grooves will disappear
From middle two in just one year.
In two years, from the second pair;
In three the corners, too, are bare.

At two the middle "nippers" drop;
At three the second pair can't stop.
When four years old the third pair goes;
At five a full new set he shows.

The deep black spots will pass from view
At six years from the middle two.
The second pair at seven years;
At eight the spot each "corner" clears.

From middle "nippers" upper jaw
At nine the black spots will withdraw.
The second pair at ten are white;
Eleven finds the "corners" light.

As time goes on, the horsemen know,
The oval teeth three-sided grow;
They longer get, project before
Till twenty, when we know no more.

WHAT AND HOW TO FEED STOCK.

Matters of Great Importance to Breeders and Owners of Horses and Cattle.

By Dr. Thomas Maclay, M. R. C. V. S.

The Process of Digestion.—To properly describe this process it would be necessary to classify the subject under at least seven heads, viz.—

First—The different methods employed by animals in seizing their food and conveying it to the oral aperture of their alimentary canal.
Second—Mastication, embracing the movements of the jaws, the action of the teeth, the tongue, the lips and cheeks and the salivary secretion.
Third—Deglutition.
Fourth—Rumination.
Fifth—Gastric Digestion.
Sixth—Digestion in the small intestines, and Seventh—Digestion in the large intestines.

Inasmuch as such a description would occupy too much of your space, it will suffice to say that the food constituents, before being available for nourishing the animal body, have to undergo a process of digestion. This is commenced in the mouth, where the food is ground up and masticated. Some of its carbo-hydrates, such as sugar, are soluble and diffusible, and require no digestion. Others, such as starch and cellulose, are insoluble. These latter are here acted upon by the saliva, whose special action is the conversion of insoluble starch into soluble sugar. Any starch unconverted in the mouth passes through the stomach without material change, its further digestion being completed in the small intestines, where the solution of starch and cellulose is effected by the action of the pancreatic and intestinal secretions.

True fats are liquified by the heat of the body, but their digestion is not effected until they reach the small intestines, where they are emulsified and saponified through the agency of the bile and pancreatic and intestinal secretions.

The digestion of albuminoids is mainly effected in the stomach, where they are acted upon by the gastric juice, whose function is to convert the indiffusable proteids or albuminoids into diffusible peptones Those not converted by the acid gastric juice in the stomach, on reaching the small intestines are subjected to the action of the alkaline pancreatic juice, one of whose functions is the conversion of albuminoids into peptones. The saline constituents, if not previously in solution, are, on arrival at the stomach, immediately dissolved. Water requires no digestion, but is the medium by which the solution of the other food materials is effected.

The constituents of the food thus digested undergo absorption in a greater or less degree throughout the whole alimentary canal, but chiefly in the small intestines, whence the digested materials pass either directly into the blood or enter it through the intermediate lacteals and lymphatics. In the blood they are carried to the various tissues, where they either serve nutritive purposes, or by their combustion with the inhaled oxygen (referred to in the first part of this paper) from the atmosphere, produce heat and force.

The products of combustion and tissue waste are ultimately carried off through one or other of the excretory channels.

But, however completely digestion of the food takes place, a certain percentage of it either cannot be, or at any rate, remains undigested, and is ejected as excrement.

I will now pass to the consideration of the food required by herbivora under different conditions. Animals which have no work to do besides growing and keeping up their nutrition are nourished perfectly well by grazing, if the grass is abundant and of proper composition; this is the case for sheep, two or three-year-old horses and young cattle. If these animals are stall-fed, instead of being put to grass, on account of the perfect quiet and even temperature, the nutritive demands are reduced; so now feeding with hay or straw with some nitrogenous food suffices.

In fattening animals the carbo-hydrates must be increased; in milking animals the albuminous food-constituents.

For pregnant animals which are not worked, as brood mares, pasture is sufficient; or if stall-fed, hay and straw, the latter with some nitrogenous food, will answer, if the total composition is made to correspond with that of grass. If the grass and hay are not of the proper composition some accessory food must be added. Especial reference must be paid to the amount of albumen and salts in the food, such as lime and phosphates, as of special importance for the development of the osseous system of the young. In such cases some albuminous food rich in salts is necessary, such as grains.

Male breeding animals which do not work must have their food so adjusted that they do not put on fat; not that the amount of organic matter may be reduced, but the feed may be concentrated, have a small percentage of indigestible matter, and little water and much albumen. Especially in the coupling season must the food be rich in albumen to make up for the losses through copulation. Fat stallions and bulls are not fruitful.

Animals for labor require more than pasture; they require a large amount of albumen, for by it the muscles are enabled to appropriate a larger amount of oxygen; so, also, fat and carbo-hydrates must be increased, since they give to the muscles the substance which is consumed in muscular activity. If the work is constant the carbon of muscles must always be in excess.

Volumnious and watery food must be avoided. The former distends the alimentary canal, and so interferes with respiration, and the latter leads to an accumulation of water in the tissues, and reduces the tension and elasticity of the muscles. So the food must be concentrated, as oats and barley, which are especially valuable on account of their fat.

If animals are fed for food purposes an increase in the solids and digestible matter of the food is requisite; so the appepetite must be stimulated, and yet overloading of the alimentary canal avoided. It is, therefore, advisable gradually to increase the amount of the usual food, to stimulate the secretion by small quantities of salt, if possible, to aid digestion by a previous preparation of the food, such as by giving ground meal, and so to choose the foods that the waste of the organism will be at a minimum.

Young animals which are designed for food purposes will slowly take on flesh in a good pasture; if an accumulation of fat is desired, additional carbo-hydrates and fatty food must be given.

In horse feeding both the horse and his work have to be considered, and due allowance made for the kind, quantity and quality of the food to be used. It is obvious then that no fixed diet can be made, either in the quantity used or in its albuminoid ratio. The requirements of the horse vary with his class. His food must be directly proportionate to his work. As one horse will do more work than another, so the quantity sufficient for one will be insufficient for the other; so also the food required by a horse doing moderate work will be insufficient for the same horse doing hard work; neither should horses doing fast and slow work be fed alike, the former requiring a more nitrogenous diet than the latter.

In regulating the food allowance, a careful and intelligent man will readily notice any necessity for an increase, or the utility for a decrease; but in adition he ought to take due notice of the albuminoid ratio; thus, although horses doing moderate work will maintain condition on oats, it has been frequently shown that if horses have to undergo long-continued severe exertion either at slow or fast work, oats alone are incapable of supplying the nitrogenous matters required to replace tissue waste; and that a horse continuously doing such work will lose condition and deteriorate if fed with them alone; but if his food be more nitrogenous by the addition of such an article as beans, then the same horse, doing the same work will regain his lost condition and fitness. As with oats so with an equivalent mixed food, such as a mixture of four pounds maize and one pound of beans. This mixture will maintain a horse doing moderate work, but in itself is unable to supply the necessary materials for real hard work; but if with this, as with oats, the percentage of nitrogenous matter in other words its albuminoid ratio be increased, as by the addition of a sufficiency of beans, the requisite food may be obtained to supply the wants of any horse he is capable of performing.

Economic feeding, in other words the giving of such provender as will maintain the horse in the best condition and obtain the greatest amount of work at the least possible cost may be achieved by the use of a food consisting of a mixture of oats, maize, peas, beans, barley, hay, etc., the mixture varying in its proportions from time to time as the prices of the articles composing it fluctuate in the market, provided always a due albuminoid ratio be maintained. As with most other problems, so with the study of true economic feeding, success is the reward of, as it is merited by, combining practice with science; and as Mr. Goschen aptly puts it, "Nothing can be more deplorable than that men who have to deal with economic problems should be, as is too frequently the case divided into theorists who have no knoweledge of practical details, and practical men who shrink from or despise the study of general principles."

The duration of the interval between different times of feeding of the domestic animals is a matter of considerable importance. Too frequent feeding should be avoided on account of the shortening of the necessary pauses between the digestive processes. The ruminants, especially, should not receive more than at most three meals in the day, so as to allow time for rumination. Horses likewise should always be provided with a nose bag. Hogs from three to four meals a day. On the other hand, the intervals between feeding should not be too long, on account of the great increase of hunger so produced leading to faulty mastication and imperfect salivation of the food.

This state of affairs may produce much more serious disturbance in the non-ruminants than in the ruminants. In young cattle from four to six meals may be given on account of the relatively smaller size of their stomachs, since three meals scarcely furnish enough to sustain them. So, also, when the fodder is especially fluid, the meals may succeed each other every two or three hours, for in this condition the stomach rapidly empties itself and the feeling of hunger again appears.

So, also, when feeding with dry fodder is commenced it is better at the beginning to give at least four different meals, so as to avoid over-distension and filling of the stomach with this more bulky food. At the end of fattening the meals may be increased in number and reduced in amount, digestion of small amounts of readily digestible foods being more readily accomplished.

In conclusion, I desire to draw your attention to the accompanying tables. Table No. 1, taken from Dr. Malcolm's paper, shows the actual results of feeding the Birmingham Corporation Horses, the average comsumption of food and bedding per horse per day and per horse per week; also, the actual cost of these per horse per week for each year. To show the type of horses fed, a column is introduced giving their average weight, which was obtained from the average of two weighings each year, the one at Christmas, the other at mid-summer.

Table No. 2, taken from Professor Smith's valuable work, gives, in the first eight columns, the percentage composition of the various forms of food stuffs which may be employed for the nutrition of the herbiverous domestic animals. The last three columns give the average degree of digestibility of their organic constituents.

WONDERFUL LONG-DISTANCE RIDING.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

I have lately seen accounts of long-distance riding by various parties, notably Fremont and F. X. Aubrey. Fremont rode 100 miles a day for several days. F. X. Aubrey was a French trader along the old "Santa Fe trail" in the days of the Comanches and Kiowas. He made a wager that he would ride from Santa Fe to Westport, Mo., a distance of 800 miles, in seven days, and won the wager. He was a noted character, and in the fifties there was a steamer on the Missouri river named after him. The sight of his name on its bow made his great feat of endurance an every-day story. It was common in the early pioneer days of the trans-Missouri country to hear accounts of parties who had ridden Spanish horses 100 miles in twenty-four hours.

A few days since I was with Monroe Salisbury, an early plainsman who has had many adventures and gone through many dangers, and we were talking over the old plains and Rocky Mountain times of thirty years ago. The name of Jim Moore, a noted frontiersman, came up, and naturally a famous ride which he made when he was a pony express rider was recurred to. It was a feat of endurance as great as any other which is authentic. Moore was a young man of almost perfect physique. By military standards he was a model. He stood 5 ft. 10 inches, weighed 166 pounds, straight as an arrow, with good neck well set on his shoulders, small waist, but good loins, and he had the limbs of a thoroughbred. He could run like an Indian, was as active as a panther; the best-natured man in the world, but as courageous as a lion. In the early sixties he was a pony express rider. His route was from Midway Station, half-way between Fort Kearney and Cottonwood Springs, to Julesburg, a distance of 140 miles.

Moore made the round trip of 280 miles once a week. The stations were from ten to fourteen miles apart, and a fresh horse of Spanish blood was obtained at each station. There was little delay in these changes of horses, as the rider gave the "coyote yell" half a mile away, and day or night the station men had the pony ready, so that the rider had only to dismount from one horse and mount the other, and with a dig of his spurs he was on a run again. This ride of 140 miles usually was made in twelve hours. On each route there were two express riders, one going each way.

As easy as it may seem to some for a man to bestride fresh horse after horse for 140 miles, there were few men able to stand up to it. Upon the occasion of which I am to speak Moore's route-partner had been ailing and Moore was anticipating and dreading that he might have to double the route. In this anticipation he realized that there is a time limit to endurance, and therefore he gave the "Broncos" a little more of the steel than usual, and made the trip to Julesburg in eleven hours.

Arriving at Julesburg, he had his fears confirmed. His partner was in bed. He had hoped that he might have a few hours for rest, but before he had time to dismount and stretch his cramped and tired muscles, the "coyote yell" of the east-going rider was heard. He drank some cold coffee, filled his pocket with cold meat, and was in the saddle again for another 140-mile ride. In order to be able to live the route out, he sent them for all there was in them, with the result that he arrived at Midway, after having ridden 280 miles in twenty-two hours from the time he had left there. Ben Holliday gave him a gold watch and a certificate of this remarkable performance. Many of the old frontiersmen now living knew Moore—knew of his 280-mile ride in twenty-two hours, and have seen the watch and certificate.

The history of the pony express with the personnel of the riders who rode from St. Joseph to Sacramento, a distance of 2,100 miles, in seven days over wide plains, high mountains and rapid rivers, during dark nights, terrible storms, in "Indian dangers," if truthfully written, would make a thrilling story of bravery and endurance excelled in no other time and by no other people.

Moore was an extraordinary man mentally as well as physically. When the "pony express" was abandoned he went to ranching, and established "Valley Station," on the overland route between Julesburg and Denver. There he built houses, store buildings and corrals. It was a noted resort for freighters, stage men, hunters and trappers, as well as Indians. He bought, grazed and bred stock, traded with the armies of people moving east and west, and many were the fights he had with the Indians when the wars came. He was fond of good horses, and always had one or two good short-distance runners. By some means he got hold of a blue roan mare that could beat almost anybody's horse for six hundred yards. In those days almost every emigrant train had one or more good horses, which they were leading to California, Oregon, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana or Washington.

Moore's ranch was a point on the "overland" where most trains stopped to rest and feed stock. Jim made them welcome, and got their trade. If they had one of these "led' horses with a blanket on, indicating that it was prized as good one, Jim, with smiles that were "child-like and bland," would want to see the horse, and when the blanket was off he would pronounce him a "star-gazer and nail-driver," and say that he "hadn't seen a hoss race for years," and that he wouldn't mind losing a "hundred" just to see such a horse extend himself. He would propose to run the old blue roan mare just to see a race. The old man had the point of a hip down, which didn't hurt her at all, but did make her look as though she couldn't get out of her own way. Generally the temptation to win $100 was too great for the emigrant horse-owner, and the race would be made. Then the betting would begin between the train men and ranch hands, and sometimes Jim would have thousands of dollars up, with the result that the old half-hipped blue roan would make a "holy-show" of the emigrant horse, way-worn and weary from his long journey.

Jim made a lot of money that way, but I remember once that he "caught a Tartar." Lew Rickabaugh, well known on this Coast, but not as a horseman, came along leading a mare with a fine blanket on. No sooner did Jim see that fine blanket than he went down to the train to arrange for another "killing." After praising the mare, as he knew well how to do, he proposed a race just to see the "star-gazer" "straighten her neck." Rickabaugh let Jim name the stakes, only he "couldn't think of letting his mare run more than a quarter." The race was made, and Rickabaugh bet the ranchmen to a stand-still. When the word was given the blue roan wasn't in it. Rickabaugh's mare was the celebrated Missouri Girl, one of the most famous "quarter horses" that ever lived. Rickabaugh won piles of money, bands of horses and droves of cattle with her.

Moore has long since "gone over the range," his ranch is in strangers' hands, and his horse races, Indian fights and long express rides are fast being forgotten.

Joe Swigert Talks About Salvator.

In an interview with a Chicago Times reporter Joseph Swigert, who owned the world-famed Elmendorf stud, where Salvator, Firenzi and other turf celebrities first saw the light of day, had the following to say of Salvator, the king of the American turf:

"I always considered Salvator one of the greatest—if not the greatest—colts that ever sported silk. He was the grandest son of one of the grandest sires ever brought to this country. I was always particularly interested in him, because I gave him as a yearling his first lesson in galloping. In the summer of 1887 Mr. Haggin and I were together for about three weeks in St. Louis, and we became very well acquainted. He had just invested $115,000 in yearlings, and he was hopeful of good results. When we parted company in St. Louis he went on to New York, and shortly afterward I received a dispatch from him asking me to go on there and confer with him on a matter of business. I went on and met him. Said he to me: "When you go back to Kentucky I want you, if you will, to gather up all those yearlings I bought down there, cull 'em over, and sell off all you don't like. I shall rely strictly upon your judgment, and will not whimper if you don't get but a small percentage of what I paid for them."

"I consented, and after I got through culling them over I had them sifted down to three. One of them was Salvator and another Fresno. Of the whole lot I discarded, the horse afterward called Dock Wick was the only one that turned out a winner. He must have cost Mr. Haggin as much as $300, if not more, and I sold him for $65. I took the likely-looking Prince Charlie—Salina colt, Salvator, to my farm, and a lively time we had with him all winter, I can tell you. He was one of the most willful youngsters I ever saw, and so full of spirits that every plank in his stall bore the imprint of his hoofs. He could toss any boy that ever bestrode him, but he would do it more out of playfulness than viciousness. He never came out of his stall in the morning on all-fours, but rearing, kicking and plunging, and it was useless to try and curb him. When he had finished his romp he would go along quietly. He was one of the best 'doers' I ever handled.

"A strange attachment grew up between the colt and an old cat we had about the stables. Tabby would hunch her back and rub her soft fur against Salvator's fetlocks, and the colt would bend his proud neck and lick her head affectionately. Many a time I found the cat sleeping contentedly on the colt's back, and nervous and playful as he was he would not move a muscle for fear of disturbing her. The cat had been used to the companionship of horses from her early kittenhood, but she was never known to make friends with one of them before.

Salvator's playfulness brought on an incipient ring-bone, which I cured by blistering with corrosive sublimate and alcohol. I have believed since if I had taken the advice of the veterinary and had him fired it would have ruined him. In the spring I gave Salvator and Fresno a light preparation and shipped them East to Matt Byrnes, Mr. Haggin's trainer, telling him that it would be quite safe to send Fresno out in the early stakes, but it would be advisable to save Salvator for later in the season, and not hurry him up. Contrary to my advice, however, Mr. Byrnes started the colt in the Junior Champion and had him beaten by Proctor Knott and three others, Fresno finishing third. The hasty preparation for the Junior Champion hurt his chances for the Futurity, wherein he ran second to Proctor Knott. He started four times after that as a two-year-old, and finished ahead of his field each time.

"Mr. Haggin afterward acknowledged that by weeding out his stable I had saved him $150,000, and that if his trainers had followed my instructions Salvator would have gone through his two-year-old season unbeaten."

The Thoroughbred Horse.

The thoroughbred horse, without doubt, had his origin in a combination of Arabian, Barb and Turkish blood, and he was developed by favorable conditions of climate, generons feeding, judicious crossing and protection and encouragement by the royalty and nobility of England. America, France, Germany and all the nations who have turned their attention to the breeding and improving of the horse trace their beginning to importations made from England. If the early breeders in England recognized the importance of pure Eastern blood as a foundation upon which to build up this, the grandest specimen of the equine race, how much more important is it for Americans to impove upon the original source of supply; and we are so much of the American that we desire to see our own native country excel all other nations in breeding the thoroughbred horse, as she has done in breeding, educating and domiciling the trotter as an American institution. Then how are we to accomplish this end? Not by acquiring the refuse of England or any other nation, but by selecting the best to breed upon the best now in our own country—best not only in purity of blood but those possessing symmetry in all the essential requisites of the racehorse, such as true conformation, in which are length, power, bone and muscle. Our early breeders recognized this important fact in the selection and importations made over a century ago. Imp. Selima, foaled 1746, was imported into Maryland by Col. Tasker. She was by the Godolphin Arabian, that has the credit of having founded the Matchem strain of blood in England; her dam the large Hartley mare, by Mr. Hartley's Blind Horse, son of the Holderness Turk, tracing through pure Eastern blood to a Royal mare imported by King Charles II. She produced a number of superior racehorses, including Bellair, Partner and Ariel, by imp. Traveler, Stella, Ebony and Selim, by imp. Othello, Babraham, by imp. Juniper, Black Selima, by imp. Fearnought. From this mare a large number of first-class horses have descended both in the male and female line, including Bellair (Taylor's) by imp. Medley, famous as a racehorse and stallion, a daughter of his being the dam of the noted Gabriella, by Sir Archy, Hall's Union, Bond's Eclipse, Cades, by King Herod, the dam of Lady Bolingbroke, by imp. Pantaloon and String, by imp. Diomed. Lady Bolingbroke founded a racing family of great merit, but it is the female line through a daughter of imp. Juniper, son of Babraham, by the Godolphin Arabian and daughter of imp. Traveler, son of Partner, that has made the family famous in this day. To this mare traces the grand racehorse Foxhall through Jamaica, by Lexington, Fanny Ludlow, by imp. Eclipse, and Mollie Jackson, by imp. Margrave, the best mare of her day, and whose heats of three miles in 5:35½, 5:34¾, 5:28¾ are the best on record to this day. Foxhall crossed the Atlantic and won the Bedford Stakes and Bretby Nursery Handicap in 1880, and the Grand Duke Michael Stakes, Grand Prize of Paris, defeating Tristan and others; the Select Stakes, Cæsarwitch and Cambridgeshire handicaps; in this latter race he carried 126 pounds and beat such good ones as Lucy Glitters, Tristan, Peter and Ben d'Or, conceding nearly all of them lumps of weight. Foxhall is proving a successful stallion. Corstorphine, a daughter of his, won the Dewhurst Plate last year, and ran second to Mimi in the Oaks this year, whom she defeated in the Dewhurst Plate at two years old. Another of the early importations which has proved of inestimable value to the country was the imported Cub mare, foaled 1762, and imp. by Gen. Delancy, of New York, along with Wildair, who was subsequently repurchased and sent back to England. The Cub mare was by Cub, son of Fox, by Clumsy, by Hautboy, her dam sister to Leedes, by Second, son of Flying Childers, grandam by Bolton Startling, out of sister to Vane's Little Partner, by Croft's Partner, tracing to the Layton Barb mare. This Cub mare was the dam of Old Slamerkin, Bashaw, Hero, Moulton and Ruth Black Eyes, all by imp. Wildair. Bashaw and old Slamerkin were winners in 1772. Old Slamerkin was the only daughter whose stud history is well established. She founded a family of racehorses which has immortalized the old mare. She was the dam of Moll, by imp. Figure; she the dam of Cockfighter, a racehorse of merit in his day; Jane Hunt, by Wade Hampton's Paragon and others. Jane Hunt was the dam of Indiana, by Butler's Columbus, son of imp. Pantaloon, by Herod; Shepherdess, by imp. Speculator; Express, by imp. Stirling; Sally Sneed, the grandam of the great four-miler, John Bascomb, by imp. Buzzard, son of Woodpecker, by Herod; Tiger and Grecian Princess, by Cook's or Blackburn's Whip, son of imp. Whip, by Saltram, by Eclipse. Indiana was the dam of Hannah Harris, called also Paragon, by imp. Buzzard, who was the dam of Apollo, by Whip; Jenny (Miss) Slamerkin, by Tiger; Aurora, by Aratus, son of Director, by Sir Archy. Jenny Slamerkin was the dam of Miss Obstinate, by Sumpter, son of Sir Archy, and two or three fillies by Medoc, son of American Eclipse. From Miss Obstinate came Morgiana, by Thornton's Rattler; Mary Morris, by Medoc; Marchioness and Kitty Clark, both by imp Glencoe, and Ann Innis, by Ann Eclipse. Mary Morris gave us the two grand racehorses Frankfort and Wild Irishman, famous in their day as racers, both by imp. Glencoe. Ann Innis gave us Hebron, Vivandiere and Jim Barton, by Grey Eagle, Swigert's Lexington, La Grande Duchesse, by Lexington, and Maria Innis, by imp. Yorkshire. Kitty Clark became famous in stud as the dam of Maiden, one of the best race mares of her day, and one of the few mares that ever won the Travers stakes. She was also famous in the stud as the dam of Lady Washington, by Beacon. James A.; Parole, the crack gelding of his day, winner of a large number of races, including many over the cup distance, two and a quarter miles, and who when six years old crossed the Atlantic and won the New market Handicap, last mile and a half of the Beacon Course, beating the great Isonomy, and others; the City and Suburban Handicap, 119 pounds, one and a quarter miles; Great Metropolitan Stakes (Handicap), two and a quarter miles, 124 pounds; the Great Chester Handicap Stakes, one mile, one furlong and 216 yards, 134 pounds, and the Epsom Gold Cup, 125 pounds, one and a half miles; Perfection, Papoose, Paw-Paw and Powhattan, all by imp. Leamington; nearly all raced successfully and have done well in the stud, Powhattan being one of the popular sires of the day. La Henderson, the sister to Maiden, was not raced, but was a grand broodmare, dam of Planetia, by Planet; Virgilian, by Virgil, and the noted trio of sisters, Ferida, Ælla and Ferona. La Grand Duchesse has also been a success in the stud. Maria Innis gave us Kathleen, Bulletin and Echo by Lexington, Meteor by Asteroid and Australian Chief by imp. Australian. Kathleen is the dam of Kennesaw, John Happy, Hettie B., George Kinney (the superior racehorse), Khartoum and others. Echo produced Naphtha, the grandam of the great filly Dew Drop, that sold for $29,000, and of Nemesis, by imp. Eclipse, the dam of the speedy Rhadamanthus, Acoustic, dam of Vocalic, Lizzie Lucas, the good race and successful broodmare, is a granddaughter of Mary Morris. This is a partial statement of what one branch of this old Slamerkin family has done for the turf. Dido, Old Slamerkin's daughter, by imp. Bay Richmond, is the head of that branch of the family represented by Prizefighter and Zelipha, the latter a daughter of imp. Messenger. Zelipha was the dam of the good race mare Honesty, by imp. Expedition, the dam of Tormentor, Flagelator, Monmouth Eclipse and others, and of Aurora, by imp. Honest John, she the dam of Spiletta Roxana, by Sir Solomon. A daughter of Slamerkin by imp. Obscurity, son of Eclipse, was the dam of the Robin mare, by imp. Robin Redbreast, a horse inbred to Herod, being by Sir Peter, son of Highflyer, by Herod, dam Wren, by Woodpecker, son of Herod, grandam Papillian, Sir Peter's dam; she produced the stallions, Thornton's Rattler, Sumpter and Childers, also the mares Elizabeth and Flirtilla, by Sir Archy, all famous on the turf and successes in the stud. If, therefore, the early turfmen of America recognized the importance of pure racing blood, coupled with conformation, bone, muscle, soundness and constitution, and have handed down to us these families which have raced and produced racehorses for over one hundred years, among them some of the best and most creditable and successful performers of our day, how much more important is it that we should discard and reject the refuse and weedy outcast from other countries which could neither race themselves nor have ever produced a racehorse? Experience and a study of the stud book will clearly show that good ones have invariably done well in this country, and the rofuse have sunk deeper into oblivion.—Turf, Field and Farm.

Cure for Quarter Cracks.

During the manœuvres of last summer a cavalry horse, with contracted heels, developed internal quarter cracks on each fore hoof. The following treatment was employed, says a writer in a foreign exchange: The shoes wers removed, the edge of the wall leveled and the wall thinned from the coronet to the sole, for a short distance on each side of the crack. The edges of the crack was smoothed and the sensitive tissues under it were freed from horn. The horse was then shod with bar shoes, the exposed laminæ coated with pine tar, and a pressure bandage applied. The hoof was kept moist and the bandage renewed daily for three days. After four days the bandage was no longer necessary, because the exposed soft parts had become covered with a thin layer of horn. In five days the horse could be exercised, and in eight days he was ready for service. During the manœuvres the horse was used daily and the quarter cracks healed completely. Another horse, with regularly shaped, but somewhat spreading hoofs, acquired quarter cracks on both front feet, some six days before the manœuvres. In spite of the fact that the crack bled at first and caused great pain the horse recovered under this treatment, although it was given hard work every day. I allow the bar shoes to remain from five to six months. From my experience I have no hesitation in recommending the operation in the highest terms.

Stallion owners, send in your advertisements. The sooner they appear the quicker will be your returns.

Old Tom Bowling was sold at auction two months ago for $50. He is now advertised in the stud at a fee of $25.

Pierre Lorillard is reported to be on the lookout for a great English racehorse, and is said to have made an offer for Common.

R. B. Milroy, of the Nevada Stables, has shipped for Guy E. Grosse, of Santa Rosa, the stallion Anteeop to E. R. Den, Santa Barbara.

Wm. Vioget is to move to San Jose about the 15th of February with a large string of youngsters. He will occupy his old quarters at the race track.

Major T. Griffin has gone to Los Angeles and intends to locate at the race track there. He will be seen on the Circuit this fall with a string of trotters.

The Premium System.—"Don't you want to subscribe to the Gazette?" asked the editor. "I dunno," said Sikes, "what yer payin' subscribers this year?"

Pat McCartney, lessee of the track of the San Benito County Agricultural Association, will handle Cox's Bay Rum, 2:29½, at the Hollister race track this season.

C. J. Hamlin, whose success in bringing out racehorse trotters and pacers is not questioned, says that his breeding venture has netted him twenty per cent. annually.

The old-time custom of hanging up the money for each race in a silk purse on the wire drawn across the track is in vogue at New Orleans. The money is paid after each race.

A. E. Kempfer, of Napa, has a filly by Election (N. J. Stone's), out of the dam of Alwood K., that is surprising every one at the Napa track by the speed it is showing.

Monroe Salisbury has an unique scarf pin which was presented to him by Dr. Latham. It is a nail from Direct's shoe beautifully mounted, and engraved with the figures 2:06.

David Gideon and John Daly have formed a partnership, and hereafter His Highness, Merry Monarch, Ludwig and others will be run under the firm name of Gideon & Daly.

G. Valensin, in the Kentucky Stock Farm, hits Anteeo, the Californian correspondent of that journal rather a hard knock over the knuckles for some statements that appeared in it lately.

One of the most prominent stallions in this State is Knight Wilkes, by Woodford Wilkes. He is in the stud at Rancho del Paso, adjoining the commodious stalls of Albert W. 2:20 and Alaska.

J. Malcolm Forbes purchased a yearling filly by Electricity from Ariel Lathrop. We understand that this capitalist will start a stock farm that will be second to no other in the United States.

The Religious Society of Friends of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware has issued a pamplet condemning horse racing because "the poor beasts are prodded with spurs and laced with whips."

If the horsemen are ever going to organize to look into the feasibility of the Baden race track proposition they must commence soon. The changes that have taken place at this suburb are marvellous.

Don't forget the great Hick's sale next Wednesday, January 27th, at which will be offered at auction a grand lot of mares, nearly all of which carry one or more line or the great Flaxtail and Pilot blood.

Last Saturday the Sonoma Democrat got out a splendid souvenir number, containing much of interest to Sonomaites in particular and California in general. It was a credit to the publishers in every respect.

The late Colonel William Churchill willed his half of Churchill Downs to his brother John, therefore the Louisville Jockey Club will continue on the way it has gone in the past—Colonel Clark at the head.

How many owners of broodmares are there in California who claim to have "a pull" to get the services of Advertiser for their mares this year? We have already counted seventeen, and "still there's more to follow."

Holly, 2:28½, by Kentucky, out of Pacific Maid, by Winthrop, second dam by Belshaazer, was raised at Rancho del Paso. Kentucky was by Hambletonian 725, out of The Morse mare, by Skenandoah, sire of Erwin Davis, etc.

Mountain Boy is the sire of a filly out of Lou Milton (dam of Redwood, 2:21) that is fast as a bullet, and when McFadyen, her owner, lets her trot down Golden Gate avenue, everyone stops to see how perfectly easy it is for her to move fast.

On the 15th instant there was a trotting race at Petaluma, at half mile heats, between W. R. Overholser's twenty months' old Oaknut colt and John Lawler's McClelland mare. The colt won in straight heats. No time was taken, but the contest was a spirited one. The Agricultural Park track at Petaluma is in very fair shape just now.

It is understood that the New York Spirit of the Times will start a daily sporting paper in the spring, giving minute accounts of all the principal running and trotting meetings in the country. It will in no wise be amalgamated with the weekly.

The fast and promising Guy Wilkes mare Hulda Wilkes is a "green 'un," but in O. A. Hickok's hands she will be "ripe goods for others to sample" when the circuit opens. They will have to be really excellent to be rated in the same class with her.

Thomas H. Williams, interviewed in Chicago last Monday, says the great Racine will not race this year, owing to a terrible wrench he got at Sheepshead Bay last fall. This will be sad news to admirers of the wonderful son of Bishop and Fairy Rose.

Robert Orr, of San Benito county, will breed Mary O., 2:29½ (daughter of Brown Jug and Betsy, by Budd Doble), to Rupee, 2:14¾, while Lady Benton, the property of G. S. Nash, also of San Benito county, will be bred to Sable Wilkes, 2:18, at three years.

Breeders of California don't miss the opportunity to get some of the Flaxtail blood at the Hicks' sale next Wednesday. Get some of those Flaxtail-Pilot mares to breed to your Hambletonian stallions, and raise some more yearlings like Frou-Frou, 2:25¼.

Joseph Cairn Simpson is taking a lively interest in the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, and will have several new ideas to advance at the next meeting, which will prove worthy of consideration by all members of this prosperous organization.

This is the standing of the leading stallions as to number in the 2:30 list at the close of 1891: Electioneer, 100; Nutwood, 77; George Wilkes, 76; Happy Medium, 70; Red Wilkes, 63; Blue Bull, 63; Onward, 47; Egbert, 45; Hamlin's Almont, 42; Alcantara, 41.

The Sultan colt St. Lookout, that trotted to a two-year-old record of 2:26 last year, will be extensively nominated in the big stakes to which he is eligible this year. King Sultan, his two-year-old brother, is being regularly worked this winter, and is of exceeding promise.

Tennessee, Ed Corrigan's famous steeplechaser, is dead. He was the champion over the sticks and water jumps, with big weight up, for several years. Being by Ten Broeck, out of Lizzie Hoover, the progeny he has left is very liable to perpetuate his well-earned fame.

Chas. N. Northup, of Petaluma, last Monday night sold his black yearling colt by Secretary to H. Hellman, of Visalia. He is a grand youngster, and Sonoma county horsemen think he will make his mark on the turf. The price, known to be large, has not been made public.

Dan Wheelock, the young man who took care of Sunol while she was at Palo Alto, can now be seen at Mr. Bonner's stable looking out after the interests of his pet. Everyone who knows Dan will be pleased to hear that he is well satisfied, and has become quite a favorite with everybody.

Rufus Murphy, the well-known Santa Clara turfman, who had his collar-bone broken and was otherwise injured, is in a serious condition, we are sorry to state. Mr. Murphy was running to catch a cable car in this city and ran against a broken rail, which tripped him up, causing the above-named results.

We received this week the very neat catalogue of Holbert & Conger, Los Angeles, Cal., importers of German coach horses, Shires, Clydesdales and Cleveland bays. This firm has brought some grand horses of these classes to California, and last fall took most of the prizes at the fairs with their representatives.

Milton Young, of McGrathiana stud at Lexington has sold to A. R. Slofel, of New York, a two-year-old filly by Onondago, out of Kelpie by imp. Bonnie Scotland, and the three-year old colt Madden, by Duke of Montrose, dam May Lady by Reform, for $5,500. They will run at Guttenberg this winter.

The Perfection bit, invented by J. A. McKerron, of this city, is giving universal satisfaction, and wherever it is used its simplicity and merit is immediately recognized; consequently orders are coming in fast, and no complaints have yet been heard that these bits fail to do all that is required of them.

If J. Malcolm Forbes starts that breeding farm, as he contemplates, what a splendid foundation he will have in breeding Arion, 2:10¾, to Nancy Hanks, 2:09? He believes in beginning at the very top, and in a few years will have a reputation for his farm that is only enjoyed at present by a few in America.

Two imported horses are now doing stud service at Belle Meade—Great Tom and Loyalist. The former is totally blind. His daughters make great broodmares, and when mated with sons of old Bonnie Scotland racehorses are generally the result. Great Tom sired the dam of Proctor Knott, the winner of the first Futurity.

Faustino, Frou-Frou, Fausta, Sid Fleet and Red Sid will be campaigned in the East by Mr. Valensin during the coming racing season, we understand. The youngsters will doubtless be a great attraction wherever they go, for in this list are the champion yearling trotter and pacer, and the champion three-year-old trotter of 1891.

A horseman recently estimated the wealth of the most prominent American jockeys as follows: Isaac Murphy, $100,000; Billy Donahue, $60,000; Wm. Hayward, $40,000; Taral, $40,000; James McLaughlin, $30,000; Fred Littlefield, $20,000; Garrison, $20,000; Hamilton, $15,000, and others from $5,000 to nothing.

Mr. T. Kinney, of Napa, had heard a great deal about the speed of a Mountain Boy colt out of the thoroughbred mare Irish Lass, and at the auction sale at Holly's last week it was only necessary to turn the youngster a little way to induce Tommy to open his purse strings and purchase him. If Mountain Boy can control the gait of a Kyrle Daly like this one, he should be bred to a few more thoroughbreds. Let us not forget what this experiment has done for Electioneer and Palo Alto.

R. N. Doyle, of Carson, Nevada, says that a greater interest is being taken in the horse-breeding interests in the Silver State than ever before. With Col. W. K. Ashby at Wellington, Jos. Raycroft at Genoa, Theodore Winters at Reno, J. P. Sweeney and himself at Carson, the prospects are very much brighter than they have ever been.

A number of prominent horsemen have been stricken low with the la grippe, the only ones that have not fully recovered, but are convalescing slowly, are Prof. E. P. Heald, W. Donathan, Sam Gamble, L. A. Richards and John T. Boyd, owner of the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. We hope to soon see them enjoying their usual good health.

Fred W. Loeber is fixing up his catalogue for his sale of stallions, broodmares, colts and fillies, which will take place during the early part of March. There are some excellent individuals among them, and horsemen contemplating buying should be on the lookout for them. Every animal, with the exception of three, must and shall be sold!

In the year 1891, 125 horses got by sires owned at Belle Meade Farm, near Nashville, Tenn., won 453 races, aggregating in purses and stakes a trifle over $300,000. Of the Belle Meade yearlings sold in 1890, (two-year-olds last season, of course), thirty-one out of forty-two that started were returned as winners—unprecedented success for one stock farm.

We are promised for our next issue a full and complete description of Gilbert Tompkins' new method of handling trotters by reducing their flesh and not ruining their legs or feet by the process. It is one of the progressive ideas of this young gentleman, and will no doubt accomplish all that is claimed for it. The plan is a feasible one and very simple.

The Board of Control of the far Eastern organizations refuses to license bookmakers, believing that competition brings better odds. It is a bad idea to let any association of bookmakers get charge of the betting privilege, for they can then put odds down so low that it disgusts betting men and keeps thousands away from race courses that would otherwise attend the races.

"Holy Smoke! If this fellow Steiner isn't getting worse than Wallace. At first he was inclined to believe what breeders say, but lately he is getting so cranky that it is about time he takes a tumble to himself and spends a little more of his leisure in studying up what is sent him," was the remark of a prominent breeder of trotting horses the other evening at the Palace Hotel.

Charles Havens missed it when he failed to attend the auction sale and capture Turk Franklin. A pacer has always been Charlie's weakness, and this one would just suit him. Mr. Ottinger can lead all the turfites now on the speed track and never have a bit of dirt thrown up in his face from the flying feet of his side-wheeler, for Franklin's action is low, rapid and frictionless.

"Hanger" Jones has a youngster in training in the Rose string named Judge Marks. The youngster is out of the Australian mare Phœbe Marks, imported to America by Mr. Rose. The sire of Judge Marks is Othello, quite a noted sire in the Antipodes. The youngster is an August foal. He is a wonderfully well developed colt, and will make his mark on the American turf.

Algona has two grandsons in the 2:30 list. One is Claremont, 2:28, by McGinnis (he by Algona, out of Creole, by The Moor), owned by George Van Gordan. He is a chestnut gelding out of Maggie C., by Scamperdown. The other is the fine chestnut stallion Delmas, 2:29, by Almoon, a son of Algona. We saw this latter colt get his record at San Jose, driven by a son of N. Harris.

The United States Supreme Court has recently rendered a decision that will be of interest to all drivers and owners. The case referred to is one in which a driver of one horse sued a driver of another for damages caused by being fouled by the former. The amount of damages allowed was some five or six thousand dollars. By this it would seem that where the trotting associations do not protect the honest man, the courts will.

Dan McCarty's youngest son, Harry, is quite a horse sharp. At the Holly auction he bid for a number of them, and once his farther raised his bid $100, but the boy only winked and undauntedly raised it $100. When Dan found out how game the youngster was he said to Bowley: "That'll do now. I'll quit. He wants the horse, and, be Heavens, he'll not have me to bid against him!" Harry got the animal for $1,650.

Numerous applications for the services of Memo have come from all parts of the State and Oregon. As Sidney is to be used exclusively as a private stallion, many deep students have come to the conclusion that no better bred or better connected son of his is eligible to breed their mares to than this full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling. All of Memo's colts are very promising, and not a pacer has been heard of so far.

Scott McCoy, one of the well-known, capable horsemen of the West, has been tendered and accepted a position with the Boston capitalist and horseman, J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of the great Nancy Hanks 2:09, and the wonderful Arion, 2:10¾, etc. As evidence that good men are appreciated we incidentally mention that Scott's pay will will be $5,000 per annum. Mr. Forbes' farm is located at Ponkafog, Mass., seven miles out of Boston.

Pawnee, brown colt, three years old, by Stamboul, 2:11, out of Minnehaha, dam of five in the list, promises to be one of the greatest the old Rosemeade mare ever threw. As a two-year-old last fall, without training, he was started up an eighth of a mile, and did it at a 2:24 gait. He is owned by Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes, of Boston, Mass., who owns Arion, Nancy Hanks, Jack, Arab, Houri and other great ones, and it is the intention to have him trained this year.

John H. Shults, of Parkville Farm sold fourteen horses for $12,000—an average of $922. Miss Edith, by Happy Medium, dam by Black Oscar, was sold to W. S. Lawson for $3,000; Sister Seer, a sister to The Seer, 2:19¾, by Gen. Benton, brought $1,225; the broodmare, Hildegarde, by Harry Clay, out of Troublesome, 2:25½, that Mr. Shults bought for $3,000, was sold for $1,900, and her daughter, Hinda Wilkes, by Kentueky Wilkes, 2:21¼. brought $1,000.

WHENEVER the general public fully believes that every race will be decided on its merits; that no second rate horse will be allowed to defeat a horse of the first class; that no heats will be dropped for pay, and that all bets would be made with the layers expecting to win and not trying to rob the uninitiated, then the grand stands will be filled to overflowing, the pool-sellers will not complain of poor play, and the spectators will keenly relish the hard-fought contests, in which the best horses will win.

THE first bet on the $20,000 Garfield Park Derby was made last Saturday in Chicago, when Sidney McHie laid $1,000 to A. Hankins' $100 that Yo Tambien would not win the stake, play or pay. "Hankins has the worst of it," says a Western turfman, "for Yo Tambien has not yet been entered, and although there is but little doubt that she will be, it is two to one that she will not go to the post. It takes a mighty good filly to beat a good field of colts in the middle of June, and the richness of this stake will bring out the best of them."

IT WAS a horse, a great horse too, none less than American Eclipse, that inspired a fine compliment to Henry Clay from Colonel E. M. Blackburn, for more than fifty years a conspicuous figure on the turf. Blackburn had been sounding the praises of his racers in extravagant style, and Clay, thinking to embarrass him, asked him what he could say new of American Eclipse. Under the fire of expectant glances Blackburn remained silent while the glasses were being filled, then rising, with triumphant smile, he said, "Eclipse among horses as Henry Clay among men."

PHILADELPHIA may justly be termed the cradle of the American trotting horse. The Hunting Park Association was formed in Philadelphia in 1828, and the first recorded race in America took place within the limits of the City of Brotherly Love in 1810. The record is worthy of reproduction in this connection. The Sporting Magazine, of London, publishes a letter from a "Constant Reader," dated Philadelphia, Sept. 3, 1810, in which he reports: "On Saturday, Aug. 25th, a chestnut horse from Boston trotted in a sulky one mile in 2:48½ for $600, to the astonishment of all present. The horse is fourteen years old and barely 15 hands high."

A LARGELY attended meeting of citizens interested in the Race Track Association was held Saturday. Articles of incorporation in the sum of $5,000 have been forwarded to Sacramento. Joseph Bassford, D. O. Clayton, J. W. Smith, of Vacaville, James Connor and R. Allison, of Elmira township, have been elected as Directors. D. C. Clayton has been chosen as General Manager to superintend the construction of the race track, work on which will be commenced as soon as possible. Taken all in all, the outlook for a successful association is good. The ground is as good as could have been found, and centrally located as it is, will draw turfmen from all sections of the State.—Vacaville Reporter.

IN a private letter to C. W. Williams, of Indedendence, Jackson I. Case, of Hickory Grove, says the little demon, Jay-Eye-See, who electrified the world by his speed in 1883, and who not quite eight years ago held the championship record, has been put to pacing and has quite hopeful expectations that at this less laborious gait the son of Dictator and Midnight will reveal the exceptional speed and gameness he undoubtedly still possesses. His trotting days are over forever, owing to his ailing limbs, but the pacing gait may open a new sphere of usefulness for him. Jay-Eye-See has been entered in the $5,000 stake for 2:30 pacers to be decided at Independence next August.

THERE are a large number of youngsters receiving their first lessons in trotting and pacing to harness on the mile track at the Oakwood Park Stock Farm. Ed Laverty has had his hands full, but he says there are some there that will repay him well for his trouble. The other day he drove Prince Red a little, and was happy to see that his predictions regarding this big son of Red Wilkes were verified, for he is a beautifully-gaited trotter and will trot very fast when prepared for the races. The Allandorf mare, None Better, (sister to Strong Boy, 2:12), is taking most kindly to her work, and will make a very low record this fall. If the weather continues dry the track will be as fast as the kite-shaped course at Stockton.

THE directors of the big trotting associations are becoming aware of the fact that at least one $10,000 stake is almost a necessity on the programme. The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Stake in Detroit has for several seasons been the feature of the Blue Ribbon meeting, the Flower City $10,000 stake has been the mainstay of the Rochester meeting, and the Charter Oak Stake at Hartford has been the feature of the Grand Circuit. This year big stakes promise to be more numerous, for besides those maintained Secretary McCrocker, of Pittsburg says that city will have a $10,000 race. Buffalo will have one and perhaps two, while Springfield has a $5,000 stake and every city on the Grand Circuit has one excepting Cleveland.

THE experiences in the breeding business are of a great variety. They seem different as we view them through different glasses. Among our difficulties some seem made of iron or lead, so mighty are they and so inclined to crush our most sanguine hopes; some seem made of straw, apparently so light, and yet so bulky that they are just as unpleasant to carry. Among our expectations some seem made of gold or precious stones that dazzle our eyes and excite our most earnest endeavors to realize them; others like an ignuus fatus keep continually bobbing up before our eyes urging us to persevere,and yet never seem to come near enough to be within our reach. And yet we must keep our sails trimmed and our plow headed straight, for hope never seems "to spread her golden wings but on unfathomable seas."

HEALDSBURG will soon have a novelty in the way of a track, says the Tribune. A kite-shaped track is in the course of construction by Jirah Luce at his residence just east of town. It will be a three-quarter track, and will be used by Mr. Luce for private training, and will not be thrown open to the use of the public. In explaining its advantages Mr. Luce stated that it was several seconds faster than the old style circular track as it gives the horse a long straight stretch on the start, and having only one turn, enables a horse to go at his maximum speed almost entirely around the track, instead of being compelled to slow down while rounding the two curves as on the old style course. Mr. Luce has a number of fine broodmares that are in foal to well-known racing stock, and also a string of young colts, notably among which being an Echo Royal two-year-old out of a McClelland mare from which Mr. Luce expects great speed.

COL. HARRY I. THORNTON last week made a flying trip to this city from his new ranch at Fresno. Monroe Salisbury met him, and after visiting Rancho Resaca we learned that the latter gentleman purchased the two Director colts out of thoroughbred mares that were there. One of them is out of Aurora and the other Lugena, both by Thad Stevens. He also purchased a half interest in the handsome Director three-year-old stallion Reflector. Mr. Salisbury knows "a good thing or two" in the horse business whenever he accidentally sees it, and we take pleasure in congratulating him on these late acquisitions to his string of "good ones at Pleasanton!"

P. J. MALONEY, of Menlo Park, owner of the handsome bay stallion Menlo Fallis, 2:27¾, writes that the sister to this speedy youngster is in foal to Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and he expects a world-beater. We earnestly hope this gentleman will not be disappointed. The dam of Menlo Fallis was called Lucille, and was by Erwin Davis out of Dazzle, by Dorsey's Golddust. A ride behind her over the mountains to Pescadero is one of our most pleasant reminiscences. A gamer, truer or more faithful roadster than she would be hard to find. Up hill and down hill it seemed to make no difference; her strong way of going was as play for her, A touch of the whip she never needed, and a kind word to keep her from going too rapidly was all that was necessary. Such a mare as she was always proves the best matron, and Menlo Fallis is in every way worthy of her.

AFTER Monroe Salisbury saw how fast the two yearlings by Director out of thoroughbred mares (which he recently bought from Col. Thornton,) could trot, he became very enthusiastic over this evidence of the gait-controlling powers of his ebony favorite and forthwith purchased from N. J. Stone of Brookside farm, the handsome bay mare Belmonta, by Acrobat, (brother to Osceola); first dam, Biddy by Rifleman, (sire of Col. Lewis 2:19¾) second dam, Mary Butte, by Belmont (sire of Venture 2:27¼, and the dams of Belle Echo, 2:20; Nellie Patchen, 2:27¼, and three others in the 2:30 list); third dam, by Boston, Jr. (Independence). Acrobat and Osceola were by Norfolk, from Black Maria, by Belmont; second dam by Billy Cheatham; third dam, Lola Montez, by Grey Eagle. There is plenty of good blood represented in this mare and as she will be bred to Direct 2:06, a horse that never was seen to run a yard in his life, the progeny will be worth watching.

Two men of prominence in the trotting-horse world passed over "the great divide" during the past week. The first was "Uncle" Ben Wright, whose fame was linked with Fearnaught, 2:23¼, in the sixties. He was born in 1819, in New Hampshire, and for over thirty years was identified with the trotting-horse interest. He built the old Riverside track at Boston, and later on the track at Beacon Park, and was also the builder of the Mystic Park track. Uncle Ben bred trotters in Maine, Michigan and Kentucky, and was one of the most popular men connected with the trotting turf. Hon. S. W. Wheelock, who died at Moline, Ill., Friday last, was a prominent manufacturer of that city. As a breeder of trotting horses, a "side issue" with him, he met with a fair degree of success. The best trotter of his breeding is Bonnie McGregor, 2:13½. He also bred Madam Kirkwood, Jr., dam of Billy McGregor, 2:30, and owned Ripple, sire of Colonel Crockett, 2:29¼. He was a native of Western New York, and was sixty-seven years old.

THE market for fancy carriage teams will surely widen every year. Then men that buy such horses can afford to pay high prices and they will do so. It seems to me the farmer who has time to train the colts can earn some nice pin money breeding such teams. How to breed such teams, however, is not the easiest question to answer. Some have been patronizing imported coach sires and many such have been disappointed in the results. Not many, comparatively speaking, of these imported coachers have pedigrees that recommend them as sires. Too often they are simply the result of a thoroughbred cross on a draft mare. This usually makes nice stylish horses, but they breed "scatteringly," and can be depended upon to reproduce themselves to just about the extent that a cross between a Jersey and a Shorthorn can be depended upon to get first class feeding steers. We have right at home the best material in the world from which to build up a coach breed, and ten chances to one the man who works up by using our largest sound trotting sires will get there quicker than the fellow who depends upon foreign blood.

ED. ROTHSCHILD, President of the Portland Driving Club and Agricultural Association, called in to see us the other day. He is the same pleasant young gentleman that he was when he left this city to take up his abode in the Webfoot State, and looks as if Dame Fortune's smiles find a resting place upon his business life. He is one of the partners in the celebrated firm of A. P. Hotaling & Co., and enjoys an extensive business and social acquaintance throughout the entire Northwest. Ed has a hobby—by the way, it is one that the greatest men in America enjoy with him—and that is to have a good horse. He goes further—he has a stable full of good ones—and we have reason to believe that the ruddy glow on his cheek, the brightness of his eye and his healthy appearance can all be attributed to his daily drives out to the track and on the roads around the busy city of the North. He says that the prospects for a good year among horsemen were never better, and he wants to welcome all who will attend the meetings that will be given by the Portland Association. To those who have heretofore attended these meetings this invitation is not necessary, for they will go if they have to sell a horse to get there.

CHARLES DURFEE has definitely decided to keep McKinney in Los Angeles. This information will be hailed with delight by every breeder in this section of the country. McKinney is the fastest four-year-old stallion in the world, and there is not a more promising campaigner in America. To show the appreciation in which McKinney is held, L. J. Rose has decided to breed two of the most sensational broodmares ever owned at Rosemeade. Reference is made to Minnehaha and Almeh. Minnehaha can certainly be claimed as the greatest broodmare in America. Almeh is a daughter of Minnehaha, and is a full sister to Alcazar, the most sensational young sire in America. Walter Maben has decided to breed Lucy R., 2:18¼, to McKinney. Lucy R. is the fastest daughter of Sultan. Dr. K. D. Wise will breed Tempest, the dam of that game young sire Glendine, who made a record of 2:20 at Los Angeles several months since. L. U. Shippee has agreed to send to the embrace of McKinney a full sister to the fastest trotter ever raised at the Shippee ranch. Mares have also been booked to McKinney as far away as Aberdeen, Washington. It pays to own a champion stallion.—Los Angeles Herald.

R. D. Fox, of Wayne, Santa Clara county, has a very promising trotter in Chancellor, 2:30, but he pins his faith on two Sable Wilkes' colts. He has a two-year-old and a three-year-old out of a sister of Chancellor's, besides a filly out of the dam of this handsome horse by Sable Wilkes. They are perfect pictures of their sire, and have all his identical action in trotting. Mr. Fox says "he is not afraid of trotting his horses in a race. I may, and I may not win, but," he added, "no horseman in the State can ever hope to win against the judges that were placed in charge of some of the meetings last year." This seems to be the universal sentiment among all owners, and it is the duty of associations to see to it that no more complaints of this nature will be heard of this year.

ROBERT MCGREGOR is forcing himself to the front through his get. He is twenty years old, but most of his life was spent in training and racing. It was just eight years ago last October that he made his record of 2:17½ over the uneven track at Fort Worth, Texas, and the rapidity with which his get are now entering the list at an early age speaks volumes for his prepotency, while his purity of gait is demonstrated by the fact that no pacers are in it. Up to the close of 1890 he had fifteen trotters to his credit, with Bonnie McGregor, 2:13½, at its head, and four of the number were but three years old and under. In 1891 the list was augmented by thirteen new comers, making in all twenty-eight performers. Six of the thirteen were four years old and under, and they showed extreme speed. Four of the thirteen previously in the list materially reduced their records in 1891, and all have the great and distinguishing excellence that they are racehorses. The star of Robert McGregor is undoubtedly in the ascendant.

ARE stallion fees too high? That the fee demanded for many stallions is too high is no doubt true, but while there is now and then a stallion whose owner compels the public to pay more than he should to breed to his horse, the cases are very rare. The owner of any stallion who depends to any great extent upon the public for patronage cannot, for any length of time, fix a fee above actual worth. The patronizing public must be the judges and their decision is final. If the breeders who patronize stallions standing for public service furnish the owners of these horses a reasonable number of mares each year at the advertised fee it is proof beyond dispute that the fee demanded is not too high. The fee of stallions whose books fill reasonably well year after year is not too high. When a stallion cannot fill his book at the advertised fee the owner will sooner or later learn that the public, who must be the judges, consider the fee demanded above his value.

JOSEPH DOANE, of Toronto, Ont., recently took to the farm of Major B. G. Thomas, of Lexington, Ky., two important purchases of the latter gentleman, who, by the way, has just returned to the breeders' rank after two years' absence. The horses were the imported English stallion Masetto and the race mare Winona. Masetto, four years old, was brought out from England by Mr. Haines of Owen Sound, for Mr. J. C. Smith, of Toronto. He is a grand looking thoroughbred, in color a rich brown, stands 16.1, and is a royally-bred horse. He is by St. Simon (by Galopin, by Vedette, by Voltigeur, by Voltaire), dam Lady Abbess (dam of Del Demonico) by Cathedral; second dam Lady Tophie, by King Tom; third dam Bridle, by The Saddler; fourth dam Moneda, by Taurus; fifth dam Mona, by Partisan; sixth dam Meltonia, by Patriot, seventh dam Miss Murton, by King Fergus, etc. The above breeding is rich in winning blood on both sides of the house, and the individual excellence of Masetto is likely to make him a popular sire with the breeders of Kentucky. Mr. Smith intends to breed the following mares owned by him to the Englishman: Miss Jeffrey, Lulu S., Tolima, Bandalk, Winona and Miss Rye. Major Thomas has also booked his Himyar mares to him and he will be allowed to serve about twenty outsiders.

THE trotting horse is becoming the horse of the people. Why is this? Because he has the qualities which fit him for the uses which the modern man has for horses. He has intelligence, endurance and "legs of iron, and sinews of steel." In short he is a horse of civilization. If size and weight are required the trotting-bred horse will furnish them so far as compatible with suppleness of action, great endurance, style and ability to go long distances fast and come back at the same gait. He comes bearing claims to practical utility in an age that is largely industrial. He brings with him that charm of usefulness which secures recognition not only on the race track but from the man of industry and business—in fact, everywhere a horse can be used. He has a place on every farm, on the road, in the livery stable, and as an all-purpose horse he is right at home. He is the companion of gentlemen of leisure and is the horse for the man not cumbrously burdened with this world's goods. He is a necessity to the rich, a boom to the poor and a luxury to the great majority that are neither rich or poor. From his loins shall come the American horse of the future which will as far excel the members of the equine race elsewhere as his master will excel his brothers of all nations.

L. SWAN, of Yreka, Cal., gave us a pleasant call this week, and showed a splendid picture of a wonderful gray mare belonging to him named Georgia Woodthorpe. The mare was named after the popular actress of this name, and the latter stands alongside of her gentle equine namesake. The mare is by Altamont from a daughter of Old Jake, an Oregon trotting horse, and will be eight years old in the Spring. While Georgia Woodthorpe is but fourteen hands one inch in height, she has very powerful limbs, clean-cut, handsome, intelligent head and deep through the heart. She has never been handled to any extent for speed until now, and Mr. Swan has reason to believe that she will beat 2:20 this season. Last fall, over the Yreka track, which is twenty-six feet over the mile and not by any means fast, this little gray mare went an exhibition half in 1:07, jogging the first quarter in 35½ and doing the final one in 31¾, a 2:07 gait. Mr. Swan says she is in fine shape now, and that she will be heard from. Besides Georgia Woodthorpe, Mr. S. owns a fine blood bay stallion, five years old, named Ante-Echo, by Antevolo 2:19½, dam by Echo. Mr. Swan says he will take the horse to Oregon, near Portland, and have him make a season there, in all probability. There is in the string also a full sister to Ante-Echo, three years old, called Zephyr, and she is a very fast pacer. All the above horses are now quartered at the Lodi track, which Mr. Swan says is in very fair condition at present. Mr. Swan also owns a filly called Victorine, by Ante-Echo, coming two-years-old, 14:1 in height, and weighs 870 pounds. She is an inch and a half higher at the rump than at the withers, and is exceedingly fast.

THE GUN.

A Week's Outing.

[Blue Bell].

Six long days of unalloyed happiness passed away. We had scoured the country for miles around, investigated every item of interest, made friends of all the neighorhood, and had about exhausted our supply of ammunition and provisions. But oue day more, and we would soon be steaming on our way to the metropolis, leaving behind a thousand and one scenes the memories of which would furnish amusement in rainy days to come.

This day of all days happened to be the Fourth of July. Imbued with a desire to startle the natives we decided to celebrate it in a truly magnificent way, so sent down to the city for a supply of "crackers, bombs, rockets, and some flags and torches."

As we contemplated giving an entertainment each accordingly resolved himself into a committee of one and invited everybody for miles around to participate. Our idea met with general approval, and kindly offerings poured in from all sides.

The morning of the Fourth dawned bright and clear. Quickly dispatching a hasty breakfast, all hands set out to complete the arrangments of the previous day, and have everything in readiness for the arrival of the guests. Through the kindness of the men at the saw-mill we had obtained lumber sufficient to erect a presentable stage. The driving of a few nails was all the attention it required apart from the decoration we had prepared.

Pug and I had worked late the night before and all the spare time we could find that morning, gathering evergreens, vines, ferns and flowers, and had fashioned a "Welcome" notable only for its size. As Bobby was the most nimble one in the crowd he was kept like a coon up a tree fastening the greens to the poles, driving a nail here and there, and adjusting flags in the most conspicuous places. Not being a born carpenter, however, his fingers often suffered in consequence, and frequent wails from his quarter gave sign of discontent.

"There Bobby, don't get discouraged. You are doing nobly," I can't refrain saying after a prolonged jumble of Hindoostanee (at least I presume it was some such foreign language) that emanated from his lips.

"It's all very well for you to stand there and sympathize, but it would feel better for you to get some of the bruises!"

How uncharitable! But as he was evidently out of humor I turned to where the others were contemplating the master stroke of art Pug and I had effected.

Nothing now remained but to hang that "Welcome," but how to do it was a poser, there being no cross beams nor archway over the front of the stage.

"Can't we stick it up on props?" inquired Bobby.

"Yes, if it had a backbone which unfortunately it hasn't," I replied.

"Why not throw a rope up over that limb and let it swing in mid-air?" suggested Davis.

"That's the idea! That limb knew what it was about when it inclined this way," comes in a relieved tone from Merrill.

"Just so boys, but how are you going to keep it steady?" asks Belshaw who has quietly been taking observations.

True! How could we manage that? There wasn't such a thing as a step-ladder on the grounds, and the limb was fully fifteen feet above our heads. To throw a rope across would be easy enough, but how to keep that "Welcome's" face to the front when every separate letter was possessed with a desire to turn its back on the crowd, was a question of serious moment just then. "What's the matter with nailing the letters to a slat, tying a rope to each end of the same, and then hoisting it?"

"Big head, Bobby, if we can fasten the ropes securely and not endanger the pate of some venerable auditor."

"Leave that to me, old man," and suiting the action to the word the motto was very effectively disposed of against a background of red bunting, and supported by two-inch slabs. I fastened some Chinese lanterns to the lower one, and all was ready for the final stroke.

"Steady boys," and with a dexterity that savors strongly of a term on the diamond, Bobby soon had both ropes securely fastened to the trunks of some trees that grew at a convenient distance.

"Hello, there comes the organ. Fly around, fellows, and we'll have it landed on short notice. Bring on the tables and chairs, and then we'll look after the benches," I remark as the driver slowly halts in front of our imposing structure.

"Wal neow! Thet's abaout ez purty a sight ez I ever seed!" he managed to say, after the first looks of astonishment wore away, and we certainly could be reasonably pardoned the smile of satisfaction that beamed from all faces as we also surveyed the fruits of our labor.

We filled up the clearing around the stage with benches from the district school and meeting house. There were not many in number, but would at least lend an air of completeness to the general effect.

"First come, first served. The others will have to stand or stay in their wagons," Bob coolly informs me as he wheels the organ into place and adorns it and the table with some flowers that Betty had kindly arranged and sent over that morning.

The finishing touches concluded our labor in this direction, and as the time for the exercises drew near, we repaired to our tents to make as presentable an appearance as a scanty wardrobe would permit. Fortunately in a moment of abstraction, I had put two extra shirts into my valise.

"I say, Fletcher, couldn't you scare up another collar?"

"Where's that stiff shirt you didn't want?"

"Now, if I only had a necktie, I'd be fixed," assailed me as I struck the vicinity of my tent. In fact, Bobby was already trying to make a sixteen collar fit a fifteen shirt. Davis had emptied the contents of my grip on the ground and was in deep study as to which of the shirts would suit him best, while Belshaw had calmly appropriated the only decent tie I possessed.

"That's right, boys, go ahead, don't let me disturb you. Perhaps you'll be kind enough to leave me a clean handkerchief?"

"O yes, there's two, the silk and the other. Do you think you'll need 'em both?" anxiously inquired Bobby as he cast a longing glance at the last remnants of respectabillty I retained.

"Well, if it will help your case with the pretty maid I suppose I can use this one in case of an emergency," displaying a piece of linen that had done good service as a towel, dust-rag and blacking-brush.

"Thanks, thanks awfully, old fellow. It will be quite a relief to revel in the delights of a clean swipe at the last, sad parting hour!"

There is no resisting Bobby, and I relinquish the coveted article, highly amused at his very evident desire to shine on this memorable occasion.

When the boys finally decided to leave me to the seclusion of my tent in peace and pieces, I cautiously down my shaving apparatus from its secure hiding place, and set about making as near a toilet as the few remaining clothes would effect. In the course of the next half hour I parted with quite a disreputable hirsute appendage, of a week's growth. What a difference a shave does make in a fellow, to be sure! The soft, blue neglige and the silk 'kerchief knotted into a tie completed the change, and discarding my rough jacket for the better-looking sack-coat, I emerged into the light of day and among my surprised companions a radically changed being.

"Gaze on that!" "How did you do it?" By George, that takes the bakery, camp-meeting and all!" "Pass the saw around, old man, don't be selfish!" and a few more exclamations in the same strain gave token of their astonishment.

"You are welcome to the razor, friends, but as you had so coolly robbed me of everything else, I concluded to get even by a clean shave."

A wordy war ensued as to which should have first choice, and as Belshaw was to act as chairman of the day he took first turn, Merrill as master of bonfire ceremonies, next, and Pug wound up the list. Bobby sighed as he rubbed his hand across his baby cheeks, for not a sign of beard has condescended to grace his countenance as yet, and this subject was a sore one with him in consequence.

"Patience, my dear boy, patience. All things come to him who waits!"

"Yes, but how long does a fellow usually have to wait, Fletcher?"

"That depends—some a long time, and some not so long. Now in your case I should think it would take a very long time"—and I have just time to dodge my head after this sally when a piece of bark makes a rapid transit in my direction. Evidently I am not in good favor with him at present.

"Here, you fellows, better take a bite before the fun begins," calls Belshaw a short time afterward, who has managed to get the coffee pot boiling in an incredibly short space of time. With an eye to business he had laid by some roast fowl the day before, and now with the aid of some cold ham, sardines and a raspberry pie, we fared sumptuously. He had also a little surprise in store for us. While our attention had been directed to other things he had concocted a bowl of steaming punch, and 'twas not long till we were passing compliments over each goodly glass, and heaping benedictions upon the maker's head. Verily, that punch had the desired effect for a spirit of raillery and good humor pervaded the crowd, and we hailed the now fast approaching multitude with a cordiality unrivaled in its sincerity and expression, I dare say.

The people came singly and in pairs, in trios and in crowds; on foot and on horseback, in carts and in wagons; in fact, in any available way and in all conditions so they got there.

Old men and young, stern mammas and blushing maidens, restless youths and crying babies congregated in the shade of oak and pine in homage of old Independence Day. Every inch of ground was covered and the benches crowded, and a lusty cheer rang clear and long as the participants mounted the rostrum.

The programme consisted of musical and literary exercises which Belshaw, after much hemming and hawing, finally announced. Conquering a desire to grow pale and red by turns, his voice gradually increased in volume, and he closed the opening remarks in a decidedly forcible and patriotic manner. With a view to placing the audience and the speakers at ease with one another, Betty Barlow was prevailed upon to take possession of the organ stool, and as she struck the chords of "America" the grand old melody rolled out from lusty throats in a way that would have put to shame the efforts of many a well-drilled chorus.

Following upon this was the presentation of the orator of the day. I could feel my hair assume an upright position, my heart paid an unceremonious visit to the roof of my mouth. I once thought my senses contemplating taking a leave of absence at a most critical moment, but a titter from Bobby checked their mad career, and by the time our chairman had concluded his remarks my old spirit of bravado had returned and I bowed (gracefully, I hope) to the enthusiastic audience that beamed upon me from the benches in front.

For the last two days I had vainly tried to settle upon some grand and stirring thoughts with which to open my address. Several had come to me, but in the excitement of that moment everything eluded my mental grasp like a slippery eel. In sheer desperation I fired away at the first thought that presented itself and luckily hit upon a good thing. Referring to the early Colonial days, I spoke of the hardships and privations endured and overcome, and then how the dark cloud of war had settled upon a fair domain, turning green fields and fertile valleys into scenes of bloody strife. (By this time my bosom began to heave and my voice grow strong in the intensity of emotion.)

I next portrayed the men in the field and in all other walks in life rushing from their work at the first roll of the drum; how every highway teemed with throbbing hearts, and sinewy arms shouldered muskets wherever a banner fluttered in the breeze; how Columbia's sons forsook family, friends and home, to join the line of march against the insolent dictator of their rights; then dwelt at length on the tortures that were endured during the seven long years' struggle, in the battlefield and around the hearthstones of desolate homes.

Fired to the core I spoke of Lexington and Concord, described Gridley plowing the entrenchments, Knowlton erecting his line of soil-fence that the bullets might prove true on their deadly mission; swung around to the battle of Bunker Hill, whose anniversaries commemorate the cause of liberty, wound up with the defeat of the English lion, its hurried departure for home, the supremacy of truth and justice in the end and closed the peroration with

> Tell of the fight that gives freedom to-day!
> And while ye are ringing in belfries so high,
> Give glory and honor to Fourth of July!"

I sat down amid a burst of applause, shamefully covered with glory, as Bobby afterwards took pains to remark, and mopped the dew from my throbbing temples, not fully recovering my normal condition until the last lines of the Star Spangled Banner died away in the breeze.

Bobby convulsed the audience with his "Ghost of an Old Continental" and similar selections. An impromptu band waded bravely through a medley of patriotic airs, in which the second trombone played fantastic freaks with unwritten music.

A vocal duet rendered by Merrill and Davis met with vociferous applause and an encore was imperatively demanded.

There remained a couple of hours before dusk and the display of the fire-works, so with one accord the contents of lunch baskets were promptly revealed and as promptly disappeared.

Compliments and congratulations flew in all directions, jokes and repartee seemed to be the order of the day, and with the first sign of weariness, a sizzing rocket revived the interest.

The lack of time precluded the possibility of set pieces, but we sincerely hoped that the abundance of bombs, double-headers, Roman candles, wheels and rockets, would amply compensate for the deficiency.

There was certainly a great neal of noise if not a variety of pieces, and for two hours those woods rung with the explosion of bombs, the roll of drums, the tooting of horns, and the joyous shouts and laughter of happy hearts. Never before had those hills echoed such reverberations! Never before had the birds, who sat in open-eyed astonishment, been witness of such hilarity!

Merry were the games played round the monstrous bonfires, and many the kisses stolen in their lengthened shadows.

As the hours stole on and our ammunition was finally exhausted the guests gradually departed leaving us once more in undisturbed possession of the camp. One by one the other bon-fires died out, but we kept ours in full blast, taking turns to supply the fuel. Gathered around its cheery flames every incident of the day was related, a few stories told by way of diversion, and the plans for the morrow's departure arranged. Not noting the flight of time, the wee' sma' hours had stolen upon us, ere we were aware, and as Nature made her influence felt at last, we bade each other a hearty good-night to seek the comfort of our couch and snatch an hour's rest before dawn.

* * * * *

One more visit to the spring, one last glimpse of the river bank, one final survey of our camping spot and the towering trees that pierced the heaven's dome—and we turned our backs on a scene of rural beauty to revel once more in the smoke and fog and windy delights of 'Francisco.

That ride was the very thing to restore us to a degree of soberness, and we reached home tired and worn out from an excess of jollity, very glad to meet our sweethearts and friends and relate the most marvelous bear tales out of print.

Capturing Buffalo Calves on the Western Plains.

Preparations for the chase were now made in hot haste, but with care and precision. Lasses were critically examined to see that they were in order. The spiked clubs were got out and their points inspected, and tested to make sure that they were firm in their sockets. Everything not needed was packed away in the wagons, even to the rifles, as they would be cumbersome and useless, for, the object was not to kill, but to capture alive.

There were fifteen hunters. Seven carried revolver and club; eight, revolver and lasso.

The girths of saddles were carefully and securely adjusted. Two men drove the teams, and one the cows, while the extra horses were tied behind the wagons. Dr. Thompson, having recovered from his drunken fit, was told to climb into one of the wagons. To this he demurred. He begged to be allowed to ride old Breck, and volunteered, if permitted to do so, to assist the teamsters, and in driving the loose stock. But the only saddle we had for old Breck was a pack-saddle which was an uncomfortable thing to ride on. Captain Clark here said that he had an extra saddle, the use of which we were welcome to, and that we could put the pack in one of the wagons. As his proffer of assistance was the first thing the Doctor had volunteered to do, he was told to go ahead, which he did with alacrity, and in very quick time was proudly mounted on the back of the old mule. Everything being in readiness, we sallied forth; the hunters, headed by Captain Clark and old Joe. Hewitt in advance; our little party close upon their heels. The teams and loose stock with their drivers and old Breck, bucking his remonstrance against being ridden by such a vagabond as Dr. Thompson, bringing up the rear.

The morning was brilliant; the air bracing. Everybody was in high spirits, including the horses who tossed their heads and champed their bits, impatient of restraint and eager for action. Though we moved at no swifter pace than a walk, for the first two or three miles, the cattle were soon left far in the rear. It was easy, however, to follow the trail, and they plodded slowly and diligently along after us. A ride of about three miles brought us to the crest of a low ridge, or roll, in the plain. Beyond this ridge was one dead-level of meadowy landscape. About two miles away was the herd of buffalo reported by the reconnoitering party. They were considerably spread out, in the form of a circle, the bulls forming the periphery; the cows and calves inside; all grazing except the calves, who were frisking about as playful as lambs.

They could be plainly seen through a field-glass though they were distinguishable without it.

Two or three minutes halt was made at the brow of the ridge to view the situation and take bearings, and to admire the scene, which was one of charming, pastoral beauty. The hunters, however, seemed to care nothing for the unique beauty of the scene. Their thoughts were bent on other things: the calves they were after, and how many they were likely to capture from this herd. The buffalo, though they must have seen us, paid no attention to us. The sight of a party of horsemen in the distance was neither strange nor new to them. They kept on grazing, never lifting their heads.

After viewing the situation, Captain Clark gave orders to advance, directing that the pace be still a walk, but saying; "Watch me boys, and do as I do."

While riding toward the herd several gray wolves were seen, and one enormous black one. Some of them were near enough for a good shot, but they were not molested, as the crack of a rifle might alarm the quarry prematurely. They were very deliberate in getting out of the way and would frequently turn and look defiantly at us. They didn't fear the presence of man in those days, and nothing but an ounce of lead would teach them a decent respect for their superiors. Strychnine is used nowadays. They reminded me of the bijesus plug-ugly, whose normal condition is fighting, and who is always daring someone to knock a chip off his shoulder. When about a mile from the buffalo they began to show signs of uneasiness. Some of the big bulls raised their heads and looked. An alarm was given. In an instant all was motion and commotion. In less than a minute they were formed in the order of retreat and fleeing northward. The commotion ceased but the motion continued and the retreat was as orderly and steady as that of a body of soldiers. Their order of flight was as follows: They were formed somewhat in the shape of a horse-shoe; the largest bulls in front forming the toe; the lesser ones forming the flanks or sides, and grading down to the heels of the shoe; cows next on the inside; the calves huddled together in the middle, well up to the toe. Running in this form it is impossible for wolves to get at the calves, and very difficult for the most experienced hunters, even when gathered in force, and mounted on good horses, and provided with the most approved implements to accomplish; it requires skill, courage, muscle; with coolness, and steady nerve, combined with a spice of dare-devil.

While running with their calves aherd of buffalo is easily overtaken by a good horse. They move more slowly than when not retarded for the protection of the calves. If they dashed off at their highest speed the little fellows would soon tire and fall behind, becoming an easy prey to hungry wolves.

As soon as the herd started in flight, following Captain Clark's lead, we dashed after them, but not at full speed. The Captain was an old and experienced plainsman and knew every trait and habit of the buffalo.

He knew that we would soon overtake them at an easy gallop, and he did not wish to wind the horses, but to reserve them for the final struggle. Even at the pace we were riding we were rapidly gaining on the herd. Though deeply excited by the novelty of the situation, the anticipation of a new experience and adventure, the ride and the flying buffalo and the roar of their hoof-beats, and exhilarated by the bracing, cool, sweet air of the morning, I found time, during the few minutes that elapsed before overtaking them to study and admire them; to observe the steadiness and evenness of their gait; the concert and rythm of their motion, rising and falling in regular, measured cadence like the gentle waves of the summer sea; to listen to the steady, continuous roar of their hoof-beats, like the roar of a cataract; and, through the thunder of it, there seemed to run a chord of grand music accompanied by an undertone of low, sweet harmony; and there was another tone that wove itself in and out, over and under and between the two, like the woof through the warp of the web. For a minute I repented me that I was one of a party whose mission it was to destroy and capture in order to pander to the curiosity and capidity of man.

But then, I pondered, curiosity is an innate quality of the mind and endowment of Nature. Without it, but little progress would be made. Cupidity is something of the same character, but it goes farther; it is acquisitiveness abnormally developed. And then, the interests of science must be subserved, or progression would become retrogression. Man must also subsist, and, being the higher animal and the more intelligent, he subsists chiefly on the lower, as he has done through all the past ages, and probably will do through all the ages to come, despite those Utopian theories and dreams of the theorists, who, in the dim future, see the "lion and the lamb lie down together" in peace and harmony, and a little child leading them with a tow string when they get up to graze.

That the strong should prey upon the weak is the order of Nature. Recognizing the fact, regrets and philosophizing ceased, and I turned my attention to the wolves. On either hand was scattered a score of them. We could have shot some of them if we had wanted to, for they took no especial care to keep out of rifle range. But we were not hunting wolves, did not want any, and they were left unmolested. They ran nearly abreast of us well up on the flanks of the herd; loping along with an easy, swinging motion; keeping pace with it; long, lank and lean, like that most noble Roman, "the lean and hungry Cassius." I was reminded of Byron's description of the wolves that followed Mazeppa through the dreary night of his naked ride, "With their long gallop that can tire the hounds deep hate, the hunters ire." Is not the word lope derived from lupu—wolf?

We were close upon the quarry. From the time the buffaloes started in their flight not a word had been uttered. With set jaws and determined faces, which, under the suppressed excitement, showed lines of anxiety as well as of eagerness, the hunters had no eyes nor ears for anything but game. The thought of gain, or profit, was subordinated to the spirit of the chase. Captain Clark gave the signal for preparation. Lassoes were unstrung from the horn of the saddle, and clubs poised, ready for use. The pace of the horses was accelerated. Urging them forward, the gap between us and the rear of the column of buffalo was soon closed. and we dashed right into it. The leaders of the herd neither increased their speed nor changed their course. They were, apparently, unconscious of what was taking place in the rear. And now occurred one of the most exciting and spirit-stirring scenes that, except on the battle field, I ever witnessed.

To reach the calves it was necessary to disperse the bulls and the cows as well; to force them aside and forward. It was the most difficult and arduous part of the work and to accomplish it required nerves of steel and the strength of Hercules, combined with the activity of Mercury.

The task was successfully performed by the brawny clubmen. With their spiked clubs they forced their way right into the midst of the dense mass, wielding their clubs with tremendous power; beating the animals on the horns with the iron-knobbed butt end of the club to turn them aside; with the spiked end prodding them in the rump to push them forward. Every time one of them was hit on the horns he would shake his head angrily and viciously would swerve aside as far as possible, and, by crowding those outside of him push himself a little farther outward. When prodded in the rump with the spike end of the club they would spring forward as far as possible, writhing with the pain of it, and sometimes attempt to leap over those in front of them; but they never turned at bay nor attempted to retaliate on their tormentors. The instinct, or knowledge, that taught them to stop in the midst of flight was sure death, pervaded the rear as well as the front, and their only thought seemed to be to go ahead and get out of the way. To disperse this dense mass was a herculean task, and the club-men worked like Titans. For some time the impression made was hardly perceptible, but, little by little, the rear of the column was forced aside and scattered.

While this work was going on no order was given, and not a word was spoken. Each man knew his duty and performed it. There were no shoutings, or, if there were, the sound was lost in the thunder of the ten-thousand hoofs beating the ground and creating a roar that drowned all other noise. Rider and horse and buffalo were mixed in seemingly inextricable confusion. Grim, cool and determined, the club-men steadily pursued their work. In the midst of it, in the thickest of the battle, I saw Cooper. He had quietly procured an extra club and left his rifle behind, determined to have a hand in whatever fray presented itself. With jaws set and face ablaze with excitement, he was prodding and clubbing with an energy and zeal and power that surprised even the old hunters. Under Cooper's unusually calm exterior lay dormant a latent tiger, which when fully aroused by the excitement of the chase knew nothing but to destroy. He was the only one of our little party that took part in the work of dispersion and capture, though the rest of us kept close up to the hunters to see it done, and entered into the spirit almost as heartily as if we had been participants. The thought of the cruelty of it never entered our minds, though afterwards it was often referred to. The buffalo at the head of the column paid no attention to what was occuring in the rear. They looked not back, neither swerved to the right nor the left. They kept right on, never changing their rythmic, wave-like motion. They had no alternative but to keep moving. To stop, or attempt to turn round, would have been sure death. The momentum of that living, moving mass behind would have overwhelmed them, and they would have been trampled to death. The calves were reached at last, but after a hard-fought battle with the bulls. And now, the lassos commenced to whirl and whiz through the air, and the nooses to fall over the heads of the little ones. It required no great expertness in throwing the lasso, however, if it had I think the work of capture would have been indefinitely prolonged, for the lasso-men were not experts. The calves did not scatter, but kept huddled together, running in the same relative position to the toe of the horse-shoe that they assumed at the start. They could be ridden close up and the noose was sometimes slipped over their heads without throwing the lasso. It was a strange thing that the cows made no effort to protect their calves, but kept rolling right along with the herd. Countless generations of herdity had made the instinct of self-perservation by flight in compact masses more powerful than mother-love. When caught the calves would struggle and plunge furiously, and fight like demons until reduced to submission by the tightening of the noose around their necks. Two of them were choked to death before the noose could be loosened, but they were not lost. They made good veal. As fast as caught they were tied short to a rope stretched between the stakes, so that they could move neither to the right nor to the left, and a man was detailed to guard them from the wolves, for it left to themselves the wolves would have made short work of them. The reason for two stakes with a rope stretched between them was to keep them from harming themselves. They were such vicious little beasts that they would never cease fighting and struggling until utterly exhausted, and then only long enough to rest awhile. If tied to a single stake and given a little rope they would entangle themselves in it and, probably, choke to death. If tied short they would butt at the stake viciously and either butt it down and escape or, kill themselves in their desperate efforts to get away.

In an incredibly short time the number of calves wanted was secured. It might have been longer than it seemed, for, in the excitement, time was not noted. Where hot work is going on, to those interested time flies. Captain Clark signaled a halt, which was responded to by all except C. E. Bigelow. For him to halt was impossible. He couldn't halt because he had got his horse taugled up with the buffalo. He was one of the club men, cool-headed and powerful, but in the excitement and enthusiasm of the chase had pushed too far into the herd, which closed in behind him, and he was so mixed up with the fleeing buffalo that he couldn't extricate himself and he had to flee with them or be trampled. He was in a worse predicament than the six hundred at Balaklava. Buffalo to the right of him, buffalo to the left of him, buffalo in front of him, buffalo in rear of him, trampled and thung dered. I was greatly alarmed for his safety, and Cooper sung out: "To the rescue, boys," and mounted his horse—we had all dismounted—while Rainbow and Horn followed suit. Captain Clark and the others took matters very coolly. The captain said: "Don't be alarmed. He is in no danger. He knows how to take care of himself, and will soon force his way out." "But," I said, "is there no danger of his horse being gored and killed by the bulls, and of his being trampled? "No," he said, "there is more danger from the cows who have lost their calves, but he is not among them. From the cows, even, there is but little danger, for in running no cow knows exactly where her calf is, because they are all bunched together. The bulls, if he keep pace with them, will not trouble him. Of course, if he attempts to force his way out at a right angle with the line of travel, he will be run down and the chances are, killed. But he knows better than to attempt it. He is safe enough. While running, buffalo never stop to fight. They must keep pace with the herd lest they get trampled by those behind. An attempt to rescue Bigelow might be fatal to him, and to others, perhaps." While we were talking, Bigelow was working with desperate energy to free himself, swinging his club with the power of an athlete, pounding horns and prodding rumps, gradually working his way out.

After being carried along with the herd about three miles, he succeeded in extricating himself, horse and rider, safe and sound. Cooper, Horn and Rainbow had ridden on the flank of the herd abreast of him, ready to render any assistance in their power, but Bigelow motioned them to keep back, which they did. Had they been foolhardy enough to dash into the flank of the herd to make an opening for Bigelow's escape, it would have been almost certain death to them. They leisurely rode back to where we were standing, near the last batch of calves captured, talking, joking and laughing in great glee, Bigelow the jolliest of all. His adventure acted on his spirits with the effect of champagne, and he sparkled and effervesced, though he pretended to make light of his adventure; in fact, to regard it as no adventure at all, but only as jolly good sport. But his face beamed and his eyes sparkled, showing that in his "inner consciousness" he was exultant. He had not learned to assume the stoic expression of the nomad of the plains.

The Way to Kill Quail.

Did you never pause to observe how great a difference there is in the way men perform similar feats?

We have all observed how gracefully some horses carry themselves while measuring the ground over the race course while others, perhaps equally as swift, perform the feat in a far less attractive manner. In all the animal kingdom possessed of ease of movement, grace may be said to be an inherent quality. The flight of birds, the motion of the fishes, the grace of the wild deer, the antelope, or merry squirrel gamboling in the topmost branches of the woodland trees, are all perfect because they are inherent, natural, unacquired.

In ordinary avocations, the American people, as a class, cannot be said to possess a great amount of grace. The very air of our environments seems to have tended toward making us an angular race rather than otherwise.

My mind was called to this line of thought by a short conversation held but a few days since with one of the oldest and most celebrated quail shots in the city. Mr. John K. Orr, senior member of the well-known firm of Orr & Atkins, gents furnishers, is known by all the sportsmen of this Coast as one of the neatest and most accomplished quail shots in the entire country.

We have men, a number of them, who are amply able to bag almost every possible bird offered, but we have but few men who can be said to have attained that ease and grace in shooting while at the same time exercising that care and judgment necessary to permit their birds attaining a sufficient distance so that when shot they will not be mutilated and rendered, as they all too frequently are, unfit for table use.

Mr. Orr began shooting quail in California at a day when San Francisco was little more than a village, and when the birds were so thick that a sportsman could afford to refuse to accept one-half the rises and yet obtain in half a day all the shooting he could desire.

"I well remember," said Mr. Orr, "some very enjoyable times with the birds in those good old days when the muzzle loader was our only known weapon. We did not consider it a hardship then to use them for there was nothing better, and improvements in fire arms you know are numbered among the articles where it may be truly said that the supply creates the demand.

"We were more than content with our guns in those days and just as proud of them as any one can be now of the best improved patterns of to-day.

"I had sent over to England and secured two very fine guns, 13 and 15, guage and had been having some remarkably fine sport with the quail. The guns shot beautifully and I was priding myself on being able to do a little better execution with them than I had ever known before. It seemed that I was getting along swimmingly and, perhaps, prided myself not a little on my apparent advancement.

"It was, however, about this time that I first formed the acquaintance of a man to whom I owe much as a sportsman. Every old sportsman in California will recall, at the mention of our better wing shots, especially in the field, a trim, rosy-cheeked, courteous Englishman, the very embodiment of the ideal field shot, punctilious in all etiquette of the field and exact to a nicety in all of his methods of sportsmanship from the handling of a gun for inspection to the seeking and caring for the birds when killed.

"The old man, Teddy Leverette by name, was the third of his family in the line of succession, as head game-keeper for some English gentleman. The duty of his grandfather, his father and in succession of himself was to kill the game for the manor and to supervise, direct and control the shooting on the estate.

"Such a course, a position in which he had remained until the mid-autumn of his life, could not but make him an adept in the use of the gun and he was. It was a pleasure to see him kill a bird; it would be done with so much ease and grace and in a manner so finely executed that every bird when picked up would look fit for the taxidermist's table.

"He owned a very biddable dog which he was pleased to call "Sport." I see him now as we hunted along the side of some one of our more open ravines, the dog carefully working through the short open cover before us, his step as measured and graceful as though on dress parade.

"The dogs drew to a point and he came to a "ready" and presently ordered the dog to flush which he did and the bird whirred away; without moving the slightest in position, but keeping his eye on the bird he let it reach the proper distance when he drew and fired simultaneously. There was no puff of feathers floating away in the air from the effect of the shot and seldom would a bird show the wounds where the shot had reached it.

"I had been in the habit of pulling up and "snap-shooting" every bird which would get up before me but I soon saw the lack of sport in such shooting, and under his instruction, I abandoned it. I love quail-shooting, but I love it only when the conditions are such that it may be done well—where one may select the distance their birds may fly before shooting so that they will not be ruined by receiving the full effect of the pattern before it has had time to spread."

We have been much pleased on various occasions to note Mr. Orr's methods and in the above we believe to be conveyed about the proper idea which should govern quail and similar wing-shooting.

A Timely Address.

President S. S. Baker, at the last meeting of the Illinois State Veterinary Association, delivered a spirited address upon the importance of forming strong organizations and having interesting meetings, and among other words of advice used the following:

The benefits to be derived from these meetings are many; a man gets an opportunity to gain new ideas; it takes him out of the old rut he has been running in; gives him a chance to get the dust blown off his best suit of clothes; he sees new faces, puts more money in circulation, and if he is not troubled with big head (not lumpy jaw) he will learn something; he enjoys himself and goes home with fresh vigor to again take up the task of life.

I tell you, gentlemen, in these days of microbes it is not safe for a man to stay away from a meeting, where he may learn something about that which is at the bottom of all diseases, for everything is "germs" now; even we ourselves are full of them, and to prove it, I will, with your kind permission, add something taken from the Texas Health Journal:

"Man, born of woman, is of few days and full of microbes. He standeth in the midst of Micro-Kock-I, and gnaweth on the hock-joint of the razor-back hog until filled with trichinae. It has been said: 'God made man a little lower than the angels," until he hath been a little lower ever since. In cities the food of man is stale vegetables, hydrant water and sewer gas; in the country he groweth 'phat' on pen soup and branch water; at other times he maketh himself sick on sauer-kraut and sendeth for the good physician, who giveth him ipecac and calomel until he cougheth his teeth out. Animals have instincts and man outstincts, neither of which smelleth like a tube rose.

"From teething to unteething is the longer life of man. After the latter he gummeth his soup and drinketh his dried beef. His younger days are filled with wind, but in his old age the wind is knocked out of him. He drinketh bug-juice until his nose shineth with a ten-candle power, and he smoketh the vile weed until he snoreth—when the wind changes and he smelleth his own breath. Verily the seed of woman stone-bruiseth his heel and thumpeth his nose against the screen door. Yea, man is of but few days, and is filled with tanglefoot."

Barks From Berkeley.

By the new ruling of the American Kennel Club the veterinary is properly given more power than formerly. It is utterly impossible for any veterinary to examine 300 to 600 dogs in two hours' time and give each one a careful examination. As the rule now stands it reads, "A dog suffering from eczema, mange or any contagious or objectionable disease shall be disqualified and forfeit any prize which may have been awarded to it, and shall be removed at once from the show building. The regularly appointed veterinary surgeon shall alone decide as to the condition of the dog, and his decision must be given in writing." The veterinary is by this ruling, given the power that he should have. For instance, a puppy is brought to the show with a cold and slight running at the eyes and nose. This may be only a cold, catarrh or the beginning of a severe attack of distemper. No man alive can decide at that particular time whether it is only a cold or the first symptoms of distemper. By the new rule, the surgeon is empowered to refuse the dog admission, or having been benched he may order it removed at once. A dog may come into a show with a cool moist nose and in two days have a violent dose of distemper. He can now be instantly removed. As the rules were last season eczema did not disqualify. But we are pleased to see that it does now, for not one man in twenty knows the difference between eczema and genuine "red" mange. The word objectionable admits of a wide difference in opinion. A dog that has had a bad case of mange but is entirely cured but the hair not yet grown out, may rightly be termed objectionable. Or one all torn up from a recent fight. We are personally inclined to draw a rigid line. The dog show is a display of our best (or should be), and dogs not in good condition are in their proper places at home. The Kennel Club, however, should remember in their selection of a veterinary that the powers invested last year in the committee are now invested in the veterinary.

From now on San Francisco dog men will hear but precious little else but field trials and the coming bench show. We predict that as usual the dark horse will win at the field trials. We have several personal friends that we would be pleased to congratulate, but they cannot all win. Re the coming bench show, the leading question at present is, Who shall be the judge this year? The question of who is the best all-round judge is a very hard one to determine. Very few of our most prominent judges are all-round men. The pointers, setters and foxterriers are unquestionably the classes that are the best filled in our show. But the judge must be a man that is also well acquainted with non-sporting breeds, in order to give complete satisfaction. Our shows to be kept up to standard and increased in size; must be increased mainly by increasing the entries in non-sporting classes. To do this we must employ judges competent to judge non-sporting as well as sporting. In the writer's humble opinion there are but six acknowledged all-round men, namely, Chas. H. Mason, Jas. Mortimer, H. W. Lacy, J. Otis Fellows, ("Uncle Dick"), Jas. Watson, and last, but not least, John Davidson. Two of them I understood cannot be obtained. If the club can possibly afford two judges it would be far better for all concerned.

Bench show committees may now provide "such classes for dogs of established breeds as they choose." We would suggest to the California Kennel Club the formation of a class of Boston Terriers, we noticed several entered in the Bull Terrier class at the last Los Angeles show. For the benefit of the uninitiated we would add that the Boston Terrier is what was formerly known as the "Round head" or "Bull and Terrier."

A dog cannot now obtain the title of champion until he has won one of his three challenge prizes in a show having not less than 500 entries. Well! that's good for San Francisco. Our Northern and Southern friends will have to visit us occasionally or go without the coveted title. New York has raised the entry fee to $5 for each dog, so as to reduce the number of entries. One of these days we will be doing the same thing.

The Bexar Field Trial Club of San Antonio, Texas, and the New England Field Trial Club have both been admitted to the Kennel Club. The Philadelphia Kennel Clubs request that their private field trials be recognized by the A. K. C. we consider as being entirely too presumptious. The decision that all trials recognized must be open trials is in our estimation correct, and we are pleased to see their resignation accepted.

Dalziel states that Plinlimmon's prizes and the money from the sale of his progeny aggregate $45,000.

We note that the receipts of the American Kennel Club for the year 1891 were:

Receipts	$10,897.01
Expenses	7,188.62
Balance on hand	$ 3,708.39

We have been trying for a week to exterminate the fleas in our kennel. White-wash, kerosene oil sprayed about the kennel, air-slacked lime sprinkled on the floors and frequent washing proved of but very little use until we washed the entire lot of dogs in cynolina. We pronounce it, without hesitation, the best flea killer extant.

Fleas are the bane of the California kennel. An unusual number of them will not only impoverish the blood of a puppy and stop his growing for a time, but will bring on eczema and mange. The itching causes the dog to scratch. The scratching irritates the skin, the nails sometimes breaking the skin—the dog lies on some filth and mange is the consequence.

Vero Shaw's article in the Christmas number of the Fancier's Journal seems to have tread on somebody's toes, judging from the comments on the same in the English press. It is getting quite common for Englishmen to use our kennel organs as a medium for pointing out the errors of their neighbors. I am the last one to kick about anyone's "showing up" improper practices, but I would like to see them shown up in their own country. The present method is to my notion ungentlemanly and cowardly.

The arrogance of the remarks of the kennel editor of the English Stockkeeper regarding the half-tone engraving of Daisy Hunter in a recent issue of the Forest and Stream, should not pass unnoticed. His paper reads: "Such an attitude puts a finicky indignity on a field dog, and a sportsman should surely be above being photographed in the ridiculous act of holding up a dog's tail. Thank Nimrod! Such circus performances are not resorted to by English sportsmen!" We admit that the attitude is not sportsmanlike, and assert that the comment is entirely uncalled for and ungentlemanly; in fact, so very unlike the editor as we know him, that we are inclined to think he must have been writing his notes just before a late dinner, or just after having been crossed by some American that did not fit his ideal of gentility. Such editorials will not add many American subscribers to the Stockkeeper's list.

We are pleased to see that the showing of puppies less than six months of age is prohibited. This does away with the bitch and litter business, and the showing of small puppies that almost invariably go home to die. They have caused more distemper than their little necks were worth. But we are not pleased to see the eighteen-months class for Great Danes, St. Bernards, mastiffs and Irish setters abolished. Irish setters are seldom in their proper coat at twelve months; St. Bernards at twelve months are mere babies. But as it stands now a baby of thirteen months must compete against his father, who carries four years of dignity. Mr. Sears when he voted against the eighteen months class, must have forgotten that his Plinlimmon Jr.'s skull improved 100 per cent between the age of eighteen months and three years, but there is no use of kicking; it has been done and can't be undone until our next shows are over.

Eczema can be readily cured by giving the dog the proper care and attention. The dog's system should first be cleaned out with a liberal dose of Epsom salts, one to two tablespoonsful, according to the size and strength of the dog. We much prefer Epsom salts to either castor oil or syrup of buckthorn, on account of its tendency to cool the blood. After the salts have operated give the dog five to ten drops of Fowler's Solution of Arsenic per day; change the food, avoiding fats, corn meal and anything heating, and apply to the affected parts vaseline and sulphur, lead and sulphur, or any reliable mange cure. We say reliable advisedly; many of them will heal the sores and stop the irritation, but no power on earth will ever induce the hair to grow in again. After the sores have healed up and the skin looks healthy, apply a mixture of lard and common gunpowder to the parts; as a hair restorer we never have seen its equal. Exercise is absolutely necessary to the health of any dog. Eminent authority advises the use of raw meat as a partial diet. When we were but a very few years younger, raw meat was set down as one of the causes. We have not tested this yet, and cannot say from our own experience.

The Coursing Trap Season.

The season will soon be upon us when the sport of trap shooting will be again regularly placed upon the boards. There are many of our sportsmen who will be rejoiced at the return of this most enjoyable sport from the fact that they have found it impossible to get out into the field, owing to the pressure of business.

From all appearances there will be fully as much interest at the trap this season as that of last when the record was almost double that of any previous year.

It is to be hoped that the gun clubs of the entire state and the west generally will see to it that mention of their several matches at the trap are sent to the Breeder and Sportsman for publication. Make your meeting interesting by comparing your scores with those of other clubs and do not lose sight of the grand tournament to be given under the management of the State Sportsman's Association in the fall. Let all records be carefully preserved so that by a fair and just competition the general interest may be increased.

Champion Fulford Retires.

E. D. Fulford, the champion pigeon shot, who defeated Capt. Brewer recently, intends to retire from the professional ranks, and in the future will shoot only for pleasure. He cannot afford the time to practice for contests where money is at stake, and so he thought it advisable to give up the championship. He wrote the following letter yesterday to the Sporting Times:

"Four victories in five contests over such a man as Capt. Brewer has given me all the notoriety I care for. My days at pigeon shooting are over. I may, of course, once in a while, on a holiday, shoot in little club matches, but other than that I do not care to make any engagement. My business is more to me than pigeon shooting. The first is my living; the second but a gratification of a hobby. It is expensive, too; too much so for me to care to indulge in it longer. It is not a question of affording it. That does not trouble me, but the waste of time is extravagant and I do not care to be a spendshrift of time any longer. I have achieved what I started out to accomplish. That being done, I go back again to my work with a happy heart. The same pluck, the same persistence in attaining a desired end in my early life, has brought me to the 'top of the heap' of shooting men. Having reached that point, it is nothing more to me. I can retire just as easily as if I had never fired a gun. You can state authoritatively from me that my match-making days are ended. Of pigeon-shooting contests I have had enough. Perhaps, for the sake of some charitable object, I might shoot again, or for some other equally good purpose, but with matches for money or for notoriety I am done. I give it up with sincere pleasure and go back to my duties as 'master of construction' with a light heart and contented mind."

Capt. Brewer, when he learned of the retirement of the champion, said that Mr. Fulford was the greatest shooter that he had ever seen. The haughty Captain is anxious to get on a match with the Western cracks, and he said: "I was beaten by Mr. Fulford, but it doesn't follow that every man who handles a gun and thinks he is a shooter can defeat me. I have heard a good deal of such men as 'Charlie' Budd, George and Abe Kleinman, J. A. Elliott and others. They are in the West, and they have repeatedly refused to journey East to try conclusions with me. Now, I will go into their own territory and meet them. Bar Mr. Fulford, I think that I can defeat any other pigeon shooter in America."

Capt. Brewer will go West in a few days and make an effort to get on a match. He has plenty of backing.

Names Claimed.

Lleworde Kennels, Mattapan, Mass., claim the name of Bolobo for black Cocker Spaniel dog, whelped August 1, 1891, by Prince Obo ex Alda.

Mr. Bell, the well-known cocker spaniel breeder of Toronto Canada, asked the question recently in an Eastern sporting journal, What is the difference between a field spaniel and a cocker spaniel head? and inferred that there was not any difference. We have not the article at hand, but are quite sure that he made the statement positively, that there was not any difference.

We never read anything as absurd from one who ought to know. Mr. Bell is a member of the American Spaniel Club and a well-known exhibitor of cockers. He owns and has owned many good ones too. But if we ever wish to purchase a field Spaniel we certainly shall never order of Mr. Bell. What is a field Spaniel? We don't wonder at novices asking the question. For years our judges at small shows and sometimes the larger ones have awarded prizes to big cockers in field classes and are responsible in a great measure for the general opinion that a field Spaniel is nothing but a big overgrown cocker. English shows are almost as bad. One half of the so-called cockers are nothing but small field Spaniels. At the smaller shows in England the Field Spaniel class comprises Sussex, Black Field, Clumber and Irish Water Spaniels. On this side of the great pond Spaniels are better looked after; thanks to the energies of the Spaniel Club. But to the question, we know of no better description than to say that the head of the true Field Spaniel is an ideal English setter head put on to a Spaniel's body. The muzzle is longer than that of the cocker. The ears longer and set on lower, the skull less domed, the division between the eyes less pronounced; the stop less abrupt. The similarity is confined to one particular, they both have Spaniel character and expression.

Mr. W. O. Hughes-Hughes writes in the English Stockkeeper denying that there ever existed a St. Bernard possessing an extra claw, which resembled the others in its practical uses. I agree with Mr. Hughes-Hughes that the dew claw is entirely unnecessary; that many of our best specimens do not possess them and that they tend to make a dog walk cow hocked if well developed. But I remember distinctly, when reporting an Eastern show a few years ago, coming across a dog with an extra toe and claw formed like any other claw. I cannot now recollect the dog's name, but when Mr. Chas. G. Wheelock again leaves his mountain home for a brief visit to the Golden Gate I will give the readers of this article the name of the dog. I will add that this one is the only dew claw that I ever saw in England or America that could ever be put to any practical use.

The Russian wolfhound. Siberian wolfhound, Barzois, etc., have been given another name, Psovoi. We think the latter will be the name that they will eventually be known by. According to the English papers we are soon to have a standard for them. I notice Mr. Paul Hacke has been largely quoted as being the first to import any of this breed. This is a mistake. We saw one at the New York show four years ago, Ivan Romanoff, imported by Dr. Linn, of New York. Mr. Wade's Elsie was purchased before Mr. Hacke arrived, but was left in England with Freeman Lloyd to be bred to Krilutt. This breed will eventually become very popular in this part of the country for coursing coyotes.

Uncle Dick seems to be more in demand the older he grows. Superintendent at Gloversville and judge at Elmira two weeks later; a good start for the new year.

Despondency, caused by a diseased liver, can be avoided by taking Simmons Liver Regulator.

Secretaries, Prepare Your Programmes.

The following list of trotters and pacers that obtained records of 2:30 or better during the years 1890 and 1891 will be of great benefit to secretaries in making out their programmes for this year's work. Some of these, mentioned below, have been retired from racing, still, if the proper arrangements are made, they will no doubt be seen again on the turf. The names of the Palo Alto trotters are intentionally omitted, because the probabilities are that they will not appear on the circuit this year. The famous drivers, Orrin A. Hickok, Charles Marvin, John A. Goldsmith, Millard Sanders and George Starr will not be seen here until very late in the season, if at all. The prospects for the small breeders this year were never brighter in the history of trotting in this State. To those who have shown temerity in naming their colts in the stake races last year, extra inducements should be offered to have them come forward this season. The number of colts that will be handled and entered for these stakes this year will be larger than ever, and the absence of the phenomenons will insure a better division of any money that progressive associations will offer.

We have done our best toward giving the names and addresses of the owners of these horses, but where it was not possible to find them, we have given the name of the breeder. Among the Oregon and Washington horses, where we could find no clue to the owner's place of residence, we have given in most instances the name of Van B. De Lashmutt of Portland Or., who is President of the newly-organized North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, feeling that, with his intimate knowledge of the horsemen of that section, he can put our secretaries on the right track.

TULARE, Jan. 12, 1892.

The winter meeting of the Tulare Driving Association took place at Tulare on January 8th, 9th and 11th. The city of Tulare is one of the most beautiful and prosperous places in the State. It is the business centre of the great county of Tulare, which is, by reason of its mild winters and rich, productive soil a veritable horseman's Paradise. Feed and good pasturage is everywhere to be found. There is not a day in the year but the trainer may "work out" his horses in perfect comfort. These favorable conditions have induced a number of men to engage in the business of breeding fine horses in this county, and now the best trotting and running families have splendid representatives here, forming a foundation that will soon place the county in the front ranks as a producer of fine horses. Besides, a movement is now on foot to build and equip one of the finest tracks in the State.

The track at Tulare is a half-mile one, and is slow by reason of its being sixty feet over a half. The weather was pleasant, and the racing drew out a large attendance. The officers of the association are: President, General D. W. Madden; secretary, W. P. Ratliff; directors, Castle, Wallace and Eaton. They were present and busy attending to the details of the business. The judges were Captain Hays, J. W. Elrod and M. Click. Timers, S. A. Blythe and D. B. Moore.

The following are the summaries:

Can a Mile be Trotted in Two Minutes?

(Written for the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.)

The above question should be of interest to thoughtful breeders of the trotting horse, for were the future speed possibilities of a trotter known, it would prevent many expensive and discouraging experiments, which fail because the result desired does not exist.

The writer agrees with Senator Stanford in his belief that a horse will never trot a mile in two minutes.

Many would answer that future years of breeding onward, assisted by more skillful systems of training, will be sure to bring forth a horse capable of trotting a mile in the above time; and there would seem to be reason in the answer, when looking back at the vast improvement of the trotting horse.

But this advancement has not increased perceptibly the extreme flight of speed a trotter is capable of, but has only brought forth a large number of horses with ability to show that speed.

We will try to arrive at the ability a horse would have to possess to perform such a feat by analyzing the qualities that have made Sunol and Direct, the fastest trotter and pacer in the world; I include Direct, although it is admitted that the pacing gait is less of an effort on an animal than the trot.

To trot a mile in 2:20, a horse requires a reserved speed of at least two seconds in a quarter; the faster the mile the greater is the proportion of reserve speed that is needed to sustain him in the greater physical exertion he is undergoing.

The reserve speed possessed by Direct, to reach his limit of 2:06, is 4½ seconds in a quarter, for he is credited with pacing a quarter in 27 seconds.

Now if Direct, perfectly gaited, and game as a horse can be, with no weight on his feet, a track like a billiard table, and a skillful driver in the sulky, requires speed to go a qaarter in 27 seconds., a 1:48 gait, to enable him to go a mile in 2:06, what speed would he need to pace in two minutes?

That he would need the ability to go a quarter in 25 seconds, cannot be disputed.

Taking Sunol's credited quarter in 29 seconds, to judge her best performance by, shows she was a little over three seconds in a quarter within her speed.

This shows a little better for a trotter than for a pacer, but perhaps the difference between 2:08¼ and 2:06, small as it is, required the greater flight of speed possessed by Direct.

Now in granting a trotter equal to a pacer, in respect to the effort it requires of them to make a supreme effort, Sunol would then have to speed a quarter in 25 seconds, a speed that no improvement in the past of extreme speed gives the slightest promise.

That the limit of trotting speed has been reached I believe. History tells us that Ethan Allen could trot a quarter in 30 seconds, Dexter could nearly approach that, Maud S. and Jay-Eye-See could undoubtedly do it.

If this speed existed when the methods of breeding and training were crude when compared to to-day, and out of the many thousand horses bred on all known and unknown principles we have only produced one trotter known to be capable of trotting a quarter one second faster than the trotters of ten and twenty years ago, we come to the conclusion that the limit of extreme speed has been reached, or so nearly that to look forward to a trotter that can go a quarter fast enough to enable him to carry out a mile in two minutes is to indulge in a fancy that no fact will sustain.

The limit of speed in the runner has been reached, for the great horses of forty years ago could cover a mile as fast as the best ones to-day, conditions of track and training being equal; records have been lowered slightly, but that was due probably more to the perfected conditions than to the superiority of our horses over those of a past generation.

Therefore, if it be true that the trotter has reached his speed limit, his future progress can be accurately determined by a careful study of the past progress of the runner.

It must be remembered that both Direct and Sunol carry a large amount of thoroughbred blood, which is the blood all believers in the future two-minute trotter say will predominate in the trotter making that record.

The thoroughbred blood has been tested nearly to the fullest extent possible; it has added nothing to the speed of a trotter, for the highest rate has appeared in horses nearly devoid of it, but it has undoubtedly helped to carry out that speed for a mile: the records 2:08¼ and 2:08¼ show what it has done, but these figures are so little superior to the 2:09 and 2:09¼ of the trotting-breds, Nancy Hanks and Allerton, that the superiority of the thoroughbred can barely be considered in future attempts to close the gap between 2:08¼ and 2:00.

The great records made by colt trotters is no criterion by which to judge the probabilities of a two-minute trotter, for, like thoroughbreds, trotting colts of the future and the best ones of the present will trot at two and three years old so nearly to the ability that their mature form will have that the difference will hardly be noticed.

Who does not think Sunol would have done a mile in 2:09 on a kite track as a three-year-old?

The future probabilities of the trotter are great. Trotters will be bred with certainty, yearlings will beat 2:20, two-year-old records of 2:12 will abound. But there is a law that determines the limit of physical possibility, and that limit will be reached long before the figure 2:00 will stand opposite the name of a trotting horse. OSCAR MANSFELDT

Echoings from Big Pine.

BIG PINE, Cal., Jan. 14, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The following news may be of interest to the readers of your valuable paper, of which every horseman and trainer should be a subscriber. Considerable interest has been taken in regard to the raising of good horses in this section of California (Inyo county) within the past few years. Several horses of note have been purchased and brought here from Western California. Among them are, S. P. Smith's Antare, by Anteros; Conklin Bros.' Mt. Vernon Prince, by Mt. Vernon; both of these horses have to their credit a large number of colts which are expected to make a good showing for their sires when two years old. Mr. Smith also has the horse Albenton left to his credit, and a number of good colts, which may be heard from at some future date; but I am sorry to state that Albenton does not longer remain in this county, and all of the breeders of knowledge are now regretting that they did not patronize the son of the noted George Benton, when they look around them and see the colts that command a high figure, for they are noted as kind, intelligent trotters. Among the bangtails are Pickpocket, by Joe Daniels, whose offspring will do to show in any company, although he has not proven to be a successful campaigner; also Bronco, by Joe Hooker, once owned by Theodore Winters, of Nevada, who sold him to Barney Peller, of Bishop, for a spoiled horse, who could not be controlled on the track, and after the death of Peller he was again sold to his present owner, John McBride of this county, and placed in the hands of Edward Rose, of Independence (Inyo county); to him a great deal of credit is due, for the handsome stallion is now under perfect control and will score till the bell taps. He was on the turf last fall at Bishop (Eighteenth District) grounds for the first time in a one-half mile and repeat race, and won with ease in 50 and 50½ seconds. Quite a number of thoroughbred fillies have been bred to the trotter owned by Conklin Bros., who are taking a vast amount of interest toward the developing of their coming flyers, and also to make the annual fair a more pleasant and agreeable meeting, which has in the last year or two had but little patronage from trainers and horsemen of this district, but the foundation has been set and no little interest taken toward forming a jockey club, which agrees to put to every hundred dollars of district money the additional sum of two hundred dollars; therefore we look forward to better times. As there is nothing of particular interest to make mention of at this date, you will please excuse this short letter and in the next, which I hope will not be long delayed, I will try and make a more detailed statement as to the prosperity of Inyo county in regard to stock-raising, hunting, fishing, etc. COYOTE.

What Sidney Has Done.

In the catalogue of horses that were consigned from the Valensin Stock Farm to P. C. Kellogg & Co, New York, to be sold, the introductory remarks are a revelation to horsemen. In referring to the average speed obtained by the get of twelve of the leading stallions with twenty or more in the list is the following concise table:

At 28	years of age	Dictator	has produced	36	average record 2:27¼
At 27	"	Almont	"	48	" 2:24¼
At 26	"	Geo. Wilkes	"	74	" 2:21½
At 25	"	Happy Medium	"	71	" 2:25½
At 22	"	Electioneer	"	101	" 2:24¼
At 21	"	Nutwood	"	77	" 2:21½
At 17	"	Red Wilkes	"	64	" 2:25½
At 16	"	Onward	"	18	" 2:25¼
At 16	"	Sultan	"	28	" 2:25¼
At 12	"	Pilot Medium	"	20	" 2:26
At 12	"	Simmons	"	22	" 2:24½
At 10	"	Sidney	"	20	" 2:21¼

Such a showing as this is enough to make the owner of every Sidney colt and filly feel proud. Sidney, although but ten years of age, has sired as many champion record-breakers as any sire living or dead. The following eight animals hold the fastest records in the world:

PACING RECORDS.

1-year-old, Frausta, by Sidney	2:22¼
2-year-old, Manager, by Nutwood	2:10½
3-year-old, Manager, by Nutwood	2:11½
4-year-old, Gold Leaf, by Sidney	2:11½
World's record, Direct, by Director	2:06

Three go to the credit of Electioneer, one to Nutwood, one to Director, and three to Sidney.

Mr. Valensin has decided to keep Sidney as a private stallion, to be mated to the collection of royally-bred mares that he has on his breeding farm. From what we have seen they are indeed fit to grace the harem of this "King among Progenitors," and, as each and every one is related to producers, through their dams and grandams, if they are not themselves producers, the star of California's pride will never set while this excellent judge of equine anatomy and breeding lives.

Although Mr. Valensin has reserved Sidney as a private stallion, still his regard for the number of excellent broodmares that are owned by enthusiastic horsemen here, will not prevent him, we are sure, from allowing this horse to be bred to a few of them this year. It would be a hardship to many who have based their hopes on such a union. Of course, to do so, we know that Mr. Valensin will have to set aside one of his own for every one that he thus breeds to. Sidney is a young horse now and will be mated to those that have been selected and are at the Valensin Stock Farm for years to come.

The consignment that he sends East will bring excellent prices, for they are grand-looking individuals and bred in the purple. Unless some of our other large stock farms are stocked with just such individuals the Valensin Stock Farm's choice youngsters will lead them all to the wire of public fame and never will be passed.

Have You Horses to Sell?

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our public to the card of Emery & Fasig, Cleveland, O., in another column.

The firm is one of the leading ones in the sale business in the country, and none stands higher for fair dealing, or is more successful.

We are confident, therefore, that any consignments made to it will receive the most zealous efforts of the gentlemen, and that results will be gratifying to their patrons.

Count Valensin has given them consignments at their two last sales, and he is respectfully referred to. We understand he is much pleased with the results.

The Cleveland sale claims the following advantages: It is centrally located; the business is not overdone; it has no particular strain of breeding to boom; it has the largest, most comfortable and convenient structure for sale purposes in America. Prices realized will, by the records, show it to be one of the leading sales in that respect. It is advertised as liberally as any sale in the world, and is as successful. It is managed at a much less expense to consignors than most other sales.

Emery & Fasig specially solicit California consignments. Barring those of Count Valensin, there have been no others from this State, and that fact will enhance prices.

Their entries close February 1st, and we have no hesitation in recommending this firm to our readers.

DR. G. Faulker, the well-known veterinarian of Salinas, is at Chicago, and has promised to send us a description of the veterinary college there. The columns of this journal are always open for such information, and we are pleased to see that a greater interest is being taken in the interests of veterinary practice than ever. The farmers and breeders that have called in competent veterinarians during the last "siege" of la grippe among horses have reason to be thankful for so doing.

The Kite-Shaped Track and Its Future Office.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—I am surprised to hear any one say that the kite track is not faster, much faster, than the elliptical track with two turns. Why, there was not an exhibition day at Independence, Ia., or at Stockton, Cal., but that the flying feet of the horses arrested the hands of time and stopped the watch at a faster record. Of course, a straight-away track is the fastest ever made. Look at Monmouth Park. It was there that Salvator made his mile in 1:35½. I think three-quarters has been run in 1:09½ on the straight-away track. It takes a first-class race horse to run a mile on a regulation track in 1:41. Look at Nighthawk's time at Sacramento, one mile in 1:42½. Look at Allerton's race against Nelson on a regular track, 2:13, 2:14 and 2:15, as against 2:09¼ on a kite.

I contend that not only does a horse travel further from the pole on a short turn, but that the centrifugal motion taxes one leg more than another. A horse on the sharper turns is more likely to interfere and break; hence, on the turns, a colt or horse loses oftentimes confidence, reserves his speed, trots with his legs well under him, and only extends himself on the stretches. I think when you look over the trials made on a kite track you will find fewer breaks made than on regulation traces by the same horse. All the foregoing proves that the kite is and will be the training ground of the future.

From this training ground the driver will take his developed trotter or pacer to the elliptical track where the battle ran be seen by the people from start to finish. No one but the select few will know what the contestants can do, and the element of uncertainty will invest the contest with an interest all its own. No race can compare with a trotting race, to my mind. No boys can educate and drive horses and colts to victory against men raised in the business. Experientia docet. A colt must be gaited, booted, bitted and developed patiently under the light of the truth that all things come to him who waits. Look at the master reinsmen come up behind their horses for the word—Budd Doble, Chas. Marvin, Orrin Hickok, Ed. Geers, George Starr and John Goldsmith.

We all know that, with these men up, all that human skill can do will be done. No chances will be thrown away; no grandstand finishes will be made. Every line will be a nerve vibrating and thrilling through the mouth and the sensitive brain of the panting, struggling horses on to victory. I would rather see a race of evenly-matched 2:40 horses, driven by such reinsmen as I have mentioned, than to see some tyro with a world-beater, getting to the first-half uncertain and full of mistakes, tangled and disheartened, then trotting from the half home, after the nonpareil had got his head, in 1:06. Such men as I have mentioned are worth thousands of dollars a year. There must be gold Dust-in such men's pockets to get their devotion, talents and time to make an Arion or a Sunol. Don't tell me that blood makes the horse or dog—not a whit more than the owner and driver.

Where are the Sultans since L. J. Rose let fall the sceptre that ruled their destinies? A few have been developed, but a very few—Glendine, by Walter Maben, Mr. Rose's old-time trainer. Look at James Goldsmith's string after death had chilled the great driver's touch! A broken and dispirited band, as were Sheridan's troops when he was at Winchester, twenty miles away. Do away with the Paris mutuel pools on heats, increase the number of stake races, punish, really punish, all crooked driving, restore confidence—not in the horses, God bless them! they have never lost it—but in the men. Then Eastern enthusiasm shall be ours and outdoor sports will ring to men's cheers and the clapping of ladies' fair hands.

RUSTIC.

Thoroughbreds in Training at San Jose.

Matt Storn, the popular horseman, accompanied by his jovial friend, J. H. Temple, of Denver, Col., visited the Santa Clara metropolis the other day, and on their return we interviewed the former gentleman relative to what he saw in the line of thoroughbred horses.

"I have never seen a healthier lot of horses or strings in better shape at this season of the year.

"Charley Boots has the largest string down there—eight in all. There are three two-year-olds and five older horses being trained by this popular gentleman. Sir Walter has filled out, and looks better than he ever did. Sir Walter's brother, though, I like even better. A two-year-old, Argyle filly, out of Leda, caught my eye, and the three I have mentioned look as if they ought to win early in the season. Imported Brutus looks fine, and Mr. Boots thinks well of the eight yearlings on his ranch near Milpitas by this horse.

"'Big Jim'" Garland has Ira Ramsdell's string. Three are in training—Homer, Oscar and Tearless, four-year-olds. Homer is a perfect type of a grand race horse. Oscar has shown marked improvement, and, I believe, will be heard from. Tearless will race, notwithstanding all the talk to the contrary. I want to tell you about the yearling colt Garland is handling, by Duke of Norfolk, out of the great race mare Neilson. If a better-looking youngster ever existed it has never been my good fortune to see him. He stands 15.1 now, and is sure to be a race horse of the first water. It's a pity he has lost his left eye, though.

"Billy Appleby has four in his charge, two of them two-year-olds. The Australian colt, San Pedro (by Waxlight, out of Judith), has grown nicely and looks well, as do all the others. I think Billy will come to the front this season and I hope he will, for he is deserving of good fortune, surely.

"Orville Appleby, Billy's brother, is training six, three of them being two-year-olds. Fanny F. looks better than she did last fall, and she was a pretty fair sort of a mare then. The four-year-old colt Wild Rose has developed well, and will give some of them a race this year.

"The veteran Billy Donathan is just convalescing from a severe attack of la grippe. Donathan has had a hard run of luck, but I believe and hope he'll get some of the money at the California meetings during the coming racing season. His four-year-old by Big Sandy, who was recently gelded, is showing any amount of speed, while his pair of two-year-olds (by Duke of Norfolk and imp. Midlothian are beautiful specimens of young thoroughbreds. If appearances go for anything, they should throw dust in the eyes of most horses of their age.

"John Reavey has a two-year-old colt down there by Duke of Norfolk, out of May D., by Wildidle. This youngster is a grand-looker—rangy and racy-looking, and with a mighty level head. Jack will enter this colt in the Overland Park stake races at Denver this spring, and if he comes up to expectations, Reavey will take him to Chicago and the far East."

RAWLINS McGINTY.

Some of the Breeding Theories That This Sage Advances.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The breeding of the trotter seems for the most part to have been carried on in an extremely haphazard way, few breeders having had any definite object in view except the production of speed. Few breeders, if asked why they bred a certain mare to a certain horse, could give a more intelligent answer than to say the blood lines of the horse and mare were adapted to cross well together, or that the horse having a good record and the mare also, the colt ought to get a good one, too. These are good so far as they go, but the question is, do they go far enough? The best authorities on breeding agree that crossing induces reversion, that all crossed breeds are extremely variable, and that uniformity of type in such breeds can only be obtained by careful selection and years of inteligent effort, properly directed. It is said that the trotter trots in all shapes, and he undoubtedly "has to" or refrain from trotting altogether, for there is certainly no uniformity of type in the trotter of to-day. There must unquestionably be some type superior to all others for speed and endurance at the trotting gait; should this be admitted, it follows that this type, once discovered should be persistently bred for. In breeding the trotter it is a question with the writer whether the most radical out-crossing has not been too much indulged in.

Of course, there are many cases of alleged in-breeding, but many of the writers who write so knowingly of in-bred horses have not the faintest conception as to what inbreeding means. The best authorities agree that in-breeding is the surest and quickest means of producing uniformity, or, as some call it, "fixity of type." By means of in-breeding and selection, the types of all the more highly-perfected breeds of domestic animals have been so firmly fixed, that, if kept uncontaminated by alien blood and properly cared for, they will endure to the "end of time."

There has been no breeder of domestic animals that ever gained enduring fame but that he was more or less indebted to in-breeding for his success; some followed it to such an extent indeed that if their example were imitated by any trotting horse breeder it would undoubtedly be stigmatized as lunacy. For all that there can be no doubt that in a breed composed of such such incongruous material as is the American trotter, in-breeding can be safely and advantageously practiced. The trotter of to-day who proudly flies around the kite in an assault against the record undisturbed alike by the cheers of admiring thousands or the blood-curdling war-whoop of the Kentucky "nigger," very probably had among his near ancestors a plow mare too lazy to walk fast, a quarter-mile running mare, a mare that could pace a mile in 4 or 5 minutes, a mare that could go all the gaits ever invented and work in a few of her own invention, besides a mare that could kick the horns off the moon, besides a few others with various dissimilar gifts and qualifications. Of the progeny of a horse so bred, it cannot with certainty be predicted whether they will be best qualified to draw a hearse, run sprint races, dance the Zulu war-dance in a circus ring, or pose as a fashionable stallion serving mares at $500 or $1,000 the season.

There are, however, now as in the past, certain strains or combinations of blood of manifest superiority as producers of race horses and progenitors. Now, as in the past, no special effort is being made to save these valuable strains, but they are frittered away and wasted by crossing with inferior blood until, becoming diluted and attenuated, the stream once so strong is finally lost like a river in the sea.

Egbert is frequently cited as proof of the great potency of the blood of Hambletonion 10; his peculiar breeding reminds me of a saying amongst moon-struck youngsters: "The longest way round is the shortest way home." Suppose a daughter of Hambletonian 10 had been bred to her sire, her produce would have had more of the desired blood than Egbert got through three crosses. Suppose a number of the best daughters of the old horse had been bred to their sire, might we not now have a dozen Egberts on earth instead of one? If the superiority of Electioneer was due to the blood of Green Mountain Maid, what would have been easier than to breed the old mare to her great son and secure a younger and better Maid, or a new and improved edition of Electioneer brass-bound and with gilt edges, so to speak. Why not breed Alma Mater to Alcantara, and so perpetuate the name and fame of both long after they have passed away? Why not breed Miss Russell to Lord Russell, and if a filly is produced, breed that filly to Nutwood? And although this would be the closest possible form of in-breeding, why not breed Maud S. to Lord Russell and get another Maud? Why not, indeed? There is no good and sufficient reason why such breeding should not be successful if both parents are sound and healthy and of average size. There is, it is true, a widespread belief, which seems to be without sufficient foundation, that the produce from such unions are stunted, infirm and deformed. In-and-in-breeding has been more or less practiced in the formation of almost all the most perfect breeds of domestic animals; it should and will play its part in fixing and perfecting a type of the trotter which shall forever endure.

There are writers, of course, who will assert that the above views are a proof of lunacy, and that the present writer should be placed under restraint. Well, so be it. There are philosophers also who gravely argue that this world is flat and that "the sun do move." RAWLINS MCGINTY.

Eros 5,326.

The name of this splendid son of Electioneer and the wonderful broodmare Sontag Mohawk is known all over the United States. His breeding needs no comment, for comments are unnecessary. In this respect he stands alone among all the Palo Alto bred stallions that are standing for public service to-day. He is standard by every rule, and as a trotter he is known everywhere. As a sire, his first season in the stud proves that he is superior to his sire so far as his average is concerned. He was bred to only eight mares, who had some six colts. Five of them are in the 2:30 list, and were it not for an injury the whole number would be within the charmed circle. For color, substance, speed, gameness and disposition, Eros fills a prominent place among sires. His advertisement is in our columns, and owners of broodmares should not let this opportunity pass of securing the services of this horse, for the probabilities are that he will be sent East next season.

Palo Alto vs. Allerton.

One of the modern tribe of "Hoss Editors" recently told how easy Allerton would lose Palo Alto in a race. Doubtless it was easier to write such stuff than lose the advertising patronage of Allerton's owner. With both horses in fair shape and Marvin driving Palo Alto a meeting between the two would likely result in a great horse race. Talk of either horse losing the other stamps a man as blindly or wilfully oblivous to their public performances.

My own monetary interests dictate that Allerton should be made out the greatest horse, as I have a grandson of Lady Frank's carrying plainly her characteristics, just as Allerton does. In fact this mare's individuality dominates in her descendants, proving for the thousandth time the fact that great sires come from great dams. But is Allerton a greater horse than Palo Alto? His breeding suits me best, his form, gait, and disposition also more nearly accord with my notions, and I wish that he was the greatest race horse. Many a dollar has caromed from my pockets on the balk line of outspoken loyalty to convictions, and it is too late for me now to get rich following the other tack. So my answer to the query must be that Allerton by the cold facts of the record is not the greater race horse, nor is he the most consistent performer. Furthermore Allerton could not likely beat Palo Alto in a race any more than he could beat Nancy Hanks. Palo Alto's races reveal no such performances as Allerton's defeat at Detroit by Margaret S., when he was distanced in 2:20¾ in a fifth heat in his four-year-old form. He lost the fourth heat in 2:23½. Palo Alto as a four-year-old won seven contested races to Allerton's one at the same age. Palo Alto won fourth heats as a four-year-old in the following time: 2:20¼, 2:21, 2:22¾, 2:21½, 2:21½. This holds over being beaten a fourth heat in 2:23½. Palo Alto did not lose a fourth heat as a four-year-old. He won fifth heats in 2:25¾ and 2:25, sixth heats in 2:27½, 2:20½ and 2:25. Compare this with being distanced a fifth heat! The cold facts of the record show that Palo Alto was a race horse and a stayer as a four-year-old; that he could go fourth heats, fifth heats, sixth heats and beat strong fields of aged campaigners. Comparisons are odious, but they have been invited by Allerton's fool friends. The same cold facts of the record show that Allerton quit when asked to go a fourth and fifth heat as a four-year-old.

As to speed for a mile it is hard to comprehend how a horse trotting in 2:09¼ can lose a horse trotting in 2:08¼. Palo Alto's third heat in a race in 2:13 at Chicago and 2:13¼ at Stockton, beating Direct and Bay Rose at the latter place, hold over Allerton's best performances at that stage of the game. Stripped of all verbiage Palo Alto has gone the fastest mile, proving him to have the most speed. He has gone the fastest at the end of his races, proving him the best stayer. I have never had much luck beating horses that could out-trot and out-stay mine. Possibly these people who dogmatically assert that Allerton can lose Palo Alto understand how to do it. But plain people who prefer the truth even to advertising patronage will wait until Allerton wins the crown and then freely and unreservedly accord it to him.

The 1892 performances of Allerton may excel those of Palo Alto because of the change in drivers with the latter horse. In 1875 Marvin was at Stillwater, Minn., with a stable of very moderate performers. He started in several races and I watched him closely because Col. Russell had just sent for him to take Smuggler again—the "wizard of the sulky," Dan Mace, having failed to get en rapport with the great white-nosed stallion. Like many another man Marvin could not win applause as a great driver without a great horse; for all that it was evident that the man possessed exceptional qualities. He drove second in one race so easily that it seemed but for local interest in the winner the judges might have cautioned him, and I have often thought of this race in connection with his subsequent career. Ben Woodmansee won with a bay mare called Ruby, while Marvin's horse was a sorrel gelding called J. N. Steck.

It is not often that horses of extreme speed ever equal this performances in new hands. Johnston came as near to it in Doble's hands as any of the record-breakers I now think of. It is not at all probable that the Palo Alto of the future will equal, much less excel, past performances unless Senator Stanford follows in the footsteps of Col. Russell with Smuggler and recalls the old pilot.

* * * *

From jealous, disappointed aspirants for positions on the trotting register under the new regime comes constant, carping, groundless criticism. The papers which give voice to their spleen will surely learn that more profitable matter might fill their columns. Secretary Steiner proves capable and efficient in the discharge of his duties for both register and trotting association. Without venom, malice or contentious leanings he does his work according to the rules laid down in a business-like way. Anyone knows in advance what he will do in any given case if they comprehend the rules; he simply obeys them, and so should we all. If any rule proves unwise agitate for its repeal, and quit kicking at the man whose place you wanted. He is emphatically all right. If he had not been, the breeders would not have selected him. When he ceases to be they will replace him.—M. T. G., in Breeders' Gazette.

Partial Dislocation of Stifle.

Slipping in and out, or partial dislocation of the stifle is quite common to young colts, and especially such as have been weakened by disease; and, too, it is just as common for the youngster to recover without special treatment. Keep the colt where it cannot run about much, and rub the region of the affected joints twice daily with the following liniment: Gum camphor one ounce, rectified spirits four ounces, olive oil one pint, ammonia water two ounces. Dissolve the camphor in the rectified spirits, mix with oil and ammonia, and after shaking them well together add the mixture to the camphor solution and shake all together. Keep the bottle well corked, and shake before using. If this liniment be found to be too active it may be reduced with olive oil; and if any considerable irritation of the skin follows its use it should be discontinued until such irritation has subsided. Keep up the animal's strength by feeding generously, and mix the following powder with the feed night and morning: Dried sulphate of iron two drachms, powdered gentian and powdered fenugreek seed of each four drachms, for one powder.

Kickers, Runaways, Pullers, Bolters, Green Colts, Etc., and Sick Horses.

The BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN was recommended by Eastern editors of horse journals as the best Pacific Coast journal for the Two-Thirty Horse Remedy Company, of Rutland, Vt., to advertise in and we wish to call the attention of our readers to their card in, another column of this issue.

2:30 is not very fast time for the Pacific Coast trotters; but it is a "horsey" title, and is meant by this company to signify the celerity with which their remedies do the work they are intended for, and that "by breeding and performance" they are entitled to entrance into the "charmed circle."

It is unquestionable that it is a great benefit to horsemen, especially those at a distance from veterinarians, to have within reach a supply of reliable remedies for those diseases of horses that are readily recognized by everyone; and the efforts of any company to supply that want will be appreciated.

The remedies manufactured by the 2:30 Horse Remedy Co. are compounded by Dr. Geo. H. Farnsworth, a gratuated veterinarian of large practice. They are strictly scientific, and the company stand right up behind every one of them with a positive guarantee to refund the price if not satisfactory.

Professor Sanborn's Controlling Bit, sold by this company, is the result of years of study and experience, the Professor having traveled through the Eastern States for several years giving exhibitions of his new system of controlling that does away with the old Rarey process with cords, ropes, etc., the control being obtained by his bit alone, without throwing, whirling or whipping; and the fact that he is the only man advertising a bit who travels and gives exhibitions of its merits is evidence that it will do the work. The bit is constructed so that a slight pull on either or both reins will cause it to touch a horse in the center of the roof of the mouth on the sensitive nerves, and the attention of the animal is at once attracted to the bit and control established. Money will be refunded for every bit that fails to satisfy.

An open bottom muzzle that will permit a horse to eat hay, grain or grass, yet prevent him from tearing blankets, bandages, biting, cribbing, gorging food, etc., and that can be instently changed into an appliance to prevent horses from eating bedding, is another convenienoe that horsemen cannot aflord to be without. These articles are all dealt in by The 2:30 Horse Remedy Co., and they send a copy of the "Colt Trainer's Guide and Treatise on Diseases" free to any address. See advertisement.

Related to Royalty.

Who ever saw or knew a better judge of a trotting horse than J. W. Knox, the gentleman who brought Nutwood to this State? And in his selection of a great stallion to bring to Califrnia after he had disposed of Nutwood he used this judgment to advantage. The horse he selected was Boodle, that got a record of 2:27¾ after being handled for speed some five weeks. A glance at his pedigree, which is published in our advertising columns, will convince anyone that he is "related to royalty." It is nat so much the relationship that was relied upon by this well-known breeder and trainer as it was the great individuality of the young stallion. All pedigre and no horse is one thing, all horse and no pedigree is another, but when one sees such a grand individual as Boodle and then remembers the reat campaigners that are represented in his pedigree one cannot help saying that he is the kind of a sire Californians are looking for. Messrs. C. A. Stockton & Co., his present owners, have set a low price for his services, considering his grand conformation, good disposition and blood-line qualifications. In color he is a beautiful seal brown, he is but six years of age, and last year proved that he was a sure foal-getter. We look for him to have a large patronage from the choicest class of mares. It will pay to breed to him.

Stock Farm Purchased.

Dr. G. W. Leek has concluded the purchase of a fine stock farm in Mendocino Co. The negotiations for the sale and transfer were made through "The Carnall-Hopkins" Co. This firm has the largest list of desirable country property of any real estate firm in California. They are the publishers of a finely illustrated journal entitled "California Illustrated," replete with information which cannot fail to be of interest to any intending purchaser of land, for either stock-raising or for home-seekers and fruit-raisers.

JUDGMENT is necessary in making up a ration for a horse as there is great difference in requirements and powers of assimilation. Those with large bones and loose-looking joints generally require more food in proportion to their weight than short, closely-knit, snug-looking horses. The ration should be increased or decreased as may be necessary to keep the animal in good working condition. When idle the horse requires and will be satisfied with much less food than when there is a large daily expenditure of energy in work. If it can be foreseen that increased exertion will be demanded, increase the food as regards quality, and work moderately, as being the best preparation for it. As preparation for increased work it is common to keep the animal in the stable several days, and stuff with as much food as it will eat, as though strength and endurance could be bottled up, and the stomach was a kind of tender to the engine, from which reserves of fuel or condensed energy could be drawn during the trip. The horse so treated is the one that does the journey in the most unsatisfactory manner, or breaks down under the extra demand on strength.—English Farm and Home.

D. G. Bricker, a prominent mining man of Butte, Mont., and an extensive breeder of both runners and trotters, is at Hollenback Hotel, Los Angeles, and will visit the great California breeding establishments on his way north. Mr. Bricker owns the well-known trotters Ida D., Ellard and D. G. B., among others.

A. E. OLNEY, the well-known driver, has assumed charge of the horses at the Nutwood Stock Farm, Irvington, Cal.

Flaxtail blood is one of the very few good direct outcrosses trotting horse breeders have to go with horses that trace to Hambletonian 10. Don't forget the Hicks sale on Wednesday next, at Killip's sale yard in this city. Out of the seventy-six catalogued, but four do not trace to Flaxtail.

We understand that last Saturday an offer of $70,000 was received at Palo Alto Stock Farm for Advertiser, 2:16, from Eastern parties, whose names cannot be made public at present. The probabilities are, however, that this young stallion will remain here, for there is no stallion in America bred like him, and he could not be replaced. His sire is dead, and for speed, intelligence and perfect conformation he has no superior. They cannot afford to lose his services at Palo Alto.

Princely Prices Paid for Horseflesh.

If anyone had ventured to predict thirty years ago that $100,000 would ever be realized for a trotting horse that person would have been set down at once as not many degrees distant from a state of idiocy. But such a price, and considerable more, has been paid for two trotters within the past three years. Axtell and Arion are the ones we refer to, while $200,000 are said to have been refused for the third trotting horse whose name commences with the lucky letter "A"—Allerton. Such a hold has the trotter at present on the general public that their thoroughbred brethren can scarcely hope to have anything in future but a seat quite a distance in the background when it comes to summing up what a horse will bring in hard coin.

Over thirty years ago "Lexington the Great" cost Mr. Alexander, of Woodburn Farm, Kentucky, $15,000, and all the world talked of the fabulous amount paid for the most wonderful race horse of his era. Mr. A. was laughed at by many and termed foolhardy, but he declared that a son of Lexington's would yet bring more money than the old horse. This he made good in 1864, when Norfolk passed into the hands of Theodore Winters, of Reno, Nev., for just one dollar over Lexington's price, or $15,001. Shortly thereafter the thoroughbred Kentucky brought $40,000. He proved a losing investment. Robert Bonner was the pioneer in the field of paying heavy prices for trotters, and it has been figured that since 1859 he has paid in the neighborhood of $600,000 for the horses he has used for pleasure alone. Of this amount forty head of trotting stock lowered his bank account to the tune of $503,200. Malcolm W. Forbes, of Boston, who purchased Nancy Hanks last fall for $41,000 and last week paid the sum of $150,001, for the wonderful Arion, bids fair to eclipse Mr. Bonner as a heavy bidder on kings and queens of the trotting turf. Senator Hearst paid $40,000 for an untried-in-public two-year-old thoroughbred, King Thomas by name, and he never earned his oats. Charles Reed paid $100,000 for St. Blaise not many months ago, and verily this has been a great year for good prices, far and away ahead of any in the turf history of the world. Following are some of the notable sales of horseflesh during the past twelve months that we can recall, trotters and thoroughbreds, in which Americans figured:

Arion	$150,001	St. Blaise (imp.)	$100,000
Axtell	105,000	Kentucky	40,000
Antevo	65,000	King Thomas	40,000
Nancy Hanks	41,000	Bolero	35,000
Conductor	35,000	Rayon d'Or (imp.)	35,000
Simmocolon	15,000	Laureate (imp.)	30,000
May King	12,000	Dewdrop	29,500
Son of Stamboul and Minnehaha	10,000	Iris (imp.)	25,000
Sis. to Margaret S., yearling	8,600	Pocahontas	20,000
		Rarus	18,000
		Potomac	17,000
		Iroquois	17,000
		Maxim (imp.)	17,000
		Tremont	15,000
		Magnetizer	15,000
		Imp. Princess	14,100
		Susquehanna	14,500
Total	$835,101	Total	$237,100

The trotting horse men can certainly congratulate themselves on this season's showing against the thoroughbreds, and as far as that is concerned we believe that we can figure out a dozen trotters in this country that brought a much larger amount than any twelve thoroughbreds ever did in the land of Uncle Sam, as follows:

Trotters.		Thoroughbreds.
Arion	$150,001	St. Blaise (imp.)	100,000
Axtell	105,000	Kentucky	40,000
Antevo	65,000	King Thomas	40,000
Bell Boy	51,000	Bolero	35,000
Stamboul	50,000	Rayon d'Or (imp.)	35,000
Sunol	41,000	Laureate (imp.)	30,000
Nancy Hanks	41,000	Dewdrop	29,500
Maud S	40,000	Iris (imp.)	25,000
Pocahontas	40,000	Hindoo	20,000
Rarus	38,000	Potomac	17,000
Conductor	35,000	Iroquois	17,000
Panconsta	28,000	Maxim (imp.)	17,000
Total	$684,001	Total	428,500

This shows a balance in favor of the twelve highest-priced trotters of $255,500 in round numbers, and shows conclusively the strides that have been made in the "trotting industry." We may have erred a little, but these are the highest-priced horses of the two classes that we can recall. Closely approaching these lowest figures we might mention among the trotters Dexter, who brought $25,000 in 1869 (the highest price ever paid for a gelding at that time), $26,000 for the Stamboul-Minnehaha yearling, Mascot, the $22,000 paid for Nutwood at the McFerran sale about five years ago, then the $20,000 paid for the brother to Arion's dam, Woodnut, about three years ago. If memory serves us well Raceland brought Joe Ullman in $17,500 when sold as a three-year-old, and cost as a yearling less than $300. King Thomas was much the highest-priced two-year-old thoroughbred ever disposed of in this country, Hindoo being next in this respect, he bringing $15,000 out of the Dwyer Brothers' pockets when they secured him of Dan Swigert.

This has been a great week for the owners of well-trained hunting dogs at Bakersfield. The weather has been delightful, the quail plentiful and the crowds large and enthusiastic. In our next issue we will have a full description of the sport written by Mr. Charles Wesley Kyle, of our editorial staff, who is attending the meeting.

Our Outlook for 1892.

The coming racing season in California should be one long remembered in turf annals. In the line of thoroughbred racing there will doubtless be, with new owners and sons and daughters of young, untried sires making their initial bow to the public, much to make speculators set their guessing caps tightly over their heads. There will be young thoroughbreds by Greenback, Apache, Friar Tuck, Brutus, Cyrus, Sid, Gano, Sobrante, Mariner, Emperor of Norfolk, Cheviot, Hidalgo, Midlothian and other comparatively untried sires, in addition to those by the well-tried horses, Three Cheers, Joe Hooker, Grinstead, Wildidle, Flood, Ed. Corrigan, Sir Modred, Darebin, Duke and Prince of Norfolk, Jim Brown, Kyrle Daly, Alta, Norfolk, Milner, Argyle, Nathan Coombs, Kingston, Joe Daniels, Shannon, John Happy, Sacramento and others equally well-known. The leading new man in the field is W. O'B. Macdonough, of this city, a young gentleman of wealth and liberality, and while he will in all likelihood race a number of choice young animals he has lately purchased, in two years' time he will show the world the quality of the stock raised on his own place by St. Carlo, imp. Suwarro and Sinfax. The names of several other well-known gentleman will be found in the list of of racehorse owners whose colors have never flashed in California before, and we have reason to hope that the new blood will help to bring the Golden State to the front as a racing center—a position she should hold by virtue of the merit of her horses and the wealth within her boundaries.

The outlook for successful trotting meetings is encouraging to the smaller California breeders. With the principal stables at the East contending for the rich plums waiting to be plucked, many owners of trotters will doubtless enter their horses in the meetings of this State with no little satisfaction and with a feeling that, with the crack drivers and phenomenal trotters away, in the colt stakes, especially will there be a good show to get some of the first money here this season. There will not be seen that feature which has been so discouraging in past years—three or four stables of horses going down the line capturing all the stakes in sight. There will be an element of chance in trotting races during the year 1892 in California. This makes excellent betting, and without good speculative features racing falls flat and the attendance dwindles into insignificance. Therefore, with our principal stables' best representatives away, and new horses and reinsmen in the field, we look for better racing and mammoth crowds to view it during the coming racing season.

Let No Guilty Judge Escape.

The following from our esteemed contemporary, Clark's Horse Review, contains much truth, and the bad effects of the decisions of district judges will be hard to overcome in the future. This journal has been foremost in advocating a change in the system, and when the circuit commences it will spare no body of men that will abuse the positions they are placed in to accomplish any personal ends, for in their violation of the laws of honesty and justice they are strangling the very best and most profitable industry that is rapidly giving this State a name and putting money into the pockets of our breeders and farmers:

When the number of trotters that are bred there is taken into consideration the stagnation of trotting interests on the Pacific Coast is something remarkable, and the fact that whenever a driver in that part of the country gets hold of a good stable of trotters and pacers he immediately comes East with them is well known. The trouble with the California trotting turf is that it is and always has been cursed with the presence of a considerable proportion of horse owners and drivers who are continually trying to rob the public, and who have accomplished this feat so often in the past that there is no longer any confidence to be placed in them. It is for this reason that a great many horse-owners and breeders in California, who have not the material with which to go to the Eastern trotting meetings, prefer to let their stock remain idle rather than enter it in races near home. One race at Los Angeles last fall in which only four horses had started has already resulted in the breaking up of two breeding establishments and the retirement from trotting interests of a couple of men who were doing a great deal toward the elevation of the sport on the Pacific Coast. These two men are Mr. F. H. Burke and Mr. Isaac DeTurk. Last fall Messrs. Burke and DeTurk sent their trotters, Wanda and Silas Skinner, to Los Angeles to compete in a race against McKinney, a stallion owned there that has since taken a record of 2:12¼. McKinney won the race, but it was openly asserted by the owners of other horses that he did so only because of favoritism on the part of the judges, and a San Francisco paper asserts that Messrs. Burke and DeTurk are out of the business of trotting horses on account of the treatment received by them that day. Said Mr. Burke: 'I became so disgusted that I do not care ever to start another horse in a race. If I want to do my betting after this I can buy my drivers a good deal cheaper than I can keep horses. I am going to sell everything.' Mr. DeTurk is a wealthy wine-grower and is one of the men who raced horses for pleasure, and bred them for the same reason. He is going out of the business. The California breeders should take action in this matter of suppressing the jobbers, and they cannot do it too quickly or too forcibly."—Clark's Horse Review.

Our Annual Equine Exodus.

As the time approaches for the coming auction sales of California-bred stock, is it not well to take a glance at consignments that are being prepared, and prophecy a little as to the future of the youngsters that are to be taken from their genial birthplace and left to battle against their acclimated cousins in the East? In a few days the Palo Alto consignment will arrive at New York; the Valensin Stock Farm has sent a number of excellent youngsters; so also has the La Siesta Stock Farm. In a few weeks the Pleasanton Farm will send its quota of royally-bred ones and what will be the result? The owners will get well paid for every one that is sold, and the Electioneers, the Sidneys, the Directors and the Eros youngsters will be scattered from the Rocky Mountains on the west to Maine on the east, and from Canada on the north to Florida on the south.

Heretofore there have been many sales of almost as good stock, and perhaps better, but it has always puzzled California horsemen to know what has become of them. The Rose stables were dispersed with the balance, and they, too, have almost sunk out of sight in the whirlpool of fast records. Once in a while we have seen the name of some of our lost ones flash like meteors across the equine firmament and then disappear in the horizon. They do not remain long enough in view to become even recognized.

How different it is in California! It may be one of the effects of this glorious climate, but, nevertheless, 'tis true of this place, that the brothers and sisters of the youngsters that have gone East, and the progeny of the sires sold there are all trotters to the manor born, and keep on trotting without any of the advantages that their scattered relations in the East have.

What has become of the numerous representatives of Electioneer, Guy Wilkes, The Moor, Hawthorne, Sidney, Director, and the many other sires that have made their names famous in California? If the purchasers could only have our climate to boot, no doubt we would have heard more of the achievements of the sons and daughters of these sires in the stud.

Here in California, whenever we raise phenomenal trotters or pacers, they are bought by our less-favored Eastern brethren, and that is the last we ever hear of them.

If the Californian wants to make money he takes his stallion east. The horses here are far better than they are there, and the demand for their services is greater. A sojourn even on the shores of the Pacific enhances their value; this is proven in the histories of Nutwood and Simmicolon, and it is doubtful if there ever was a stallion brought to this Coast and bred whose value was not greatly increased. Could Electioneer, Gen. Benton, Guy Wilkes, Echo, Director, McKinney or The Moor, be purchased for anything like what they cost?

It helps horses to bring them here, and it helps owners to dispose of their progeny; it is also beneficial to send California-bred sires East. Next month Redwood, 2:21½; James Madison, 2:17¼ and Direct 2:06, will go with Director, 2:17, to make a season somewhere in that trotting-horse State, Kentucky. The number of their predecessors that are engaged in stud duty there does not seem to affect the demand for their services, for applications by the dozen have been coming to their owners asking for the privilege of breeding. They will go East and be used in the stud; the progeny they left here will be entered in the district races and get low records. They may not have as good dams as those that are to be bred to their sires, but, somehow, they will trot much faster than the progeny that is to come. Surely it must be the effect of the climate.

The theorists have all claimed blood lines from the team of bronchos that went into the ark with Noah and have traced out lines of breeding that glistened with equine gems of speed, but, by some caprice of nature, youngsters with but the most plebian of dams in California, come out at every race meeting, and trot much lower than any of their far-away relatives. Can it be possible it is the climate that does it? If it is, then in the next consignment that goes East there should appear in the catalogue: "These horses come from the Golden State, and they are full of climate; without it they would never be as good as they are. When breeders buy any of them they will be convinced that beneath each blanket there is plenty of the glorious climate, thus insuring plenty of speed and testifying to their new owners' good judgment. Conformation, pedigree, speed and climate are among the virtues each of these trotters possess."

Another Good Association.

Whenever an organization is founded and becomes successful in carrying out its aims and objects and sails smoothly along on the sea of prosperity it is bound to have many similar associations following in its wake. No better illustration of this can be given than that of the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association. The objects for which it was formed appealed strongly to all who were interested in them, and its roll of members increased so rapidly that to-day it is the strongest organization of its kind in existence. The ideas disseminated in its constitution are elevating in their tone and instructive in their simplicity. The aim of its organization is as follows: To promote the ligitimate interests of the breeders (a) by encouraging the breeding of the highest type of the trotting horse and the development of the same; (b) by elevating the standing of the trotting turf; and (c) by lending its assistance and using its influence, moral and practical, in the prevention, detection and punishment of frauds thereon. (d) It shall also be its object to secure at as early a date as practicable the mutual recognition and enforcement among the various turf organizations of fines, suspensions, expulsions and all other punishments that each or any of the members of said turf associations may properly and justly inflict, under the rules of the organization or association to which it subscribes.

Since its organization and after its first successful meeting inquiries have come from all over the United States for copies of its constitution and by-laws, and the result is that similar organizations are being formed everywhere.

Clubs have been formed which will gradually formulate rules that will be exact copies of those in vogue here. There is the Denver Club, the Fresno Club, the Sacramento Club, and now, by the following dispatch, we are informed that the people of the North are alive and anxious to build up the trotting interests:

PORTLAND, OR., Jan. 18, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—The North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association was organized here to-day under the most favorable auspices, and with a membership reaching from Grant's Pass, Southern Oregon, to Moscow, Idaho. The constitution is based largely on the Pacific Coast Trotting Horse Breeders' Association of California. The object is to encourage the breeding and speeding of trotters.

Resolutions were passed denouncing the State Fair Association for the small purses offered for 1892 and for obliterating all purse classes slower than 2:40. The association will give one or more meetings of its own this year, and soon open stakes for two-year-olds and yearlings of 1893.

The management is in the hands of fifteen directors. The election resulted in the choice of ex-Mayor Van B. DeLashmutt, owner of Hambletonian Mambrino, the sire of Jane L., 2:19½, as president; Dr. T. W. Harris, of Eugene, owner of the Antevolo stallion Mackenzie, vice-president; Ernest Brass, a leading turf writer over the signature of "Knickerbocker," secretary, and William Kerron, importer of Sidney foals, treasurer.

The Executive Committee are Messrs. DeLashmutt, Jay Beach, T. H. Tongue, William Kerron and Richard Norton. The management is in the hands of wealthy and prominent citizens. Jay Beach is the owner of Altamont, with thirteen performers in the 2:30 list, and Senator Tongue is a prominent candidate for Congress. The association will co-operate with the North Pacific circuit, and entries at association meetings will be limited to members.

Death of Emma Temple, 2:21.

Last Saturday morning, after a very short illness, this splendid trotting mare died at the Agnew Stock Farm, Hillsdale, Santa Clara county. The exact cause of her death was pleuro-pneumonia. She was game up to the very last, and when she dropped to the floor she was dead. To Harry Agnew her loss was a severe one; he could not replace her for $15,000. It seemed as if the long spell of distemper that was so prevalent in Santa Clara Valley for the past few months had been successfully conquered, and this genial gentleman was congratulating himself on the narrow escape many of his young trotters had from it, when this heavy blow fell upon his little collection of royally-bred matrons.

Emma Temple left a filly by Dawn that her owner must now depend upon to take her place in the circuit; she is called Early Dawn. Emma was carrying her when she drove Homestake out in 2:16½ at Fresno; there never was a gamer mare. At no time during that memorable heat was there daylight between his wheel and her nose. The positions they were sent off they maintained all through the mile, and finished under the wire in the exact position they started; she made just as good time as he did, and that was in the third heat, too. Everyone will feel sorry to hear of her death. To the people of Sonoma county she always seemed like a true equine friend, and never allowed that county's banner to trail in the dust when her name was on the programme. To Mr. Agnew we extend our deepest sympathy.

Billy Thornhill, 2:24 1-2.

The value of Wilkes blood has never been overestimated, and when it is found in such a representative as Billy Thornhill it reaches a higher valuation than ever. He is handsome, level-headed, magnificently formed, and as perfect a gaited horse as ever stepped on a track. He was bred by Z. E. Simmons, of Lexington, Kentucky, and was purchased by Mr. Boyd after he had inspected all the youngsters on the prominent stock farms there. As his colts have since shown that all his qualities are transmitted to them, his owner will never have reason to regret his purchase. Billy Thornhill's race at San Jose last fall was the feature of the fair, and the way he trotted and won it endeared him to every one present. "To see him is to like him, but to drive him is to fall in love with him," was the remark of one of the spectators. His colts are all as solid in color as Cleveland Bays; no white markings are seen. We shall have more to say of this fine stallion in the future. His advertisement is in another column.

"RUNNING FOOLISHNESS."

[WRITTEN FOR THE BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN.]

The happy results attending the union of thoroughbred blood with that of the trotter has led to a very careful study of thoroughbred trotting producing strains. No student of modern trotting pedigrees can possibly fail to observe the immense increase of thorough blood in the prominent trotting horses of the day over those of a few years ago.

It is true that Rysdyk's Hambletonian, the founder of the great family that bears his immortal name, possessed a pedigree rich in the blood of the thoroughbred—Imp. Messenger; in fact he was an inbred Messenger. Imp. Messenger has therefore long been admitted by many of the most intelligent breeders to have been the fountain-head or main source, at least, of the American trotting horse.

The Messenger, Mambrino, Star, American Eclipse and Grey Eagle thoroughbred crosses in the trotter are well known to all, and their value does not require any comment, but other thoroughbred crosses have had great influence in perfecting the speed and endurance of the trotter, and, perhaps no other distinct, or it might be said non-Messenger, cross, rivals of that imp. Margrave. This thoroughbred was the winner of the St. Leger of 1835, and was imported to America in 1837. His blood is highly prized in the blood horse, and many prominent performers on the running turf have felt its influence. It is needless for the purpose of this article to recount their names or performances. A glance at the great number of trotting horses that carry his blood will be interesting to all breeders of the trotter.

Pre-eminent among the Margrave mares whose blood flows in the veins of great trotters, both performers and producers, stands Fanny G., grandam of Dame Winnie, dam of Palo Alto, the King; Gertrude Russell, Big Jim and also grandam of Alma Mater, dam of Alcantara, Alcyone, Almater, Arbiter and Alina. It is worthy of note that Fanny G. was the first to run a mile in 1:45 in the United States. Fanny, by imp. Margrave is the dam of Edward Everett, sire of Judge Fullerton, 2:18; Hambrino, 2:21¼, and eleven more in the 2:30 list. Susie, by imp. Margrave, is the grandam of Hambrino, sire of Delmarch, 2:11½, and five others in the "charmed circle," including Nephew, sire of Beaury Mac, 2:19¾, and seven more with records better than 2:30. It will be observed that Hambrino has a double cross of Margrave blood.

The grandam of Lizzie Whips, dam of Linnet, two-year-old record 2:29½, and Whips, 2:27½, sire of Navidad, four-year-old, 2:22½, and Warlock, 2:28½, is also by imp. Margrave. The grandam of Edith Carr, dam of Campbell's Electioneer, 2:17¼, is another sired by imp. Margrave.

The great grandam of Esther, dam of Express 2:21, completes the list of Margrave mares whose blood enters into the pedigree of the trotter. It is more than a coincidence that Palo Alto, Alcantara and Alcyone should trace through their maternal lines to Fanny G., daughter of imp. Margrave, and a study of the trotting produce of the other Margrave mares mentioned must convince the most skeptical of the valuable aid this thoroughbred sire has rendered to the trotting horse. His blood not only flows in the veins of the greatest trotting horse of the day, Palo Alto, 2:08¾, but it is also prominent in such sires of trotters as Alcantara, one of the greatest of the mighty Wilkes family, Alcyone, Hambrino, Edward Everett, Nephew and Whips, whose produce aggregate more than one hundred 2:30 performers. Palo Alto, Whips, Campbell's Electioneer and the younger sons of Alma Mater will undoubtedly add to this already great list in which the blood of Margrave figures. No arguments can refute the wisdom of the introduction of thorough blood into the pedigree of the modern trotting horse, and the closer the union the more marvellous has been the result. It is true that every sire is not an Electioneer, but the same remark was made in regard to Rysdyk's Hambletonian; yet his immortal son, Electioneer, has proven his superior. We live in an age of progress, particularly so in the breeding and training of the trotting horse. Who shall say that from the mighty trotting sires of to-day a greater sire than the illustrious hero of Palo Alto may not descend? The value of the thoroughbred is improving the speed and endurance of the trotter is written so plainly that "he who runs may read," and no strain of the blood horse is more potent than that of imp. Margrave.

GEORGE T. COVEY.

Stockton Fair, 1892.

The San Joaquin Valley Agricultural Association is composed of live members who have placed their advertisement for their trotting and pacing colt stakes in our advertising columns. There are sixteen stakes with $2,800 added. Entries close March 1, 1892. The Stockton track needs no praise. Both the kite and regulation courses will be the most celebrated of any in the United States for fast records this year.

William Vioget, the popular horseman, a few years ago was a great success as a starter of thoroughbreds in "quarter races"—where great skill is needed and required—and if he could be induced to wield the flag at the coming meetings in California we do not know who would suit the public better. This is a trying position, but with Mr. Vioget's quick eye and coolness, that there would be fair starting and little delay at our meetings we firmly believe.

G. Valensin's Advice to Breeders.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Many clever writers, friends of Dr. M. M. Hicks, have presented interesting articles in your valued paper about the stock to be sold next Thursday. While Dr. Hicks' business relations with me have always been undisturbed, living as we have, far from each other and neither of us enjoying the best of health, our personal intercourse has been so rare that it is nothing more than a passing acquaintance, therefore, the few words I am scribbling about his stock may not be taken with a grain of salt for fear that they were prompted by personal feeling or sympathy. Next to the doctor himself, I have seen more of the Flaxtail and Buccaneer blood than anybody. In 1881 I expected to leave California for Kentucky, to purchase a stallion; on the Sunday previous to my departure, having nothing to do, I went over to the Oakland track, and accidentally meeting Dr. M. W. Hicks, he asked me to look at his colts. Dan McCarty was with me, and was followed by his faithful dog Prince. The old dog started after a little bay filly nine months old that looked as if it was half starved to death, and the frightened little thing in escaping the dog showed such speed at the trot that it set me to thinking (this was afterwards Flirt, the dam of Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, and Memo, three-year-old record 2:20½); next I saw Flight (dam of Fleet, 2:21¾, and Sid Fleet, 2:26½ at two years old); then Buccaneer himself, and I immediately made up my mind that Buccaneer was a stock horse, that I was looking for a sire, and that I had better buy at home rather than to travel thousands of miles to purchase may be a great horse only to see him get sick and die on the way. This is a very important point to be considered by all who will bid on Dr. Hicks' stock next Thursday. Ask Mr. Hobart and others and they will tell you that twenty-five per cent. does not cover the losses experienced in importing and acclimatizing stock in California. But let us return to my story. I bought Buccaneer, not appreciating then the fight I got on my hands. I did not know that "God is with the larger breeders," and when one wants to hear his stock praised he must join the "larger breeders" and grow under their tutelage. Well, I engaged in the fight, and the fight is won. No one now denies that Flaxtail and Buccaneer blood is very potent in the female line; still some few say, "Soft! Soft!" But what breed of horses has escaped that accusation, when their speed qualities could not be denied any longer?

Was it the Moors?
Was it the Sultans?
Was it the Electioneers?
Was it the Wilkeses?
Was it the Sidneys?
Was it the Nutwoods?
Was it the Almonts?
and scores of others I could name?

Families who produce extreme and early speed have to undergo this accusation, and sometimes with an appearance of reason. Extreme speed is a delicate thing to handle; it requires extreme judgment in conditioning. Could you expect an organ-grinder to tune to perfection and use scientifically a Stradivarius? No, certainly not. Could you expect an illiterate and unobserving driver to perfect the education of a sensitive, fast performer? No, indeed. What is the result then? Either a fast horse comes to the races in no order, shows lots of speed, but cannot find it out before the races are over, and then they cry "quitter!" Can the best athletes fight gamely in the ring when muscles and lungs are out of shape? This must be thought of and duly considered.

I think I have said enough on the subject and will finish by saying I will be at the Doctor's sale, that I intend to buy, although I have on my place now considerable of the blood offered for you gentlemen, who have mares and have young stallions you want to make speed producers, buy some of these unique speed-producing mares, and in days to come (they come soon with that family) you will prize your purchases more and more. Cross them with the good Hambletonian crosses you all own, and you will never be sorry. The up-hill work of establishing the value of the blood has been done by Dr. Hicks and myself, for you now to reap the benefit.

G. VALENSIN.

Maxim Arrives.

The great son of Musket and Realization arrived in San Francisco Thursday morning from Auckland, N. Z. He stood the long trip exceedingly well; in fact, those who saw the horse say he was as playful as a kitten, and without any signs of being travel-worn. He was seven years of age last August, and was purchased by J. B. Haggin from G. C. Stead for Rancho del Paso at a price stated to be $21,000. Maxim is a brown horse, 15.3 hands high, brown in color, weighs about 1,125 pounds at present, and is declared to be the handsomest son of the great Musket. At noon on Thursday the horse started on his journey to the great breeding establishment in the Sacramento Valley, and that the coming of this, the first son of Musket to come to America, will be hailed with pleasure, goes without saying. L. J. Rose, through Captain T. B. Merry, secured the first Musket mares that ever graced the land of Uncle Sam.

Maxim was foaled in 1884, by Musket, son of Toxophilite, dam Realization, by Yeomanry, son of Newminster; second dam Hopeful Duchess, by Young Jouramman, third dam Espoir, by Liverpool, fourth dam Desperance, by Lapdog; fifth dam Grisette, by Merlin, out of Coquette, by Orville Andrews, etc.

Maxim's turf career was a glorious one. The first day he was stripped in public was December 27, 1886, when he started for the Middle Park Stakes, and won by a length from Gipsy King, Fair Nell and three others being behind the pair mentioned. The next day he gave weight and a beating to Gipsy King, Kimberley and two others in the Nursery Handicap, doing the six furlongs in 1:20, and winning very easily. He was then shipped to Melbourne, where, though riding under the disadvantage entailed by a long sea trip and late arrival, he forced the celebrated Abercorn to extend himself in the Produce Stakes, and was beaten by only a short head. Going back to his native land for the Canterbury Autumn Meeting, Maxim started a red-hot favorite for the Champagne Stakes, and won by a length, doing the six furlongs in the good time of 1:16, and putting down such notable ones as Sextant, Gipsy King, Sylvia and Orpheline. Of these four, three subsequently became crack horses, and the fourth (Sylvia) captured the Dunedin Cup and other leading events. On the second day of the C. J. C. referred to the course was fetlock deep in mud, and Sextant, having five pounds in hand of the weights and an advantage at the start, beat him, by a length. As a three-year-old Maxim won all his races. These were the Hawke's Bay Guineas, in which he beat Lady Floria, Bangle, Wahahall and The Orator; the Flying Handicap, in which he was left at the post, and had apparently no chance at all till nearing the straight; the Spring Handicap at the same meeting, beating Rivulet, Pearl and five others, and then coming back to Canterbury he made an exhibition of Gipsy King, Sextant and Cuchfield in the Derby, one and a half miles, run in 2:40, and dished Nelson in the Canterbury Cup, doing the two miles and a quarter in 3:01½. It will be seen that Maxim started in ten races, of which he won eight and was second in two. This is really first-class, and when it is remembered that there are undeniable reasons for each of his defeats, and that he never met any but the very best horses, it will be realized that the bare figures do not do the horse justice. All who saw him race speak to this day of his wonderful power and his far-reaching stride, and those who have seen him since agree that he is the most magnificent looking stallion ever bred in New Zealand. The Australians say that it is a thousand pities that such a splendid horse should leave New Zealand, and hope that one of his sons will turn out worthy of so distinguished a sire.

Pleasanton Items.

Everything is booming at Pleasanton just at present. Geo. Starr, of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, is busy every day testing the qualities of the horses that are sent there, previous to taking them on their journey East for campaigning purposes. Steve Whipple arrived on Monday last; after him came Almonition, the smooth black Alcona colt whose dam was Pansy by Cassius M. Clay Jr. 22. This youngster has been astonishing the trotting men of Sonoma County for some time by his wonderful exhibitions of speed. Chaldean, another Sonomaite by Mambrino Wilkes, out of Fredolia by Fred Arnold; second dam by Mambrino Wilkes, is also donning the harness of the Pleasanton string, and from all accounts will bring further credit to his illustrious sire. The bay colt by Director out of Aurora, dam of Guido, the great weight-carrier and turf campaigner, and the black colt by Director out of Lugena by Thad Stevens, are also here. We noticed a very fast pacer by Del Sur that has just been placed in the stall after a long trip from Los Angeles. From what we can learn there is a very good prospect that I. De Turk will place his Anteeo mare, Myrtle, 2:19½, in the care of Mr. Salisbury to go through the Eastern circuit under the guidance of the genial Starr.

N. J. Stone has sent Ollie S., by Hawthorne dam Bessie Sedgewick by Joe Daniels, to be bred to Direct, 2:06. She will also be handled by Mr. Starr.

Monbars is slowly improving, and will soon be himself again.

Dictatum by Director, dam Stemwinder, has had his shoes pulled off for a week's rest.

Geo. Starr is handling Reflector by Director, dam by Monroe Chief, and is well pleased with him. He will be in the first rank of Director's progeny this fall.

All the Valensin stock, mares and horses, at the Valensin Stock Farm are doing well. His collection is the peer of any in this State.

J. Sutherland has a stable full of youngsters. Most of them are very fashionably bred.

Monroe Salisbury will leave for the East about the 1st of February unless something unlooked-for should occur.

Bay Rose, the Beautiful!

Whenever we see a handsome horse—one that fills our ideal of what a horse should be—the first question asked is, "What is his name?" The next, "What is his breeding?" and then "What is his record?" Bay Rose would call forth all such inquiries. He has an unique and original name, and he is by that great founder of trotters, The Moor, out of a producing daughter of his, and she was out of a daughter of one of the best sons of Williamson's Belmont. As a race horse, Bay Rose won many hard-fought turf battles. He was game, level-headed, pure-gaited, and a horse of faultless conformation and action. These qualities he transmits to his progeny. "No better-limbed horses were ever seen than the Moors," and Bay Rose bears out the truth of this assertion; for clean, hard, thoroughbred limbs and strong hoofs are among his other many qualifications. "What good is a mushy, beefy-legged horse, anyway, to breed from?" is a common remark among horsemen. Certain families of horses have this characteristic, but no one could ever say it of the Moors. Bay Rose has a stylish way of going—bold, strong and resolute, yet perfectly tractable, and can be guided with a piece of thread almost. His youngsters have the same way of moving. Not many have been handled for speed yet, but it is the intention of Mr. Pierce to have a number of them worked this fall. For an outcross for the Hambletonian mares there is no better sire in this State than Bay Rose. His blood lines have mingled with the Hambletonian family most congenially, and wonderful trotters from this union have left their names high upon the columns of the temple of equine fame. See the comprehensive advertisement in another column.

Feeding Sugar.

In this country giving animals sugar or molasses with their food was commenced after the abolition of the sugar duties in 1874, and is now common enough, though only to a small extent, and is capable of vast development, now that prices are so low. Much of the utility of beet (mangolds) in feeding is due to the four or five per cent. of sugar it contains. Sugar or molasses will induce cattle to eat all sorts of matter which they would otherwise reject, such as indifferent hay, or cut straw mixed with roots. The flesh of pigs partly fed on sugar has been proved to be unusually fine. Farmers generally are quite unaware of the wonderfully low prices now prevalent. West India molasses, of course, varies in its constitution, but probably contains over 40 per cent. of cane and 20 per cent. of grape sugar—say 60 per cent. of saccharine. It is thus, for the farmer's purpose, worth about two-thirds the price of sugar. It is also convenient in use, as it does not require to be dissolved before mixing with roots, chaff, hay, etc. Various receipts have been given, the usual quantity suggested being one quart of molasses a day for a store and two quarts for a fatting beast. This should be mixed with cut chaff, cake, mangold, etc., and turned over and over a few times, leaving it for a few hours to allow the sugar to be thoroughly absorbed, and in addition a slight degree of fermentation to be set up.—North British Agriculturist.

Minnehaha's Sister.

The well-bred broodmare, Lady Stevens, sister to the famous Minnehaha (dam of five in the list), will be sold at the Hicks sale next Thursday. Owners of stock farms should be on hand. Such a treasure as she will prove valuable in any stud harem. See advertisement.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Answers for this department must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender, not necessarily for publication, but as proof of good faith. Write the questions distinctly, and on one side of the paper only. Positively no questions will be answered by mail or telegraph.

"The Play" John L. Sullivan and Charles Mitchell fought thirty nine rounds lasting two hours and forty-five minutes, at Chantilly, a suburb of Paris, on March 10, 1888. The battle ended in a draw, but Mitchell appeared to have the best of it at the finish.

J. and T., Petaluma, Cal. Do you know what salary was offered James Dustin by Ariel Latham? In order to settle a dispute will you please tell us? What salary did Marvin get? Answer.—James Dustin was offered $100 a month, and was told that amount was larger than any handler of trotters now receive but Palo Alto. He refused to accept the terms. We do not know what Mr. Marvin received; that he was worth more to the farm than any man in America, every horseman knows. He gets $10,000 a year at Miller & Sibley's.

T. E. R., Los Angeles. In your last issue I noticed an inquiry as to Senator's record at two years old. His record at two years old was 2:33, made at Stockton in a race against Alcazar and Transit, Senator winning three heats in 2:33; he was driven by me.

JAMES DWAIS, Salinas, Cal.

A. E. D.—Please give the pedigree of Bonner (by Chieftain), the sire of the dam of Gus Wilkes, 2:22. Is he registered, and who bred him? Answer.—Write to James Thompson, Stockton, Cal., care of L. U. Shippee.

W. T. D., Denver, Col.—What big races, if any, did the following horses win: Gladiateur, Partisan, Pantaloon, The Baron, Irish Birdcatcher, Ely, Kingston and Venison—all English horses? Answer.—Gladiateur won the Epsom Derby, Two Thousand Guineas and Doncaster St. Leger of 1865, also the Grand Prize of Paris in the same year. Partisan or Pantaloon did not win any of the "classical events." The Baron, the Cesarewich and St. Leger in 1845. Irish Birdcatcher did not win any of the great stake races. Ely won the Goodwood Cup in 1865. Kingston won the Goodwood Cup in 1852. Venison did not win any of the big events, but was second in several, we believe.

J. W. D., Oakdale, Cal.—1. How many colts has Echo, that is in the twenty list. 2. Give their time and names. Answer.—One. 2. Belle Echo, 2:20.

A subscriber, Crow's Landing.—Give the breeding of a horse named Volscian, owned by one Grigsby, near Napa City. Answer.—By Vandal, dam by Grey Eagle; second dam Mary Morris by Medoc, etc. He was afterwards called American.

M. H. N., Big Pine, Cal.—1. Which George M. Patchen was it that died near Bakersfield, then the property of I. B. Haggin? 2. Give me the breeding of the horse called Bay Prince, now about twelve years old. He ran on the Sacramento track when about four years old, and was somewhat broken down. Answer. George M. Patchen Jr. 31, 2:27 sometimes called California Patchen, sired by George M. Patchen 30, 2:25, dam Belle, by Top Bellfounder. 2. He died in 1887. George M. Patchen, Jr., sired ten in the list, nine sons who produced fifteen trotters and seven dams of nine trotters. William Hendrickson brought him here from New Jersey, where he purchased him of Joseph Regan in 1862. 2. Bay Prince won a race at Red Bluff, Cal., Jan. 1, 1885, but his breeding is not known by us. Write to Secretary, Red Bluff Fair Association.

A. K., Flemington, N. J.—I have a letter from Hancock M. Johnston, of your State, telling me that you some time ago published in your paper the history of Werner's Trustee and of David Hill's Black Hawk. Would you kindly let me know if you can supply me with your paper of the date in which said articles appeared, and if so let me know price and I will gladly remit amount that is necessary for same. Answer.—In our State Fair edition of 1890 we published something of the history of David Hill's Black Hawk, written by Wilbur F. Smith, of Sacramento. About Werner's Trustee, we cannot remember when his history was published, but if you will write to G. W. Woodard, Woodland, Cal., he may be able to tell you considerable about the horse. We understand Fred Werner, Trustee's owner, is still alive and residing somewhere in Yolo county, but none of the queries have ever been answered by him.

Mixed Grasses.

The almost universal practice of sowing only timothy and red clover to furnish meadow and pasture must be modified in the future if we are to get results that are equal to the possibilities that be within our reach, in the line of future production. We must add to the list lucerne and orchard grass if the aftermath is a matter of much consequence to us. And for the improvement of the hay in fineness, we must sow alsikie clover. If we are only looking for hay we may leave out the orchard grass, which is inclined to monopolize the room and crowd the other grasses to the wall.

This, however, must be borne in mind: If there is orchard grass and lucerne from any portion of the meadow, it must be cut early; so early that the timothy will not be in the best condition for cutting. In a meadow of this nature, however, timothy will not form a large proportion of the bulk, so that the loss from this source will not be very heavy. Orchard grass and lucerne are both of a woody nature when ripe, and they ripen quite early. They should therefore be cut at the proper stage for making hay, which will be at that period at which the red clover is also ready.

Rathbone.

This grandly-bred thoroughbred stallion, victor over C. H. Todd (winner of American Derby, 1887), will make the season of 1892 at E. S. Paddock's place in Forestville, Sonoma county, Cal. For extended pedigree and other particulars, see advertisement in another column.

Al. Hankins, of Chicago, one of the proprietors of Garfield Park, former owner of Malcolm and Aristides, arrived in this city to-day.

The Standard-Bred Trotting Stallion

ALTO

Sired by Anteeo, 2:16¼, dam Emma Taylor, by Alexander 180; second dam Belle by Gen Taylor, third dam Belle by Boston Boy, he by David Hill's Blackhawk, out of Boston Girl, an inbred Messenger and Morgan mare that trotted on the Centreville Course, Long Island, in 1853, two miles in 5:31¾ and 5:32, and on the same course in the same year three miles in 7:45.

ALTO, as can be seen by the above pedigree, is related to the most prominent fast horses of the day. In appearance, he is a beautiful shade of seal brown with ten muzzle and flanks. He is 15.3 hands high and weighs 1,80 pounds; in conformation he is unexcelled by any young horse in the State. His disposition is perfect and has no vices. He has never been trained for speed except when he was three years old. At that time he received some six weeks' work and trotted halves in 1:12. He has been bred to a few mares and proved a sure foal-getter. He is just seven years old and would pay for himself either in the stud or on the track the first year.

I will also sell

EMMAVOLO,
By ANTEVOLO

Out of the dam Alto. She is five years old, bright bay in color, with black points, never been trained for speed, but can be driven anywhere. She is a fine, large rangy mare, and just the kind that is most needed on a stock farm. She was stinted to Stammon last spring and is believed to be in foal. Stammon is by Stamboul 2:11, out of a mare by The Moor.

THOROUGHBRED MARES FOR SALE.

JOE VIVA, br., foaled 1886, by Joe Hooker, her dam Lady Viva, by Three Cheers.

From the tabulated pedigree appended, it will be seen that the breeding is of the best kind.

SANTA CRUZ has a remarkable pedigree, two Bonnie Scotland and three Lexington crosses. Her grandsire, Malcolm, is the grandsire of El Rio Rey, and as her dam is by Norfolk, the sire of El Rio Rey, she bears a close relationship to that invincible race horse, and so highly formed that she will serve as a model.

JOE VIVA, brown, 15½ hands high, of good form, and should prove a high-class broodmare. Her sire stands very high in the list of successful sires, and the sire of her dam, Three Cheers, is the sire of Acclaim, Almont, Cheerful, Applause and other good racehorses, and her grandam, Lady Amanda, one of the very fastest from half a mile to two miles, and she is a half-sister to Malcolm, Regent, Ontario et al., and a full sister to Lady Middleton.

These mares are at Gov. Stanford's Vina Ranch, have been stinted to Whips, and the prospective foals are reserved, and the purchaser will be required to take proper care of them and permit them to suck until five months old, when they will be taken away.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty-nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of fast work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,500 purse, Free-For-All, defeating Faust, 2:18½, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18, Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¼, fastest record for a four-year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, fastest four-year-old record for a pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¼ (who was shown trials the past season in 2:14); Thornton, 2:26¼, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:24½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Egthorne 2:12½, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams, Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, soft and in no condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29½. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS—He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¼, and Jay Eye See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¾. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¾. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:05, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Chrisman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:30 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000, and his service is offered at $200.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently-formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California today. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

ABDOL

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 34 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 2 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen outside mares at $50 for the season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Vola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¼ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty outside mares at $50 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19, Annie C., 2:25, Albert H., 2:27¼, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¼ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¼, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¾, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾, combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile than was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds—Freedom, 2:29¾.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc.), and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32½ to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2:19¾, GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BAS BLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

Dam EMILY, Dam of FORTUNA, 2:22, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

Third dam LEER MARE, Dam of JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By SURPLUS (son of ASHLAND), Brother to LADY LIGHTFOOT, dam of LADY THORN, 2:18¼.

By LEER'S KING WILLIAM, Son of HOWARD'S ST. CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot, 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17¾, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Surplus was out of a daughter of Eureka, by Long Island Black Hawk. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well-shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:10 without boots of any kind. His oldest colt will enter the 2:20 list. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

THREE CHEERS

Will make the Season of 1892 at

WM. M. MURRY'S STABLES,

715 Twenty-third street, Sacramento, Cal.

THREE CHEERS

Hurrah (imp.): Jovial (Sister to Grey Momus; Bay Middleton); Newminster (Beeswing; Touchstone)

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

TERMS.

Seventy-five Dollars for the Season.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is glori ously mistaken. However, don't point out the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing on both heels and the entire wearing surface.

Dr. M. W. Hicks, Sacramento,

(Sold on Account of Ill-Health)

— ON —

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1892,

AT 10 A. M., AT

SALES YARD, CORNER VAN NESS AVENUE and MARKET STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

The continued ill-health of Dr. Hicks compels him, reluctantly, to permanently retire from the business of breeding standard-bred horses. He has leased his stallions to parties in Indiana, and through the medium of the auction block proposes to dispose of his broodmares and young horses. His splendid array of broodmares, with their produce, collected and bred with such care and excellent judgment, will be placed unreservedly in the hands of the public, he feeling confident their merit will be recognized and fair prices obtained. His stock runs largely to the great speed lines of the country, and judicious crossing has produced broodmares which are invaluable to the breeding community.

Full catalogues giving breeding, registry, etc., together with breeding of stallions, for reference, may be had upon application to the undersigned, 22 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3,50,

VIEW OF SOUTHER FARM, SAN LEANDRO, CAL.

THE SOUTHER FARM SWIMMING TANK.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

The upper picture shows the buildings and part of the track of the Souther Farm, which lies one and a half miles northeast of San Leandro. It is about fourteen miles from San Francisco, and many horses from that city are trained or kept at this farm.

The work of developing speed is one of the main features of the business, and what is believed to be a great help to this end is shown in the lower picture of the swimming tank, which is a concrete basin ninety feet long over all, twenty feet wide and eight feet deep. At each end the wall slants down to the bottom, making an easy place for a horse to walk in. Over the center of the tank a platform is hung from the roof, and from this a man guides the swimming horse, giving just the required amount of work.

Swimming has always been recognized as the best of exercise, and swimming horses is by no means new, although the Souther Farm bath is believed to be the first ever built for the use of a training farm.

To appreciate what has been done by this method, it is only necessary to look at a few instances. Some years ago Phyllis, a brown mare by Phil Sheridan, was campaigned by a man known as "Pop" Wagner. When the combination struck Cleveland, after a most successful season, Phyllis was very sore and couldn't trot at all; but Pop was equal to the emergency and swam the mare in the lake every day. Every one laughed or made fun of the performance—the world would throw bricks at enterprise and originality almost as readily then as it will now; but Pop laughed last and best when Phyllis came out good as new and won her race in splendid shape.

Many such instances could be quoted; almost every horseman of experience can tell of similar cases. To come right down to the present day, one of the most conclusive proofs of the benefits of the system is given by the performances of Allerton. This great horse was distanced by Margaret S. in a four-year-old stake, and he was supposed to be hopelessly broken down. To everyone's surprise he was trotting races again in a few weeks, and the horse whose enterprising owner, Mr. Williams, "had killed this time for sure," rounded to wonderfully. He had been swimming in the river—getting regular exercise, keeping flesh down, building up new muscle and lung power, and giving Nature a chance to heal the battered-up leg, while the rest of the body was both developed and freed from soreness.

During the past year, time and again, it was reported that Allerton was hopelessly broken down; but he always came up smiling for a new whack at his record, and it was the swimming that enabled him to trot to his mark of 2:09¼.

Dozens of other cases could be given, and what was accomplished with Phyllis and Allerton proves the worth of the system during trotting times; but one of the greatest benefits is in the getting horses into condition to begin training. A heavy horse generally becomes sick of the whole business long before his superfluous flesh is worked off even if his legs do not give out; by swimming, flesh can be quickly and safely taken off, legs and feet made better instead of being knocked out, and the drudgery of track and road work can be wonderfully reduced.

The benefits of the system may be summed up as "Exercise without Concussion." Gilbert Tompkins.

Santa Rosa Scintillations.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—The directors of the Santa Rosa Trotting Horse Club had a meeting last week and re-elected J. P. Overton, President, and elected W. H. Lumsden, Vice-President. Mr. Overton has been recently elected cashier of the Savings Bank, and in view of his increasing business cares, strenuously objected to serving as President as the turf club again, but the directors persuaded him to reconsider his determination, to the great satisfaction of the entire membership, for it is generally conceded that he is about the right man for that place.

Monroe Salisbury, the great Pleasanton horseman, and his no less famous driver, George Starr, were here a few days ago trying to induce I. DeTurk to let them have his great Anteeo-Nutwood mare, Myrtle, to take East with their string of stars this season. We have not learned whether or no Mr. DeTurk is going to accede to their request. It is generally believed that if this wonderful filly goes East that she will be a prominent figure in the great events marked out there this year.

M. J. Streining sold his fine Redwood filly, out of the dam of Ned Locke, to a Healdsburg man a few days ago, getting the snug sum of $500 for the young trotter. Mr. Streining has always been a great admirer of a good horse, and has never been without one or more of them.

Will Redwood go East this season? is a question one hears frequently. His owners, Messrs. McFadyen and Murphy, are seriously considering the matter, and it would not be surprising if this good son of Anteeo should be found in the blue-grass region this summer.

W. P. Fine bought a Capri filly of J. W. Doan, of Healdsburg, a few days ago, and the same day sold her to T. A. Proctor. The filly is out of an Echo mare, and when two years old trotted a race in three minutes at Vallejo.

Dr. Proctor, the well-known Petaluma horseman, was a visitor in town this week. The Doctor was at one time owner of the promising race horse Silkey. He has now an Elmo mare, in foal to Commodore, that will prove a bargain for somebody, as we understand she is for sale.

Frank Steele was in town Saturday with his splendid Daly colt, out of Dinah Button. It is a bright bay, and looks very much like its sire.

Poco Tempo will go to St. Helena again this season. He made a good stand there last year, and his services are in greater demand this season than ever.

Rufus Murphy has returned from San Francisco, where he was so badly injured a few nights ago in a catch-as-catch-can wrestle with a broken cable. He still carries one arm in a sling, but says that nearly all of his pain has subsided.

It is reported that Wyman Murphy's mare, Maud M., is to go East with Salisbury's string. She is very speedy, dead game and has no record. She may prove a surprise party on some of our Eastern friends.

Plans are already being formed for the next race meeting of the club, and an earnest effort will be made to give Santa Rosa that prominence in racing circles to which her great horse resources entitle her. Publius.

Santa Rosa, January 26, 1892.

Two Famous Mares Dead.

One of the best thoroughbred brood mares in California died at Palo Alto Farm late last week. It was Frolic, gray, foaled 1871, by Thunder (son of Lexington and Blue Bonnet, by imp. Hedgeford), dam imp. Siskin, by Muscovite, the winner of the Cæsarewitch of 1854. Frolic was the dam of Prescious, Freda, Oriflamme, Lord of the Harem and Peri, all stake winners. Especially good on the turf were the first three named horses, famous from one end of the country to the other. In addition to being a good race mare, Precious is the dam of Peel, a crack race horse, and a promising sire now at Palo Alto Farm. While the loss of Frolic is a great one, she had reached the ripe age of twenty-one years.

The great old gray pacing mare Lucy, 2:14, is no more. She was foaled in the early seventies, and nothing was ever known of her breeding. Her races against the famous Sleepy Tom, Mattie Hunter, Bay Billy and Rowdy Boy are still fresh in the memories of race-goers of 1879, 1880 and 1881. Winner of twenty-nine races and dam of Lucyneer, 2:27 at three years; she goes down to her grave at Palo Alto Stock Farm, her memory revered and her career famous.

Denver Dashes.

Denver, Col., Jan. 20, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—At the Overland office they tell me that Mr. Temple is still in California. While visiting the office I picked up the Breeder and Sportsman of January 11th, and noticed an item among the horse news to the effect that Mr. Temple was at the Holly sale at Vallejo, and had purchased the chestnut stallion Woodside, son of Woodnut. As Mr. Temple knows a good horse when he sees one, it would seem as though Denver was to be benefited by the Holly's clearance sale.

We feel rather confident here that Overland entries from California are to be liberal, and not only horses from the large stables, but we think that owners of one or two horses will pool together and fill up a car.

To take a horse or two East as far as Chicago is rather a troublesome undertaking, and an expensive one, as well. To ship to Denver, however, is a much simpler matter, and after the spring meeting is over the horses can be left at Overland until the August meeting at no great expense.

Denver is so close in these days to San Francisco or other points in California that owners can attend the meetings here without too great a sacrifice of time.

At the track already there are a number of colts that will be entered in the stakes, and some of them give signs of being able to win.

Dave Moshier, who was here last spring and fall, recently shipped several head from Illinois, where he now has the old, reliable, game and true horse, Montana Regent, in the stud. None of his youngsters are by Regent, his career in the stud commencing but recently.

Davis' colts are under the care of John Winfield—Happy Jack—a colored man of long experience and good judgment. There is a bay filly, two years old, by Richelieu, out of Maud M., by Armadeus; bay filly, two years old, by Richelieu; Silverman, roan colt, three years old, by Richelieu, dam Nannie Knox, by Pantaloon; sorrel filly, three years old, by Richelieu, dam Dolly, by Bigfellow.

John Winfield, the trainer, has a few head of his own, which he confidently looks upon as world-beaters. Good luck to him! I would rejoice with him at seeing one of the colts from his stable swing into the stretch in the lead during the race for the Derby or Overland Handicap.

Genial old Ben Davis, another colored trainer, lives at Overland the year round. And who don't know him? Pleasant, kindly, courteous always, his good nature is only overshadowed by his hopeful disposition. In his stable is Bugle, a five-year-old, by Fairplay, out of Mary P., by Trump. Then he has the fast colt Alamosa, by Astral out of Molly Powers; King Himyar, six-year-old stallion, by Himyar, out of Dixiana; Romana, chestnut filly, three years old, by Flood; Billy Duncan, by Fairplay, dam Lucille; Mary Hall, chestnut filly, by Fairplay out of a Veto mare.

Next to Happy Jack's horses we noticed those of Dan O'Brien, in our judgment one of the best trainers in the West. His knowledge of form is not exceeded. The proof of this lies in the fact that last year he won the Derby here with Minnie Elkins, the beautiful daughter of the Duke of Montrose, dam Badge, by Gilroy. Then he took the bay gelding Sympathetic's Last, by Fairplay, out of Sympathetic, East from here and won a series of well-contested races in mighty quick time. This horse is six years old and never did much good till O'Brien took him in hand. Dan can tell to a dot when his horses are ready to race, and he always starts to win.

The genial President of the Overland Jockey Club is now absent in New York. He will probably, while there, look over the Stella in her winter quarters. This good vessel is owned by Mr. Wolcott in company with Admiral Breslin, of the Gilsey House, and Mr. Henry E. Abbey.

Any afternoon during the warm season she can be seen gliding up the sound with one or the other or all of these gentlemen aboard. Very few steam yachts are equal to her in speed or commissary stores.

I am not a nautical man, and of course I may make absurd statements relative of the matter, but I have heard these ancient mariners say they defied competition either in the way of cocktails or jibbooms. What particular portion of the Stella's anatomy is the cocktail I don't know, but the statement goes all the same.

We trust you people—who live on the Coast, and who can at any time enjoy the flowing sail—will come over to the region and land and find out that while we can't race ships or reef our mainstays, we can always race horses, and to show you that we do appreciate the sea we cordially welcome among us the noble Topgallant and every worthy son of Mariner. Futurity.

Our Australian Acquisition.

Last Saturday we visited the Bay District track with a view of inspecting the Australian horses imported by Mr. R. E. deB. Lopez and landed here on the 26th of December. On the last occasion we saw them looking at their worst, they having just come off a sea trip of twenty-five days and never having laid down during the time. On Saturday they looked in perfect condition and healthy, and reflect great credit on Mr. Porteus, who is in charge of them.

The first we inspected was Idalium, a black horse, own brother to Sir Modred and Cheviot, being by Traducer from Idalia by Cambuscan from Dulcibella. His breeding is so well known to every horseman in the United States that it would be waste of time for us to repeat it here. In conformation he is unlike Cheviot, but has much of Sir Modred about him. His head, eyes, nostrils and ears are simply perfection, with beautiful and strong neck, well set on to fine shoulders, excellent legs and feet, strong, short back, and beautifully-turned quarters. He is undoubtedly a great acquisition to our horse stock, and must make a great stud mated to our mares. At the present time every one is talking of the wonderful speed of the Cheviots and Sir Modreds; and seeing that hitherto all the Australian sires have been successes, we feel certain Idalium will sustain the prestige of his family, and shall not be surprised to find him even a greater success than his brother.

The next we inspected was Merriwa, a great, lengthy five-year old son of Goldsbrough and Habena. This is a line unknown in this country. He is a black horse with three white feet and a streak on his face, a fine bold intelligent head set on a lengthy, strong neck, with a perfect shoulder, the best of legs, well-sprung ribs, giving him a very strong back, lengthy quarters, with enormous gaskins. He is perfectly sound, and we should like to see him put to work in order to test the qualities of our race horses. The breeding of this horse is gilt-edged. He is by Goldsbrough, one of the most noted Australian-bred stallions, he having sired over eighty winners, among them winners of the greatest races in Australia. The dam of Merriwa is Habena (winner of the Maribyrnong Plate) she by Yattendon, who in his day sired all the best horses in Australia, and in their turn his sons and daughters have been invaluable for breeding purposes. He was the sire of that great race horse and sire, Chester, who in his time got Abercorn, the only rival of the mighty Carbine at equal weights, and at any distance. His second dam is Atholine, admitted by Australian horsemen to be one of three of the best mares imported to Australia, she by Blair Athol, from Habena (winner of the One Thousand Guineas in England), etc. We should like this horse to go to a good lot of mares, and if he did not turn out a success, then all we can say is that good looks and high-class breeding are of no use. For an outcross both Idalium and Merriwa would prove invaluable for our American thoroughbreds.

The next we inspected was Repose, a big, raking bay mare, with a clean, game-looking head set on a fine neck, very deep shoulders and girth, excellent legs and feet, large, roomy body, strong back and quarters fit for a draft horse. She is also most beautifully bred, being by Apremont from Hammock by Orest. Hammock was the dam of Somnus, one of the greatest of New Zealand's race horses, while his sire, Apremont, has been very successful at the stud, he being by Mortemer, sire of Exile, Chimera, Wanda and Cholula from Arancaria, the dam of Rayon d'Or, who was the sire of those good and honest horsse, Tenny, and Banquet, Repose has been a good mare on the turf, having won at all distances from six furlongs to one mile and three-eighths. She is still fit to race, and must make a great matron. We should like to see her go to Wildidle, for we feel confident she would throw something first class. We understand it is Mr. Lopez's intention to book mares to Idalium, should he not be sold shortly, and we trust he will meet with the support he deserves, for the risk of bringing such valuable horses over the water is great.

Vallejo Horse Notes.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Thinking that some of your readers might like to hear how the trotting horse industry in and around the city of Vallejo is progressing, I take the liberty of sending you a few observations.

I first called on Mr. Thomas Smith, the owner of George Washington and his sire, Mambrino Chief, Jr. Washington has filled out and developed very much since last fall. Mr. Smith says that he has not taken a lame step since last November, that he will go in training for the fall circuit, and, barring accident, the horse which beats him will have to beat 2:15 three times. The next one brought out was Mambrino Chief Jr. He is a beautiful blood bay, with very stylish and elegant finish, deep, sloping shoulders and strong back, and has a record of 2:34, but that is no measure of his speed. Mr. Smith expects to give him a record of 2:25 this fall. Next on the list was Martha Washington, by George Washington. She is a very handsome filly; she is entered in the Breeder and Sportsman Futurity Stake and Occident Stake of 1893, and, barring accidents, will give a good account of herself.

I next visited the farm of Doc. LeRose, situated three miles from Vallejo on the Benicia road. The first trotter led out was a beautiful bay stallion by Admiral, dam by Pinole Patchen. He is a horse of great muscular power and fine form. The next in order was a beautiful chestnut broodmare heavy in foal to George Washington. We were also shown a yearling out of the same mare by Washington that has the easy, smooth gait of her sire, and a wonderful burst of speed. If she is properly handled she will be a hard one to beat in the Occident Stake, where she is entered. Her owner is very proud of her and holds her at a high figure.

I also visited the farm of R. Wilber, situated on the White Sulphur Spring road. He has a fine lot of broodmares and colts; among the colts is a two-year-old by Woodnut, 2:16½, and one by George Washington, both of which are very promising, but as Mr. Wilber is not a believer in early training, neither of them is broken to harness. Tried Horses at Tacoma.

Tacoma, Wash., January 20, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—Dear Sir:—In your last issue of your much esteemed paper you mention some of the horses of Tacoma that have made creditable records. You will please permit me to state that you have left out some of our most shining lights which I will herein take the liberty to give you the names of, hoping by so doing I will not incur your displeasure:

We have the game and fast performer, Bishop Hero, 2:26, Harry T., pacer, 2:26, by Nutwood; Lady Mack, by Lemont; Royal Prince, by Dexter Prince, owned by C. P. Chamberlin; also a grandson of the great Electioneer, by Hernani; besides Charlie Ford, a three-year-old pacer by Dexter Prince. This colt paced a trial mile close to 2:25 last summer over our own track. He is owned by C. P. Chamberlin, who also owns the grandson of Electioneer and Royal Prince.

James Brockway has engaged Trainer Hickey to drive Bishop Hero the coming season. Mr. Hickey has severed his connection with J. S. Wintermute, for whom he trained and drove during the past season. Mr. Brockway thinks that Bishop Hero will be a faster and better horse this year than ever before.

T. Chambers has a fast pacing mare called Martha Washington. Martha can pace better than 2:30, and is a beauty.

Mr. Robert Breeze has Isaac W. Anderson's string in charge. Amongst the lot is a beautiful bay stallion named Chewawa. He is registered and standard and is a late arrival from Kentucky.

Hoping that I have written something of interest for your valuable paper, I remain, Yours, very respectfully,

C. A. Harrison.

Care and Management of Mares.

This article does not treat of the selection of the broodmare. It is to be supposed that we have an animal sound in every way and free from all defects and diseases that are liable to be transmitted. Nearly all diseases which equine flesh is heir to are hereditary, or the constitution or conformation likely to contract disease is transmitted, and, consequently, the greatest care should be taken to ascertain that the mare be sound in every respect. The importance of giving a mare proper care cannot be underestimated, for in proportion as we are successful with our mares will our breeding ventures prove profitable.

The breeders of the trotting horse in America are divided into three classes—the city breeder, who breeds one or two mares, and who, having no farm, keeps them in the city; the small farmer, who breeds trotters on the side, so to speak, and the large breeder of unlimited means and faculties; all requiring more or less different care and management for their mares. The limits of this article not admitting of a detailed treatment of each class, the subject must be handled in a general way, leaving the astute breeder to make his own deductions as to what will suit his particular case.

GETTING MARES IN FOAL.

In the first place the all-important thing is to get your mare in foal, and right here I would say that a mare should not be bred before her three-year-old form, my plan being to endeavor as much as possible to have the yearling filly develop as much in bone and stature as possible, and then train her in her two-year-old form, getting a record if possible, but avoid over-taxing her. It may happen that you have a phenomenal, in which case you will do well to defer her breeding until she has made a reputation on the turf, thereby adding greatly to her own value as well as to that of her produce. Adopting this course, then, we have as a three-year-old a fully developed and almost natural animal. I would not breed her before March 1st, in northern climates, as I find that previous to that time mares almost invariably fail to catch. My plan is to try the mare three times a week until we catch her in season, and when served to place her in a quiet place alone for a few hours. It is a general method not to return the mare again until the twenty-first day, but I have found it a good plan to return her at the fourteenth, eighteenth, twenty-first, twenty-fourth and twenty-eighth days, as I find that mares are just as apt to come in season on any of the dates named as on the twenty-first. If she refuses the horse on each of these occasions I try her three times a week thereafter for two weeks, and if, at the end of that time, she still refuses, then twice a week for two months, and if at the end of that time she still refuses, she may be considered safely in foal. My reason for being so thorough in this respect is that the liability of failing to get the mare in foal will be lessened. A valuable mare bred to a high-priced horse, and failing to get in foal, loses not only what might have been a valuable colt, but suffers a loss which is irreparable, for that year of her life, as a breeder, has been lost irretrievably. It behooves us then to use every precaution in order to insure her fertility.

CARE DURING PREGNANCY.

Now as to her care during pregnancy. A mare in pasture will receive all the nourishment she requires, and will take all the exercise she needs, but if you are mindful, however, to feed her a little grain it will only do her good, as she will relish the change, and all good grains being blood producers, it will be of benefit to the growing fœtus. That a mare in foal can be worked is not only true, but, I believe, if the proper care is taken, it is beneficial. Many are the instances where a mare in foal has fought out hard races and gained a low mark in the early stages of her pregnancy, and the experiment has been fraught with nothing but good to both mare and colt. The greatest care should, however, be exercised to avoid all slips or unnatural strains, as such generally result in painful injuries, ending in abortion.

ABORTION.

Kicks, strains, falls and unusual excitement are, of course, the known causes for abortion, but there are many cases which defy the skill of the veterinarian in detecting the cause. My experience has been that a mare will abort within twenty-four hours after being attacked with pinkeye, and from post-mortem examinations held on mares which have died out of a herd, a majority of which aborted, I concluded that, though not apparent to outside observation, the mares were suffering from what might be termed bilious influenza. Treatment in such cases I believe to be useless, as the mare will slip her colt despite all efforts. In the cases of those mares that have aborted, when about four months gone in foal, the following year, I find that feeding them wheat and a little hemp seed and black haw is beneficial in preventing them from aborting again.

In the fall, mares in pasture should be taken up before the herbage gets too scant, as it is very essential to keep the mare in good condition, but not fat. Ground oats and bran, with hay and a few carrots, will keep them in ordinary flesh and good condition if fed with judgment. They should be allowed to run out during the day, but in no case be exposed to severe weather, and at this time the greatest care should be taken to prevent injuries of any sort. The mare should have a box-stall about 12x12, well lighted and ventilated, and which, above all things, should be kept thoroughly clean and well bedded.

FOALING TIME.

As the period of gestation draws to an end, which lasts all the way from a little more than 300 to a little less than 400 days, and commonly about 340 days, a close watch should be kept on the mare, as it may be necessary to assist nature. The signs of parturition are generally a sinking in about the flanks, just under the hips, and the filling out of the teats. If everything is all right the colt will come without any aid, and in such cases do not interfere, for if mare and colt are all right they will take care of themselves. Should the colt come wrong, that is, not in the natural position, then assistance is necessary. Any one with a little experience and a little common sense, by means of foaling hooks and other veterinary instruments, can readily assist the mare, and assistance must be prompt, for if the assistance of a veterinarian cannot be secured at short notice, the chances are that, if left in this condition for an hour or two, both mare and foal will be lost. A man cannot be told how to act in such cases, however, as the use of instruments must be learned by practical demonstration. There is one case, however, which occasionally occurs that can be readily remedied by any one, and that is where the colt is foaled in the sac, in which case the colt should at once be liberated, as otherwise it will soon smother.

The attendant should not leave the mare and foal until he is satisfied that neither need further assistance. He must see to it that the foal stands up and sucks, and if it fails to do either must be assisted. He should also see that its bowels move, and if not, a little tepid water should be injected. The mare, if fed hay and grain at time of foaling, is also liable to be constipated, and this should also be attended to. After foaling and when she gets up I give her a warm mash and some chilled water. After all has been attended to, the mare should be left alone with her foal and kept as quietly as possible, the attendant occasionally looking in to see that nothing has gone wrong.

IN SEASON AGAIN.

We will now suppose the mare to have got through all right and nursing her colt. It is the rule that she will be tried on the ninth day after foaling, but I find many will come in season at the seventh day, and accordingly I try them on that day, and on the eighth, and if not too cross, or fighting the stallion too much, I serve them on the ninth day whether they are in season or not, for if that date is allowed to pass in some cases they get so attached to their colt, and so cross and ugly, that they will not allow the stallion to come near them. In such cases I also try them every day for several days, but if not, I proceed as described in the beginning of this article.

A good deal has been said and written about milk-producing food, but the only true milk-producing food is rich grass, and the sooner the mare can get this the better for herself and colt.

WEANING THE COLT.

I wean the colts at from five to six months old, my method being to have a small paddock alongside of a field in which the mares and colts are, and by means of a fence, built in such a way that the colts can get underneath it, but not the mother. In the paddock, or small field, are troughs in which grain is put, and from which the youngsters soon learn to eat. The colts are then taken up and put two in a box-stall, and the mares in the meantime fed dry feed, and their udder rubbed with hog's lard or camphorated oil, if necessary, and the operation is complete.

In laying down these rules it must be understood that no fixed regulations can be framed that will apply in all cases, as there will be exceptions and peculiar cases that will undermine all theories or axioms. Above everything else a breeder must have and use common sense.—HENRY LAUGHLIN, in Clark's Horse Review.

Silver Bow Stock Farm.

About one mile from Milpitas, in Santa Clara County, Messrs. Morehouse and Williams have about completed the stalls and fenced the paddocks and made other improvements on their 200-acre tract of rich land, which is most appropriately called the "Silver Bow Stock Farm." The name has been adopted in honor of Silver Bow, 2:22½, the "Handsomest McGregor in the World!" and in the fields adjoining this splendid stallion's capacious barn, is a collection of mares, fillies and colts that is a credit to the judgment of their owners. At our solicitation, they have furnished us with the names of the following mares that were bred to Silver Bow, during his season of 1891. A perusal will convince the most skeptical that these mares are indeed worthy of all the good care and kind attention they receive at this well-appointed place. Silver Bow will found a family of his own which for beauty, style, gameness, speed, sonndness and docility will be hard to equal. It will consist of representatives that will train on:

Bay mare, Hattie, by Commodore Belmont 4340, first dam, Barona, by Woodford Mambrino 2:21½; second dam, by Alexander's Norman; third dam, by Grey Eagle.

Bay mare, Libretto, full sister to Hattie.

Black mare, Topsey, by Stanford, son of Electioneer, first dam, by Jim Lick, son of Homer, son of Hambletonian 10; second dam, by John Nelson, son of Trustee; third dam, by Billy Cheatham, son of Belmont (Williamson's).

Bay mare, Fillit, by Viscount, son of Abdallah, 15, first dam, Anna Ferguson, by Commander, son of Boston; second dam, by Captain Elgee, son of imp. Leviathan; third dam, by Altorf; fourth dam, Virginia, by imp. Leviathan.

Bay mare, Nellie, by Gibraltar, (sire of Homestake 2:14¼), first dam, by Naubuc, brother to Thomas Jefferson 2:24; second dam said to be by Belmont (Williamson's).

One thoroughbred mare by Patsy Duffy, in foal to Eolian is also on this farm.

A ROYAL youngster made its appearance on earth at Palo Alto on the 20th inst.—a chestnut colt, foaled by Flambeau, out of Fairy Rose (dam of Racine and Fairy). That it should prove a winner goes without saying, and that its career will be watched with interest is also pretty certain.

Salisbury on Columbia's Track.

PLEASANTON, CAL., January 6, 1892.

W. C. JONES, ESQ.—Dear Sir:—Yours of December 28th received, and I note carefully what you say in regard to your track improvements and stakes. I think your ideas good, but don't know about the fence in the centre, which you speak of. The home stretch down grade is right, if you can make balance of mile about level, then you will surely have the fastest one in the world, as I think your soil the very best I have seen for fast work, as it is so very light; besides, you hava a splendid climate; am not sure but what it is as good as our California, with better pasture lands.

I am greatly inclined towards Tennessee for raising and developing fast stock.

I think I have some great horses for next season. Have two green pacers, so would like large pacing purses for same classes. Have one Director, three years old, trotter, which I like, and some other that will do if they continue to improve.

Little Direct looks one hundred per cent better than when at your track—fifty pounds heavier, and faster in proportion, as he seems to be much faster than ever.

He will beat, next year, the 2:09, 2:08, 2:08¾ quite a good deal over your track, and I suppose that Hal Pointer will do the same, as no horse has an easy job that beats that big fellow. It always tired me, whether it did Direct or not.

Direct will close his season at Lexington, Ky., by June 15th, in order to get in shape to meet the great Hal Pointer.

Yours truly, M. SALISBURY.

The above is but a sample of the letters that are received by Mr. Jones from horsemen who have had their horses race at this celebrated track.

A GREAT deal of interest is being taken by local horsemen in the new Denver kite track, which will be built near Sheridan Heights. The Colorado Trotting Horse Breeders' Association, which comprises the leading trotting horse men of the State, is not directly interested in the scheme, as its members prefer to remain neutral. In this movement they are wise, for they do not feel that it is their business to tie their influence to any tracka ssociation.

If you have over-indulged in eating or drinking, take a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator.

TURF AND TRACK.

B. C. Holly will retain his training grounds at Flosden.

Fifty-three trotters and pacers with records better than 2:30 died in 1891.

Seventy-five sons of George Wilkes have sired 409 2:30 trotters and 111 pacers.

Longfellow's produce heads the best of winning thoroughbreds for the year 1891, with $177,697 to their credit.

The need of a good law to protect the farmers from quack veterinarians was never more needful than this winter.

Lea, a trotting sister to the pacer Adonis, 2:11½, and the trotter Cupid, 2:18, is one of the best two-year-olds in Ohio.

Thomas Smith, of Vallejo, Cal., is the owner of Maud, 2:29¾, by McDonald Chief 3583, and not of Maud, 2:30, by Hiram.

The horse market of Sparks Brothers of Kansas City was burned late last week. Over 300 horses and mules perished. Loss $60,000.

Dexter trotted eighty-seven heats better than 2:30, which is more than any other son or daughter of Hambletonian 10 has ever done.

Vic H. is going East with the Pleasanton string, and no doubt she will give a good account of herself in every event she is entered for.

George Shearer, of San Rafael, the popular real estate dealer, had a beautiful Dawn filly out of Lady Fox die last week of influenza.

Wayland W. is thought so much of at Eureka, Humboldt county, that the owners would set no price on him in answers to some inquiries.

By the burning of Hull's barns at Grand Rapids, Mich., last Saturday, Acmon F. Eagleburg and a gray pacer, valued at $20,000 perished.

Al Hankins, of Chicago, is traveling around the city and visiting the various stock farms, accompanied by our most prominent horsemen.

Will Allerton's brother, Barnhart, bring as high a price as Baby McKee? is now the question that is agitating the sage of Independence.

There will be a spring meeting of the San Benito County Agricultural Association at Hollister—two days racing at the track, May 1st and 2nd.

Whenever the weather permits, men are busy fixing the regulation track at Stockton. It will be hard to excel this course when it is put in shape.

It is said that the fastest weanling trotter in Kentucky is by Alfred G., 2:19¾, a son of Anteeo, 2:16¼. The dam of the weanling is by Pilot Medium.

The Oakland track looks deserted. Some active horsemen should lease that splendid course, and as it can be had for a low figure, it can be made to pay well.

Two prominent horsemen recently made a wager of $200 on the question of Balkan, 2:15, trotting in 2:12 this fall. The money is up and both sides are very confident.

Mr. E. F. Fallon, of San Benito county, has a promising lot of thoroughbreds in training. Fairlawn farm will certainly be heard from along the circuit this year.

If our wealthy heiresses that are buying titles abroad would build up an export trade by using the trotter as teams and single drivers, their "doing evil that good may come" of it will be forgiven them.

We have heard no more about the much-talked-of race course on the large tract of land near Pleasanton that was broached last spring. Has it, too, like the balance of the race-track schemes, fizzled out?

The second dam of Arion, 2:10¾, was Hambletonian Chief, he by Hambletonian 10, out of a daughter of Plato, a son of Long Island Black Hawk; Plato's dam was by Shark, a son of American Eclipse.

Arion traces five times to imported Bellfounder, twice through his sire, Eleetioneer, and three times through his dam, Manette. He takes in the blood of Hambletonion three times and Harry Clay twice.

The Live Stock Record of Lexington, Ky., contains a vast amount of horse news nowadays, especially the sort to interest lovers of thoroughbred horses. New life seems to have been infused into the veins of its editors.

C. H. Nelson says that Budd Doble will not train Nelson next year. It is very probable that he will be handled by George Starr, the driver of the pacer Direct, who gave the latter his record of 2:06 last season.

Father Bill Daly sent a dispatch from Hartford to one of the committee of free horse-owners, asking him to wire back something good for him to play. The committee man answered: "Play the Board of Control strong."

Jay Beach, the Vancouver breeder, and owner of Altamont, declares that he will breed his Altamont mares, Coquetta and Umatilla, to McKinney 2:12½. There will be enough Wilkes blood in this union to suit the most fastidious.

J. Irwin Crooks (son-in-law of the late J. I. Case, of Racine, Wis.) has a farm of some 1,200 acres near Healdsburg. He has a few good mares and a fine stallion, and perhaps when the time comes we shall have him enrolled in our army of breeders.

The well-known breeeder, J. F. Martindale, assists in the musical department of the First Presbyterian Church, Independence, Ia., and the voice of J. W. Mercer, the driver and trainer of Incas, 2:14½, is heard in the choir at the M. E. Church. And all is well.

Attention is called to the sale of Mountain Boy, as advertised in our columns. His dam, Elista, has a record of 2:20¾, and she is out of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer) and by Messenger Duroc. Mountain Boy's colts are all handsome and natural trotters.

Senator Stanford has twenty-seven entries in The Horseman Futurity stakes—nine of them being colts from Benton mares. It has also been noticed that in his list of horses recently sold in New York, not a Benton mare was offered for sale. The reason is obvious.

It is rumored that the Rancho del Paso trotters will be handled for speed this year. The owner of this large breeding farm is convinced that the example set by Palo Alto and the San Mateo Stock Farm is the only way to bring the merits of the young stock before the public.

The thoroughbreds that win the money are the ones entered in valuable stakes. The same is true of the trotter. If owners fail to train their colts and enter them in such events they have no cause for complaint if their breeding ventures are unsuccessful. "Nothing comes of nothing."

L. H. McIntosh has purchased a nice farm of over 300 acres near Chico; his old ranch, about fifteen miles from town, will only be used for agricultural purpose. He has some fourteen colts and fillies in training, and they are all doing well. The colts by Arthur Wilkes are very speedy.

Frank D. Stout, owner of Nutwood, George B. Burch, a wealthy lumberman and banker, and Charles E. Wales, landlord of the Hotel Julien, have secured control of the Driving Park Association at Dubuque, Ia. They will lay out a mile track and offer about the same purses as Independence.

Robert Seers, of Anaconda, Mont., recently bred Belle Evans to Vici, son of Virgil and Nutwood Maid, owned by the Stewart Bros., Moscow, Idaho. Belle Evans is by Humphrey Evans, dam Nancy Harris, by Brigand; second dam, Cricket, by Virginian; third dam, Flora, by imp. Ambassador.

It will pay stallion owners to send in their advertisements as soon as possible. There is hardly a horseman in this State that is not a subscriber to the Breeeer and Sportsman, and the experience of all former advertisers is that an advertisement inserted in its columns pays for itself in the first insertion.

Isaac Murphy, the well-known jockey; has signed a contract to ride for the Hellgate Stable this year, in which are such noted horses as Yorkville Belle, Demuth, Rey del Rey and San Juan. Murphy recently bought from Major B. C. Thomas the two-year-old chestnut colt The Hero, by Fellowcraft out of Lulu S.

Stamboul, 2:11, has been taken from the Hobart Stock Farm to the Bay District track on account of the prevalence of that epidemic, which raged there some ten days ago. He is looking better than he ever did, and is as frisky as a kitten. The attendant, Sam, is with him. and looks out for the interests of the great trotter.

Robert Brown, of Petaluma, last spring bred a number of mares to his fine stallion Stammoor (by Stamboul, 2:11), and is very anxious to see what the results will be. Every horseman in this State is troubled with the same epidemic about this time of the year. Have patience, friends, and thus may all your fondest hopes be realized.

Another new winning sire by Musket has turned up in Torpedo, whose son Pinfire (out of Yatterina, by Yattendon) won the Auckland Cup on Christmas Day. Pinfire's starting price was 18 to 1, and the fight between him and Hilda was a desperate one. She carried 128 pounds to his 97 pounds, and the weight was too much for her.

This last rain is just what was needed in this State. From many large stock farms we have been receiving letters that contained information regarding the amount of hay being fed to the horses and cattle. The pasture last year dried up very quickly, and hay was fed about the first of November; this was something unusual on this Coast.

Thos. Miller, Heron Lake, Minn., is reversing Gov. Stanford's theory by breeding a trotting mare to a thoroughbred stallion. He has four colts from a roan trotting mare, sired by St. Andrew, a grandson of Blair Athol, the Derby and St. Leger winner of 1864, that give promise of being trotters, and all are beauties in style and action.

During 1891, according to "Iconoclast," thirty-two sons of Hambletonian put 158 new performers in the list; twenty-five sons of George Wilkes put in 176; thirty-two sons of Almont put in fifty; thirteen sons of Electioneer put in thirty; nineteen sons of Belmont put in forty-seven, and nine sons of Happy Medium put in twenty-seven.

To cultivate a horse's speed and at the same time preserve a sweet temper and a disposition to do his best taxes the trainer's skill to the utmost. These colts and horses that are worked all winter on a track will hate the very sight of it before spring. Give the young things their work on the road. That will develop their muscle and wind.

The dates of the Montana Circuit for 1892 are as follows: Glendive, June 23d to 24th; Miles City, June 28th to July 1st; Great Falls, July 4th to 9th; Deer Lodge, July 12th to 15th; Anaconda, July 18th to 30th; Butte, August 13th to 16th; Helena, August 19th to 27th; Dillon, August 31st to September 3d; Missoula, September 6th to 10th.

Huron, Ed. Corrigan's crack colt, over whom there was so much trouble last season, is entered for the Memphis Derby, the Nashville Two Thousand, Kentucky Derby, Clark Stakes and St. Leger, Louisville; Latonia Derby and Himyar Stakes, Latonia; Drexel Stakes, Washington Park; Carlton Stakes and Brooklyn Derby, Brooklyn; Belmont Stakes and Fall Test Handicap, Morris Park; Omnibus, Lorillard and Comparative Stakes, Monmouth Park.

Dr. F. W. Skaife, a veterinary surgeon holding the highest credentials, called at the office of the Breeder and Sportsman last Monday. It is his intention to locate in this State, and to all professional men of his class we bespeak a cordial welcome. Dr. Skaife is an authority on diseases that afflict canines, and this knowledge will prove of incalculable benefit to all our friends who delight in owning good dogs and are as fond of them as horsemen are of their pets.

The Breeder and Sportsman looks bright and interaining in the new dress in which it has recently been issued. The neat appearance of the journal is an emblem of its prosperity, and Mr. Kerr is being heartily congratulated by his friends upon the great improvement he has introduced in the management of his paper.—Evening Post, S. F.

The first two trotters to enter the 2:30 list in '92 are Fred Drake, by Joe Gavin, and Bric-a-Brac, a three-year-old Alcazar filly. Fred Drake made a record of 2:27¾ and Bric-a-Brac 2:29¾ in a match race on the 20th inst. California has thus set the ball rolling, and when the blizzards in the East are over in a few months their colts will begin to swell the list.

J. A. McDonald, of San Rafael, sold the young stallion, Winwood Jr., to R. Connell, a prominent dairyman of Novato. Winwood Jr. is by Winwood, he by Antevolo, out of a Nutwood mare; his dam was H. D., by General McClellan, second dam, Lady Burgess, by Little John. Good judges pronounce Winwood Jr. one of the finest-looking colts in the State.

A breeder who has developed many a colt winner says that youngsters intended for stake engagements should never be given a let-up until they are retired for good. They should be kept on the move winter and summer. The plan pursued is that which athletics are forced to adopt, for should they knock off in the winter it takes them so much longer to get into form.

Some of our greatest thoroughbred performers never raced as two-year-olds. Longfellow, Eon and Boston are among the number, while Leonatus never started but once. As a three-year-old the last named won ten races without being headed. Now-a-days, however, there are more rich two-year-old stakes than any other kind and a lamentably small number of four-year-old events.

E. S. Smith, of San Jose, owner of the fine Nutwood stallion, Baywood, and the two fast sons of his, Dr. Swift and Fleetwood, reports everything in the horse business progressive. He recently sold to Oscar Luning a fine colt called Blackwood, he is by Baywood, out of a daughter of Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31; second dam by Williamson's Belmont. Dr. Swift will be on the circuit this fall.

The picture ot Arion in the last number of the American Trotter, outside of the markings, is away off the correct mark. If he had such a poor, weak hind-quarter as is represented in that picture we would disown him at once. He looks like a matured campaigner in the Trotter cut, and the rump has too long and gradual a slope. In the words of the popular comedian, it is Arion from the top of the head up.

When Chaldean is let loose this fall by Geo. Starr, Gerhard Lang will go out to the barn and take a look at Mambrino Wilkes, the sire of this four-year-old, and say: "Surely a prophet hath no honor in his own country. Your progeny must have been handicapped by poor trainers and drivers in the Golden State, if they are now doing so well in the hands of such artists as Hickok and Starr!" Chaldean is a wind-splitter, and no mistake, even if he is an inbred Mambrino Wilkes.

Racegoers generally are much pleased that Garrison and Bergen will again be seen in the saddle, for they are both very popular with that large class of bettors who play jockies' mounts. Garrison will ride for Marcus Daly at a salary of $8,000. He signed a two years' contract in which he agrees that he will not ride for anybody else in a race in which Mr. Daly has a starter. Marty Bergen may ride for the racing firm of S. S. Brown and J. W. Rogers. Bergen says that he will have no trouble this year.

The Turf Congress rule that entries from any stable can be refused was passed in order to reach owners against whom strong suspicion exists, yet who are too shrewd to furnish evidence sufficient to warrant ruling off. Colonel Lewis Clark is authority for the statement that this right will be exercised next summer to the detriment of ten or twelve stables, whose owners will probably be surprised at the notification that their horses are not wanted at Louisville, Garfield and probably other Western tracks.

Jesse Potter (the owner of Bloomfield Maid, Charley C., 2:18½, etc.) met with a serious loss last Friday, in the death of his finely-formed filly Mabel, by Sable Wilkes, 2:18, out of Laura M., 2:27. She was three yeers old and very promising. Mr. Corbitt, owner of the San Mateo Stock Farm, offered Mr. Potter $1,000 for her when she was a weanling. The cause of this youngster's death was volvulus or twisting of the bowels. All that veterinary skill and careful nursing could do proved unavailing.

To those gentlemen who contend that a race horse should be kept in training the year around we would advise them to listen to what Green Morris, one of the best trainers America ever had, has to say on the subject, which is: "A horse is like a man. He's got to have rest. If you worked all the time and next day got a day off you'd get stale, wouldn't you? Some trainers follow the instructions of their employers to the letter, and train horses the year round. I own a string of horses, and I never will do that."

The winter has been unusually favorable to track work at the Salinas race track. While epizootic, grip and kindred ailments have afflicted horses at so many tracks during the winter, the large number of horses that have been wintered at the track here were never so entirely exempt from all forms of disease as they have been this winter. As a consequence the horses will be better advanced in their work by the first of June than other years at the first of July, says Brother Smeltzer, of the Salinas Journal.

G. H. Nelson, who once owned Flaxtail, recently wrote from La Harpe, Ill., to a contemporary: "I saw in your general horse notes recently that the great stallion, Flaxtail, was taken to California years ago. Flaxtail that produced the dam of Goldleaf, 2:11¼, and Thistle, 2:19½, and grandam of Frou Frou, 2:25½, the champion yearling, was not taken to California at all, as I purchased him from Dr. M. W. Hicks when that gentleman went from here to California, and I also shipped the six mares by Flaxtail to California to Mr. Hicks. Flaxtail died in my orchard in the fall of 1880. I have two mares and a son, Dan, 2:31¼, by him. There are several mares in this neighborhood by him."

MONROE SALISBURY was listening to Joe Neal, superintendent of the Pleasanton Stock Farm, reading a very long pedigree of a horse that some one wanted to sell. When Joe finished at the sixth sire and the sixth dam, and stopped to catch his breath, Mr. Salisbury said, quietly: "Joe, that's a long pedigree, but does it say he can trot any? I didn't hear you say whether this fellow is a trotter. The pedigree is all right, but I'm not bringing long pedigrees East this time. I want fast trotters that can go some when Starr calls on 'em!"

THE directors of the Santa Rosa Trotting Club met in Capt. Guy E. Grosse's office on the 20th inst., and re-elected J. P. Overton president and W. H. Lumsden vice-president. It was decided to hold another meeting on the second Wednesday of February for the purpose of taking action on the amendment introduced at the last meeting by Captain Grosse. Matters pertaining to the welfare of the club were discussed at length. The secretary was instructed to call on delinquent members, and if possible get in the initiation fees before February.

THE total amount realized at the sale of Highlawn Farm trotting stock in New York on the 19th inst. was $50,245, fifty-five animals beieg disposed of. The best prices were: Irene, 2:23¼, seven years old, by Alcantara, to Charles Richley, Springfield, Ill., $5,200; Coranza, eight, by Bostwick's Almont Jr., William Simpson, New York, $2,600; Admiration, by Administrator, H. S. Henry. Morrisville, Pa., $1,700; Black colt, by Alfonso—Dainty, H. W. Phelps, Minneapolis, $1,300; Easter Medium, 2:32½, by Happy Medium, to A. H. Vaughan, Paterson, N. J., $1,025.

MR. GRIFFITH'S fast pacing gelding by Algona, that astonished every one last fall at the Bay District track, is now at Pleasanton in charge of George Starr. When the speedy fellow arrived there he was shod a little too light, and did not do well. Finally he was properly balanced, and if he does not knock Direct's record out of sight for a mile a great many horsemen will be mistaken. He may not be such a campaigner but he will be a "meteor" to catch in any race. George Starr may hitch the two up as a team before he returns and set a pacing team record that will never be equalled.

OWNERS should not get discouraged at the non-success of their youngsters on the track. Do not forget that the great Longfellow, winner of fourteen out of seventeen races in which he started, was distanced by Enquirer in the very first race he ever engaged in, and also that Luke Blackburn was a sore disappointment as a two-year-old and the greatest three-year-old of his year. Don't race your youngster much, even if he is a cracker-jack. Remember the fate of Sensation, Tremont, El Rio Rey, Onondaga, Henlopen, Proctor Knott and many other "phenoms" who were raced too hard as two-year-olds.

THE list of J. A. &. A. H. Morris mares that are at Wyndham Walden's farm, and will be bred to Galore, can hardly be excelled in breeding or as individuals anywhere. Many of them have raced. The list includes L'Intriguante, one of the best fillies seen in years, the flying Georgia; Reckon, one of the best campaigners on the turf; Correction, Recess and Spinalong. The public has seen these. Some of them may be raced in 1892, but L'Intriguante has run her last race. Horsemen unite in saying that she is one of the most beautiful specimens of the thoroughbred that ever looked through a bridle.

TOM BRADY, the well-known trainer, passed through Woodland on Wednesday with a special car of valuable colts owned by A. T. Hatch, the wealthy fruit-grower. Among the lot was Sidney Roy, one of the fastest and most promising colts ever foaled on the Coast. Mr. Brady will spend the season on the splendid ranch of Mr. Hatch, at Cottonwood, and will no doubt bring the colts into the races this fall, when we may expect to hear of some very fine work. If there is anything in a colt, in the way of speed, Tom Brady can manage to pull it out with as much cleverness as any other man on the Pacific Coast.

WM. CORBITT, of the San Mateo Stock Farm, says all of the horses on his place are looking well. Mr. Rogers is busy jogging the colts. A number of the trotters there are entered in the Eastern circuits, and John A. Goldsmith will take about ten of them East; and, as the prospects for good trotting and pacing on this coast will warrant the naming of a few of the youngsters from this farm, the chances are favorable for their appearance. Among them will be Regal Wilkes, 2:17½; Allannah, 2:18; Grandee, 2:23½; Leo Wilkes (brother to Sable Wilkes, 2:18) and several two-year-olds and three-year-olds.

THE proposition to erect a monument to the great sire of trotters, old Hambletonian 10, at Chester, Orange county, N. Y., has received a recent impetus and is likely to be carried through soon. Mr. Joseph C. Howland, of Chester, who, with Mr. Guy Miller, of the same place, has charge of the matter, attended a recent breeders' meeting, and his efforts there swelled the fund to $4,500. Senator Leland Stanford agreed to contribute $500 as soon as this amount was secured and the total of the fund is now virtually $2,000. The sculptor's estimate on a heroic statue of the horse was $5,000, but he has agreed to accept $3,000 cash for his work.

WHY is it that we have so many 2:30 horses and still more between 2:30 and 3:00, and yet such a shortage of good road horses? What becomes of the many young horses that are worked on the track until it is found that they will never trot fast? There certainly are hundreds of horses that can trot below 3:00 but cannot trot fast enough to campaign. Have they been knocked to pieces by some one who is a failure as a driver and trainer, so that they are not even good road horses? With the number of well-bred horses that there is in the country we should have more good road horses. There are plenty of well-bred, stylish colts produced in this country every year. They don't all trot fast, and the question is, what becomes of them?

A PROMINENT Santa Rosa horseman has received a letter srom a gentleman in another State that raised his ire to a pitch that was productive of very vindictive anathemas. In the letter the gentleman stated that he was desirous of buying a young Anteeo stallion. He must be perfect in form and limb, of solid color, good action, standard bred, speedy and of good speed. In short, he must possess more of the attributes of a great trotting stallion than Allerton, Nelson, Delmarch, Arion, Director or Sultan, and the writer wound up by saying that he did not want to pay over $200. Our Anteeo man, way down in his heart, wished his correspondent fifty fathoms in enetorrid regions when he had concluded the perusal of the the rous offer.

WE UNDERSTAND that Palo Alto, 2:08¾, will not be an utter stranger to our tracks the coming season, after all. He reminds one of a well-trained and game pugilist in one way and another. After his opponent (the trotting stallion brigade) has cut monkey shines around the arena and pounded away at a great rate, until the old boy's case seems hopeless, Palo Alto gets his second wind, and when the day seems lost summons up all his strength for a good drive and lands the knock-out blow and captures the coveted trophy—the stallion crown.

MR. B. J. TREACY, of Lexington, Ky., has purchased of Mr. Daniel Swigert, for Philip H. Dwyer, the black filly, sister to the great two-year-old Dagonet, by Tremont, dam Fair Lady the dam of Bermuda, Dagonet, &c., by imp. Glenelg, out of Fair, by imp. Glen Athol, &c.; and the brown filly, two years old, by Tremont, dam Helen, by Vauxhall, out of Mary Watson, by Donerail, son of Lexington. Mr. J. B. Treacy also bought of Mr. D. Swigert, for himself, the brown filly, two years old, by Tremont, dam Lava, by imp. Australian, grandam Lavender, Helmbold's dam, by Wagner, out of the famous Alice Carneal, the dam of Lexington, by imp. Sarpedon. Price private.

ELMER LUDWIG and his father, old residents of Santa Rosa, Cal., have moved to Portland, Or., where they are building an immense barn to accommodate their fine trotting stock. Among the horses they own are a bay colt by Anteeo, dam by Tilton Almont, a three-year-old gray gelding named Custer, by Capri, dam by A. W. Richmond, three fillies by Alcona Jr., 2:24, sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17; a three-year-old thoroughbred by Harry Peyton, dam by Bayswater, and a three-year-old colt by Alcona Jr., out of Lily, by Norfolk. The advent of the Ludwigs is hailed with joy by the Portlanders, and surely it is a splendid addition to the list of horsemen of the Webfoot State.

AUGUST BELMONT has sent the following thoroughbred mares to Gallatin to be bred to St. Blaise: Susquehanna, dam of Potomac, by Leamington, dam Susan Beane, by Lexington, etc.; Magnetism, dam of Magnetizer, Magnet and Masher, by Kingfisher, dam Attraction, by imp. Balrownie, etc.; She, by imp. Glenelg, dam Sultana, by Lexington, etc.; Feu Follet dam of St. Florian, Lizzie, Mammie B., Ralph Black, Firefly, St. Elmo, Falconer and Madcap, by Kingfisher, dam Felucca, by Buccaneer; Fides, by imp. The Ill Used, dam Fillette, by Kingfisher; Glory, by imp. The Ill Used, dam Mehallah, by Kingfisher; Lady Margaret, by imp. The Ill Used, dam Lady Roseberry, by Kingfisher, etc.

THE highest price ever paid for a Michigan-bred trotter was paid recently to W. S. Kirby of Galesburg, Mich., when the Valley Stock Farm Company bought the stallion Harry Noble for $30,000. Harry Noble was sired by Frank Noble, brother to the Jewett Farm stallion, Jerome Eddy, 2:16½, out of Stella Storms, by Mambrino Excelsior. He was foaled in 1885 and was one of the great four-year-olds of 1889, winning many races, and landing the first two heats of the Southern Hotel $10,000 stakes in St. Louis, taking a record of 2:17½. He was not among the prominent performers of 1890, but last season won a good race at Grand Rapids on the day of the Allerton-Nelson race.

MAJOR B. G. THOMAS has named the bay filly, foaled 1890, by Longfellow, dam Highflight, by imp. King Ban, her dam Hira (Himyar's dam), by Lexington, Rejection. This filly was sold at the Dixiana sale in June, 1891, to Marcus Daly for $2,000, and he said the filly was a wind-sucker, and Major Thomas at once took the filly back and returned the $2,000. The filly turned out not to be a wind-sucker, and last fall beat at the Lexington course the Australian horse Paramatta, Rorka and Fannie S. through the stretch (a quarter) with even weights. Major Thomas is so pleased with the filly that nothing less than $10,000 would buy her. It seems as if Mr. Daly and Trainer Byrnes had let a bird slip from their hands.

THE people of Lompoc, Santa Barbara county, are preparing for their meeting next summer. They have purchased suitable land, south of the town of Lompoc, for which they paid $20,000, and are now grading a regulation mile track that, from the soil and the manner in which they are going to work, will surely make a fast course. Lompoc is a great little town for equine sports, and their meeting next fall is certain of success. Good horses will be offered. Such good sires as Commodore Nutwood, Barham and imp. Bruce make their homes in Lompoc. Judge Nichols, Nat Stuart, Hill Bros. and other prominent citizens are interested in the track, and are certain that it will be a grand success.

IT IS NOW plain to be seen who will fill Electioneer's shoes in Palo Alto Stud—Advertiser, 2:16. While Arion had a price, we do not believe that Senator Stanford would let Advertiser go at any figure since a $70,000 offer was passed over. There is hardly another stallion on earth bred in such ultra-fashionable lines and with such speed and individuality in addition. Take Advertiser's sire, with 100 in the list, George Wilkes with 76, Hambletonian with 41, and his grandam herself, a 2:15 performer, it makes a very large total for the families represented in his blood lines, and when we add that broodmare sire Alexander's Norman 25, Advertiser is, to use a slang expression, "out of sight" of almost any trotter that can be mentioned.

SOME years ago a prominent horseman, since deceased, brought a horse to Sacramento to trot against a local celebrity that could move along in 2:30 quite easily. The day was warm and the stand well filled with enthusiastic horsemen. Our 'Frisco horseman had for a driver the celebrated Jack Gallar, otherwise called "Squealing Jack," and his instructions to this erratic character was to lose the first two heats and then win the third and keep on winning, for he was confident of beating the Sacramento horse. Going over to the pool box, he bought pools on his horse after the first and second heats, until he stood to win some $12,000. His pockets were filled with pool tickets, and every one sympathized with him for his lack of judgment, for his horse was seen to just save his distance each time. He walked over to the stable, which was deserted except by the tenor-voiced driver and his trainer. He gave the former to understand he was to "go in and win." Smilingly he watched the faithful driver take the lead to the three-quarter pole, and then his jaw dropped as he saw his horse slack up and the Sacramento trotter pass him easily and win by five lengths at the wire. To say that he was "wild" would not express his indignation. He ran over to the sulky and said: "Jack, what in the name of G—— was the matter?" "Nothing," was the reply; "I lost two heats for you and only one for myself. Shure you can't complain of that."

THERE is no thoroughbred racing stable in Massachusetts, but Mr. Bayard Thayer, of Boston, has entered the lists with a string of likely youngsters, picked up mainly at the recent Haggin sale in New York. The list has a fine look, from a breeding standpoint, and Mr. Thayer says they promise well so far. Three colts and two fillies make up the stable at present. They are: Bayard, ch c, by Hyder Ali, dam Cordelia Planet; Sayonara, ch c, by Onondaga, dam Perhaps; Fred Gould, b c, by Spendthrift, dam Sinaloa; a chestnut filly by Sir Modred, dam Preciosa, and a filly of good substance, but ordinary breeding. "They are entered," writes Mr. Thayer, "in a few of the two-year-old stakes to be run near New York this year, and let us hope will win something. I had another one, a small but handsome colt, that I gave away to a friend. It looked as if it would make a stylish saddle horse, though not big enough for a racer. It has turned out to be a flyer. That is an apt specimen of sporting luck."

C. C. BEMIS owns a black colt by his stallion Lancelot that will be a race horse. James Dustin is handling him, and the way he moves and the promise he gives of making a 2:30 performer is encouraging. It is hoped that this driver will be allowed to enter thi colt in some of the circuit races, so that others who have bred mares to Lancelot may be encouraged to have them trained. Once set a few of a horse's progeny well inside the charmed circle, and others will surely follow. If a stallion is not standard by his breeding, record or the performances of his progeny, no matter how superior he may be as an individual he will not receive a high class of mares. It becomes an imperative duty nowadays for stallion owners to either offer a premium to breeders to get trotters from such sires trained or else have them trained himself. If a few get in the list the price of the service fee can be raised, and the owner will only have the most approved mares seeking the services of such a sire.

THE ne'er-do-well man is he who plods along the weary way of life content with what he has and aspires to nothing higher. It has been urged for very many years past that success in stock breeding, no matter what the kind, depended very materially upon the employment of the better breeds and families. The top of the ladder of breeding is higher to-day than when that advice was first given, but those who occupy the exalted position are the men who are making the money. They are not all large breeders, for many a farmer owning a single broodmare stands well alongside with any in the character of her offspring. If only the best were used, and the large number of negative worth discarded, the average of the young stock would surely be raised. In the rapid increase of colts, there is to-day still greater need for urging that in the coming season the weeding process be applied as never before. The indifferently-bred mare, with no special virtues, should surely be set one side. The value of blood cannot, must not be ignored. Combine these, and unite the blood of a sire as good, and more valuable colts will be forthcoming.

A LEXINGTON, (Ky.) special of the 15th says:—The syndicate of turfmen that purchased the grounds and improvements of the old Kentucky Association men this afternoon in the Phœnix Hotel and organized by electing the following officers: President, Col. E. F. Clay, of the famous Runnymede stud; first vice-president, Milton Young, of the McGrathiana stud; second vice-president, J. N. Camden, Jr., a wealthy Virginia turfman that has lately established himself in Woodford county; treasurer, James C. Rogers, ex-sheriff of Fayette county and now teller of the Central Bank; secretary and superintendent, H. Henry Miller, a widely-known owner and trainer. The following Board of Governors was selected: W. S. Barnes, chairman; Gus Straus, S. C. Lyne, G. D. Wilson, Byron McClelland and B. G. Thomas. The officers and governors are among the most prominent and influential Kentucky turfmen. After the election of officers the deed from the consignee was presented, signed and sealed, upon the cash payment of $32,106.50, the sum being the amount of the first payment on the property. A big spring meeting will be held.

IN breeding for fast horses many breeders overlook the important fact that in about five out of every twelve horses a hereditary blemish will be found, and the evil results that arise from such weakness are generally attributed to some poor old ancestor. Good blood lines are certainly essential, but a pedigree alone never did win a race, and we doubt if it ever will. A good sound stallion with a pedigree that contains the hard bottom strains that have stood the test of campaigning is, in our opinion, much preferable to the horse with a big family tree and a soft heart or some other natural unsoundness. In making the above assertion, there are, of course, exceptions, as in many other things, but nevertheless it is a well-known fact among those who have traveled and seen that if a search-light were thrown upon several high-priced stallions their wonderful individuality would not seem so wonderful, even in the eyes of the merest tyro in the breeding business. Breeding has progressed rapidly, and intelligent mating rarely fails to produce an animal that can trot, and trot fast, but in the mad rush to secure speed the important subject of hereditary influences has been in many instances entirely overlooked.

WHILE talking about the kindergarten principle of handling trotters the other evening, a prominent horseman present said that the idea did not originate at Palo Alto, but in Chicago. It was twenty years ago (in 1872) that David T. Gage had one built to show off some colts that he thought might prove world-beaters. The same principle, without any modifications, was adopted at Palo Alto in 1879, although the existence of the Chicago kindergarten was unknown to Superintendent Covey, who always liked to please the Senator by showing how well the colts trotted beside their dams. As all horsemen know, the youngsters will always do well if they are protected irom the gaze of the spectators by their proud matron. He thought of building a rough circle, with the corners thrown up, and, with his two sons, laid out the miniature course and built it. After placing the mare within the enclosure, the weanlings would trot all the way around to get back to where the old mare was, and the success that attended their efforts in making this crnde kindergarten emboldened the originators to go still further, and the result was that several were built that were about one-eighth of a mile in circumference. From the beginning the difference between the colts exercised in the kindergarten and those that were not was observed. They grew better, stronger and seemed much easier to handle. Nearly every trotting wonder that has come from Palo Alto to startle the trotting world has received a thorough kindergarten education.

THE GUN.

On the Western Plains.

There had been no casualty of a serious nature. A few bruises and a tumble of one of the lasso-men's horse, which did no more harm than to give his rider a good shaking up, was the sum of all the damage done in what appeared to be a very dangerous business.

The work had been done so rapidly that the calves were not scattered very widely apart; not more than four to five miles. They were stalked in groups of from four to six. When all were staked out everybody, except those guarding the calves, returned to the first group. The Commodore, thirsting for more adventure, offered to guard the last group, and he was left in lone possession of the advance post, or stake, with five prisoners. The rest of us mounted and rode leisurely back to the first group, counting the groups as we passed by them. Thirty-one calves were counted, besides the two that had been killed.

The hunters were jubilant. In addition to a most exciting and enjoyable day's sport, in which was a spice of danger to give zest and flavor, they had accomplished, in a few hours, what they had expected would take at least ten days, and perhaps longer, to accomplish, and their high spirits found vent in jokes and stories and songs. The calves were a splendid lot; all healthy, vigorous and strong. But what wicked little demons they were! They were the impersonation of vicious pugnacity, and would "fight at the drop of a hat," and try with all their might to butt anyone approaching them. To lead one is a most difficult and disagreeable task. It requires two strong men with ropes to lead one calf; one man on each side, so that he can plunge and jump only forward and back. If one man should try to lead the little imp, he would butt the bowels out of him. If tied to the hind axle of a wagon he will butt the wheels, and is liable to thrust his head between the spokes and get his neck broken.

While taking a breathing spell and talking over the incidents and results of the day's work, or day's sport—everybody thought it sport—the report of a rifle was heard. It came from the distance, faint but distinct. "That's the man you call Commodore," said Hewit, "I reckon he has shot a rascally wolf." Hewitt was right in his reckoning. A prowling wolf had ventured too near the calves and the Commodore saluted him with an ounce of lead from his Sharp's rifle. The wolf was the only thing shot during the day. The Commodore was a long way off, nearly five miles, and it seems incredible that a rifle shot could be heard at so great a distance, but, on that level plain, where there was nothing to intercept or deflect sound, and in that pure atmosphere which transmits sound-waves or vibrations with the greastest facility, sound reaches a long way.

About this time the wagons, accompanied by the cows, loomed upon the horizon, spectral and wierd; plodding slowly along; following the trail with scarcely perceptible movement; thrown into a thousand varying, fantastic forms by the mirage; at times disappearing; again, looming in gigantic proportions; ever varying, ever changing; sometimes presenting the appearance of a ship under full sail, and then changing suddenly into turreted castle on mountain top. These fantastic changes of form did not obliterate individuality, and each separate object was distinguishable, though incongruously and absurdly exaggerated and distorted. Dr. Thompson was sublime and old Breck grand. Breck's ears would shoot skyward, like rosy shafts of Aurora in the orient, their tips tinged with living fire. They reminded me of Mohammet, and his ass, Al Borek—not Mark—whom he rode a hundred years at full speed to pass the face of deity. Though this fleeting picture was grand and beautiful in some of its phases, in others it was ludicrous and excited our risibles, and we laughed heartily over it.

While watching the snail-pace of the approaching wagons and the phantastic figures of the mirage, we were standing near the first group of calves captured; the last group must have been nearly five miles away. Judging from the position of the sun, about four hours of daylight remained. Captain Clark directed that all the men available start out and bring in the calves as rapidly as possible, commencing with the furthermost group. Horn, Cooper and Rainbow went with the hunters to assist in bringing in the calves. Not being desirious of having my arms jerked from their sockets by a jumping-jack of a wild buffalo calf I elected to stay where I was, but offered to relieve the guard and allow him to go and lead wild buffalo calves. He was pleased with the offer and went, and I stood my lonely watch, for, though not absolutely alone I was lonely, not having anyone to speak to, Captain Clark being busy in looking after the horses, and intently watching the approach of the coming wagons on the one hand, anxiously looking for the inleading of the calves on the other. At last, after two hours of weary waiting and watching, the wagons and the cows arrived.

The oxen were unyoked and turned out to graze. The cows were not hungry; they had plenty of opportunities to nip the sweet grass as they traveled, which the oxen had not, but they were weary with their long tramp and immediately lay down to rest. The oxen grazed a few minutes and then laid down with the cows. Old Breck, who had at intervals, all through the day, been bucking his protest against being ridden by Dr. Thompson, made straight for Horn's horse, regardless of the Doctor's remonstrances, and without giving him the least chance to dismount. The mule and the horse rubbed noses, and exhibited the delight of lovers meeting after a day's parting. The Doctor took advantage of the situation to dismount, and leaving old Breck saddled and bridled, he came toward me muttering deep curses against mules in general, and old Breck in particular; saying that he had had enough of mule riding to last him all his life. He said that he had been shaken all to pieces by the cussed, bucking, obstinate,old mule, and didn't expect to long survive the shock to his nervous system. He had not noticed the calves; he was too deeply absorbed in his own griefs. He passed so close to them that they made a vicious plunge at him, trying to butt him and nearly frightening him "out of his boots." He jumped aside several feet and uttered an unearthly yell of terror. It was the first time he had moved with alacrity since he had been with us. He came up to me, and throwing himself supine on the grass, in gasping, doleful accents, exclaimed, "O, that I could get a drink of whiskey!" He was a pitiable object to look upon, but knowing him, his weakness and worthlessness, brought on him by the use and abuse of alcoholic beverages, I felt no sympathy for him and offered him no consolation.

A few minutes later six calves were brought in. With their jumping, struggling and attempts at butting, they had lead their captors a merry string, and captor and captive were both very tired. The fatigue of their desperate attempts to fight and free themselves had cooled the temper of the calves considerably, and they were comparatively quiet. They were hungry also, and that helped to tame them;—hunger is a most wonderful tamer. They had had nothing to eat since early morning and the sun was now drawing close to the western horizon.

I was now released from guard duty and I watched closely, and with the greatest curiosity the proceedings that followed the arrival of the calves. And now the reason for the presence of so many milch cows became obvious, though I had divined it before. It was an easy conundrum, which anyone ought to have guessed. A cow was selected for two calves and led up to them. It was curious and interesting to watch the little demons when the cow was led up. Their struggles ceased, and, with hungry eyes fastened on her, they uttered an indescribable sound. It was something between a faint bellow and a bleat. They seemed instinctively to understand that pap was near, and were crazy to get at it. The calves were placed, one on each side of the cow.

They seized the teat with hungry avidity, and quaffed deep of lacteous nectar. At first the cows deeply resented having these shaggy-coated, broad-nosed, wild children of the plain forced upon them as step-children, and they kicked and struggled desperately to shake them off, but they were held by two pairs of strong hands, and had no choice but to submit. At the same time the little imps hung on to the teat like grim death, and wouldn't be shaken off until they had exhausted the delicious, hunger-assuaging contents of the udder. In fact the imps were beligerant toward their step-mothers, after the first feed, and, when hungry, would slip up to their step-mothers, one on each side, and, seizing the teat, would hang on like a bull-dog, butting the poor cow into submission if she made remonstrance. As soon as the calves got a taste of the teat they clung to their step-mothers with the tenacity of wood-ticks; they never made the mistake of trying to run with some other cow; they always knew their own step-mother, and, when traveling, traveled with her, pressing up to her sides, and could not be separated from her without violence, and appeared to have as much affection for these stranger step-mothers as if they had been their own wild, shaggy, buffalo mothers of the plain. The cows, too, soon became reconciled to their enforced step-children and made good step-mothers, as step-mothers go, showing as much concern for their little charges as if they had been their own offspring.

There was no more trouble with the calves; they never attempted to escape, and, in a short time, having become familiar with the sight of that strange animal, man, would allow themselves to be petted the same as ordinary domestic calves, and enjoyed it as much. It took about an hour to step-mother thirty calves, and there was one left for which no step-mother was provided. It seemed a pity to kill it, especially as we had plenty of meat and could easily procure more when required. Captain Clark, after thinking it over, determined to save it. He said: "There is one cow in the band that is an excellent milker, and I think she can support three calves. I will try it. At any rate the calves will commence to eat grass soon." It was done, and the three throve as well with one cow as any of the others.

By the time the calves had all been step-mothered night had spread her sable mantle over the plain, the stars were glinting, a faint aureola suffused the east, precursing the rising moon, and, at short intervals, the long, deep, sonorous howl of a wolf came rolling in from the outskirts of the camp. Guards were stationed to keep the wolves away. Everybody was tired and hungry. A fire was kindled to get supper by. Fuel and water had been brought along in the wagons for that purpose, though there were plenty of buffalo chips. The poor animals had to go thirsty, as there was no water nearer than the camp we left in the morning, and they had had nothing to drink since. The sweet, juicy grass furnished much moisture, however, and there was no danger of their perishing from thirst. They were all feeding, but soon quit, and lay down to rest. All was quiet except the hilarity around the camp fire. We soon had a most delicious supper of slap-jacks, fried bacon, broiled buffalo steaks and steaming coffee. Milk was a luxury that, now and henceforth, must be eschewed, the calves needed it all. While eating supper with that voracious appetite which only hard work in the pure, open air can give, all was silence, except for the peculiar, subdued, crunching sound of mastication; everyone was too intent on filling his stomach to talk, and the animals were resting in quiet, the ruminates chewing their cuds and thinking of nothing, as school-men would say. Supper finished, we rolled up in our blankets for sleep and much-needed rest. Just as the drowsy god was sealing our eyes and our senses, there broke upon the still night "a doleful sound," sonorous, long drawn out, and continuous in one dreary, monotonous tone, with an undertone that sounded of melancholy, grief and despair; it was repeated several times; it was the wolf's call to his companions, inviting them to come and help him capture a calf and have a feast of fresh veal. They got no feast, however, for the guards were too vigilant, and made several of them bite the dust, and the balance fled into outer darkness.

About two o'clock in the morning there arose such a medley of discordant sounds that it seemed as if all the imps of Hades and all the laughing jack-asses of Australia had been let loose on us and had surrounded us; mocking, gibbering, chattering, yelping, howling and barking. One would have sworn, judging from the noise, that there were a million wolves, while, probably, there were not more than two score. A wolf can howl and bark and chatter in as many different keys and tones as a grand organ, and all of them discordant. They had become cautious, and none of them ventured within rifle range, but kept within the dark circle.

"Up rose the yellow moon" and spread her silvery light over the plain, revealing objects before hidden and disclosing to the sight the forms of many wolves, gliding noiseless and spectral, into the darkness beyond, like ghosts at break of day, "trooping home to church-yards." Before we could compose ourselves to sleep, after the wolf concert, the sound of hoarse, rumbling thunder was heard from far away to the westward. Looking, lambent lightnings were seen playing across the faces of dense masses of black cloud. A thunder storm was impending. and we roused up to see that everything was secure. Whatever could be injured by rain was putin the wagons. The wagons were of the old-fashioned, prairie-schooner type; bows sprung over the beds and covered with thick canvas and impervious to rain. In fact, they made pretty good houses. The storm was yet in the distance, slowly approaching; there was no such impetuous onrush as usually characterizes a thunder-storm on the plains. The moon, not yet obscured, shone refulgent, making clearly visible everything in and near camp. Breakfast was prepared and partaken of, with the customary potation of grog, before the rain came.

Points and Flushes.

The next annual meeting of the Field Trials Club will be held at Bakersfield, commencing on January 15, 1893.

Mr. George Sperry was in attendance at the field trials, and enjoyed a number of good quail hunts during the week.

At the meeting of the club on Friday evening a special vote of thanks was tendered Messrs. Witherell, Morgan and Houghton for securing the grounds upon which the trials were held.

It would hardly be a field trial in the estimation of the old-time sportsmen of California did not Mr. R. T. Vandervort, the quiet little gentleman from Pasadena, occupy a saddle as one of the judges.

Everybody regretted the enforced absence of Capt. W. C. Neilson, and many were the inquiries as to the severity of his illness. It is the sincere wish of every sportsman that he fully recover his health at once.

Messrs. W. H. McKittrick, H. L. Borgwardt, Jr., and H. A. Jasper were appointed a committee to select and secure the grounds for next year's trials, and to superintend the trapping and feeding of quail on them for the purpose of supplying an ample number of birds on grounds convenient to the city of Bakersfield.

The Bakersfield membership of the Field Trials' Club and interested citizens have donated the sum of $250 to the club, to be equally divided between the Derby and All-Age stakes, and these amounts to be appropriated to the different purses in the same proportion of their original division.

A vote of thanks was also tendered to Col. J. C. Morrison for his untiring efforts and courtesies to the club, and also to the ladies of Bakersfield for their attendance at the trials on "Ladies' Day;" no small undertaking when the distance of a fourteen-mile drive is considered.

On the first of the week, on arriving at Bakersfield, Messrs. W. J. Golcher, Howard Black, L. L. Campbell and the writer enjoyed a quail hunt preparitory to entering upon the work of the trials. That genial and generous sportsman, Judge D. M. Pyle, conducted the party to some choice grounds, and as a result some very satisfactory sport was obtained.

On the close of the final heat in the trials it was marvelous to see the number of dogs turned loose and guns unlimbered and ready for action. Soon the entire field on which the trials had been run was filled with noise and confusion. There was no doubting the fact from the rapid firing to be heard on every hand that every point was being shot over, and from the vigorous and occasionally sulphruous remarks, it would be in place to observe that if some dogs were not well broken, that their master's tempers were—in fact broken all to pieces.

Friday night's train carried away most of the sportsmen and visitors, yet Saturday morning found a large number of gentlemen, some four or five separate parties containing about the like number of persons in each, starting out for a final quail hunt before returning home. A dust storm interfered with the shooting of one party, consisting of Messrs. Allen Kelley, of the Examiner, A. Russell Crowell, L. L. Campbell and the writer, who had gone some fifteen miles south of Bakersfield. This party enjoyed some good sport, however. Twenty-six quail for one man in two hours furnishes a good quantity of sport. The overflow from an artesian well in the vicinity mentioned furnishes enough water to supply several little lakes, in which a number of ducks were found and this game, varied the sport while the dust-storm lasted. A duck could be seen in the whirling dust-cloud and fired at when it was impossible hunt quail. When the storm first came up we thought it a cloud of smoke from a prairie-fire, but directly we came into it the dust, and the absence of the smell of fire, solved the question for us, and we were soon glad to drive out of it which fortunately we did but in doing so were compelled to leave our choice quail grounds.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of the California Kennel's which appear in this issue. The list of stud dogs presented is very strong.

Sportsman was the greatest son of the great family of Gladstone. Sires among which are Gladstone's Boy, Lillian, Dan Gladstone, Breeze Gladstone and others. Sportsman won the National Derby of 1884 without an error. He is sire of the great field dogs and winner, Sunlit and Sirius.

Harold is a brilliant dog and a trial winner. He is also litter brother to the great winners and sires, Gaths Mark and Gath's Hope.

Gladstone II is another son of the imperial Gladstone and is a capital looking, black, white and tan dog and a good one in the field.

Paul Noble is a black and white dog, very handsome in appearance and a corking good one in the field. He is by the greatest of sires Count Noble out of Flounce, full sister to the immortal Sue. Flounce is also the dam of three field trial winners.

The California Kennels are offering the sportsmen of this Coast the blood of Gladstone Count Noble and Gath and have the only sons of these great dogs on this Coast. Give them a trial.

Thos. Higgs and Henry Huber, the contestants for first prize in the All-Age stake, rode in the same wagon, had their dogs handled by the same man and were closely united generally, and many were the toasts drunk by each of them, wishing success to the winner.

Mr. H. P. Rennie offers for sale this week some first class Cocker Spaniels. Bettie and Master Shina are both prize winners and the best of their class on this Coast.

Judge Payne was taken sick during the trials and was confined to his bed all day Friday, Judges Pyle and Vandervoort officiating.

J. B. Martin, one of the active and progressive dog men of our city, took in the trials and enjoyed them immensely.

FIELD TRIALS.

Southern Field Trial Club's fourth annual trials, New Albany, Miss., February 1. T. M. Brumby, Secretary.

THE PACIFIC COAST FIELD TRIALS CLUB.

The Recent Meeting Proves to be the Best Ever Held by the Club.

The regular annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club field trials was inaugurated on Monday, the 18th inst., and terminated on Friday, the 22nd, and from the opening heat until the close was, without doubt, the most interesting and satisfactory trials ever held by this, the only field trials club on the western Coast.

The interest in this event had been for weeks and months more pronounced than that which had preceded and marked the previous meetings of this organization and as a result a much larger and more enthusiastic attendance was secured.

The management of the club for the year past has been of the very highest order and its officials have labored hard and continuously for the interest of this event and they had just cause to feel gratified to see that their labors had not been in vain. The attendance of almost the entire active membership was noticed save a few marked instances where sickness interfered to prevent.

The headquarters of the club and visitors was at The Southern, a first-class hostelry kept by an enthusiastic sportsman and as genial and clever a man as ever fancied a dog or threw a gun to shoulder. It is needless to say that in his large and elegant establishment the entire body of visiting sportsmen as well as all members of the club found a hearty welcome; sumptuous fare and every comfort to be desired on occasions like this. Col. J. C. Morrison and the Southern at Bakersfield will not be soon forgotten by the sportsmen attending this event.

From San Francisco came a large delegation, among them being the following:

T. D. Atherton, W. C. Brown, Howard Black, W. J. Golcher, Henry Huber, M. Harlem, Thos. Higgs, E. Huhn, Andrew Jackson, Allen Kelley, J. M. Kilgarif, H. J. Kilgarif, Robert Liddle and wife, P. D. Linville, J. B. Marshall, J. R. Miller, R. Ringrose, A. B. Truman, Henri Stuart, T. J. Watson, A. Russell Crowell, J. B. Martin, D. M. Osborn and L. L. Campbell.

Mr. William Schrieber, an old and ardent supporter of this club, was obliged to be absent on account of sickness, but he did not fail to remember the club and all visitors in a pleasing manner. Many were the regrets expressed at his absence.

Mr. P. D. Linville, the pleasant, yet effective marshal of these events, was on hand at all times with his best endeavors to enliven the proceedings of the club.

Judge C. N. Post, the enthusiastic leader in all matters which he undertakes, was also foremost in every good work. He has done much for the club and is still doing a lion's share in pushing forward the interest of field sports.

Mr. J. G. Edwards, the efficient and popular president of the club, has become a fixture and from the manner in which he is regarded by the membership it would appear that he has a life term of the office, or as Attorney W. W. Foote, of this city, would say, "As long as his present meritorious conduct continues to furnish as high and strong a standard for the morals of the membership of this club, as the average man's New Year's resolutions."

Mr. J. M. Kilgarif, the secretary of the club, performed his duties in an efficient manner to the entire satisfaction of the club and in his individual capacity did as much as the foremost toward making the meeting a success.

Mr. J. W. Harper, of Suisun, who is interested with Judge Post in the California kennels, is an earnest sportsman, and is ever ready with word and purse to say and do anything that can be done for the interest of the club. The action of these two gentlemen in filling up the All-Age Stake from dogs not especially intended for such work, speaks volumes for their interest in true sportsmanship.

Mr. Henry Huber was a new face and factor in the field sports of this State. He is one of those quiet, unassuming gentlemen whose actions mark their opinions rather than their words. The fact that he has purchased and brought to this Coast the Duke of Vernon and Sally Brass II., two of the highest-class pointers ever shown in the country, and the latter, unquestionably the finest field trial pointer ever shown in the west, recommends him to the earnest consideration of all sportsmen.

Mr. Thos. Higgs, who recently purchased and brought out to this State from the Davey's Ontario kennels that excellent little bitch, Lady Trippo, is another new face at the field trials as a participant, but as time wears on his features will doubtless become familiar to all our lovers of outdoor sports.

Mr. James E. Watson, owner of Old Black Joe II., is an anomoly as a sportsman. It is his ambition to own first-class dogs and plenty of them, and he does, yet he is seldom in attendance at the trials, being content to accept the results as announced by message while he attends to business in the city.

Mr. Joseph Bassford, Jr., one of the very oldest and most earnest advocates of field sports, was on hand and won the Membership Stake, and there can be no question that no man in the club could have been more heartily and generally congratulated than he on this event. Defeat would be robbed entirely of regret were all victors of the character and sterling worth of Joe Bassford Jr.

The work of the handlers, taken as a whole, presents but little ground for objection. The two veterans, Geo. T. Allender and D. M. Walters, presented their competing dogs in fine form. The work spoken of elsewhere speaks more strongly than other words can of their merits as handlers. Mr. William DeMotte presented his dogs in the very pink of condition, and while he does not profess to be an exclusive handler, yet his work was such as to win the unstinted commendation of the men most interested in his work—the owners of the dogs—a source from which genuine comments are, as a rule, the case, and we know them to be such in this.

Mr. R. M. Dodge handled the entries of the California kennels, and did it well. Mr. Dodge has methods of his own, which in one or two instances have come under our notice and have been productive of marvelous results for good.

Mr. L. L. Campbell had taken two of his dogs from this city to the vicinity of Bakersfield to prepare one of them at least for the trials, but unavoidable circumstances prevented his starting a really excellent Irish setter bitch in the trials. We know of her quality from the fact that we have shot over her in the field.

Mr. J. H. Watson, owner of Starlight and Alice Gladstone, made his first appearance in the field trials as an owner of participating dogs, and has no cause to regret the step he has taken. He has two good ones in these puppies, the first mentioned being something of a wonder as to bird sense, when considered in the light of a puppy.

Mr. E. B. Willis, of the Record-Union, Sacramento, was on the ground early and stayed to witness the closing of the work.

Mr. N. E. White, of Sacramento, an old and ardent sportsman, was present and took in the trials, telegraphed the news to various papers, and shot a few quails.

Attorney W. W. Foote was one of the leaders, socially, of the party, and left no opportunity to say a pleasant word to everyone.

The annual meeting of the club was convened on Wednesday evening, and the regular order of business taken up and disposed of.

The following named gentlemen were proposed for and elected to membership in the Club: W. J. Golcher, Geo. C. Gorham Jr., George Crocker, R. B. Woodward, C. E. Worden, W. S. Kittle, F. D. Atherton, Fred R. Webster, J. E. Terry, George Sperry, M. G. Eshman, A. P. Kirkhoff, Howard Black and H. Huber.

Then came the election of officers which resulted asfollows: President J. G. Edwards was re-elected and Fred R. Webster was chosen first Vice-President. J. M. Kilgarif was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer, and for the Executive Committee J. M. Bassford Jr., William Schrieber, D. M. Pyle, P. D. Linville and J. W. Harper were chosen.

After the Membership Stake was drawn themeeting adjourned until Friday night in order to consider more fully the question of securing favorable grounds for next year's meeting.

At the adjourned meeting on Friday evening the good season of mirth and jollity reached its climax in the humorous presentation speeches of Judge C. N. Post and Attorney W. W. Foote. The latter arose with well disguised solemnity and addressed President Edwards in a felicitous speech presenting him finally with a minaturebottle of "Waukesha" and recommending its use in about such quantities as the bottle contained at long intervals.

Judge Post had a difficult task to perform as the assembled sportsmen were convulsed with laughter over Attorney Foot's effort, but he marshalled his courage and set out to do the handsome and proper thing under the circumstances. The joke and repartee interrupted him somewhat and he was finally, for a moment, completely disconcerted by Attorney Foote remarking: "Post, why in h—l don't you make that speech as I wrote it for you."

The Judge rallied from the shock and after the applause had quieted down succeeded in making a veryappropriate address, presenting to President Edwards an elegant gold watch charm with a brilliant diamond setting on behalf of the Bakersfield membership of the Club.

The Judges originally chosen for this meeting consisted of Captain W. C. Neilson of San Francisco, D. M. Pyle of Bakersfield and R. T. Vandervoort of Pasadena.

The first mentioned could not attend on account of sickness and H. T. Payne of Los Angeles was chosen to fill the vacancy.

THE BALL AT THE SOUTHERN.

The ball tendered by Col. J. C. Morrison at The Southern was the social event of the occasion and was enjoyed by all participants. It was given on Thursday evening, winding up the festitives of "Ladies' Day" in a very appropriate and pleasing manner. The large dining room, served as a ball room and a splendid one it made. The ladies have the heartfelt thanks of the club for attending the trials during the day, at so great a distance from town, and then gracing this final event with their presence. Every guest was delighted and all joined in complementing our genial host for his successful efforts in catering to the pleasure of the attending sportsmen.

THE DERBY.

The Derby was unquestionably composed of the finest lot of dogs ever presented in such an event in California. There was not an indifferent dog in the entire class, and the spectators were treated to a scene, which, taken as a whole, proved to be one of the finest exhibitions of the work of young dogs ever presented here, or elsewhere for that matter.

The English setters were beauties, every one, Gladstone blood being the prominent feature of them all. The trials were inaugurated at noon on Monday, the 18th inst., the morning hours having been taken up in the work of preparation and the drawing of the dogs for this event. By the time the grounds were reached it was midday, and luncheon was spread under the trees and discussed before the work was begun. There were eight Derby entries, and their order of running and work performed was as follows:

SAM K. GLADSTONE–DOTTIE DAY—This brace was cast off at 12:15 in the willows and worked through some lowland lying along a well-defined, irrigating ditch for some fifteen minutes, when the course led up to a gentle knoll covered with sage and bunch grass, where a large bevy of birds was found. They flushed wild to Sam's point. DeMotte, handling Dottie Day, ordered to shoot, failed to comply, when M. D. Walters, handling Sam K., fired both barrels, both dogs steady to shot. Pursuing the birds into the willows, Sam K. established another point, and on the bank of the irrigating ditch Dottie Day established and held staunchly a point for some time; when the bird was flushed she proved steady to wing. Shortly after Sam K. established, in quick succession, three points, Dottie Day coming in for more credits. The birds being wild and the cover indifferent, it was found impossible to bring the dogs to a back, as it was very difficult for handlers or judges to keep close track of the dogs. In range and speed Sam K. cut out the pace, although each dog was good in this respect. The bitch on style led the dog. Working back into the sage, Sam K. established another fine point, whichhe held staunchly. The dogs were ordered up at 1:30, Sam K. winning the heat.

FLAKE L.–DEL MONTE—This pair were put down at 1:45 and worked over some comparatively open ground, the way leading along the sparsely clothed timber land which skirted the open of sage and tufted grass region, DeMotte handling Flake L. and George T. Allender Del Monte. Here Del Monte established the first point, but as the quail was running which he roaded, it flushed, and he proved slightly unsteady to wing. The next fifteen minutes developed a blank field, and at 2 o'clock the dogs were ordered up and the party passed to another part of the field, where this brace were again cast off, and in a short time a bevy of birds were flushed in the sage, neither dog receiving any credits. Del Monte cut out the pace and range, while style and quartering were largely in favor of the bitch. In working over the sage point, which was now crossed, the dogs came in for two credits each, when the way led beyond an old road, where Flake L. showed up splendidly in a covey point after the dog passed close to the birds. Flake L. then quickly established three more points, and the dogs were ordered up at 2:40 and the heat awarded to the last named of the brace.

ALICE GLADSTONE–OTILLIE—This brace was cast off at 3 o'clock, the former handled by DeMotte and the latter by George T. Allender. The former at once cut out the pace and range, which were of the first quality. The ground was quite open, and Miss Alice won the hearts of every one by her splendid dash and style. Birds were found in indifferent cover, on which each dog established a point. Passing on to the more open the setter established two more points, and the dogs were ordered up at 3:40 and the heat awarded to the latter.

STARLIGHT–RUSH CROXTETH—At 3:40 this brace was cast off in the timber, DeMotte handling Starlight and Charles Studarus Rush Croxteth. The pointer, a very large, lubberly appearing fellow, appeared in marked contrast to the elegant little setter, than which a more handsome dog we have seldom, if ever seen. The latter at once took the lead, dashing away in merry form, the pointer following, but all at once the latter whirled onto a staunch point, the setter coming up for a splendid back. The party then passed into an adjoining woodland pasture, where the pointer established a covey point, and followed it up by three or four more points in quick succession, when his handler became "rattled" at the vigorous, but unfounded, objections of his opponent handler, and called his dog off the birds and sent him off on a wild goose chase in another direction; but the pointer was after birds, and coming back of his own accord, passed the setter and did but little else but establish points until ordered up at 4:20, winning with points to spare, showing good bird sense throughout the heat.

DERBY SECOND SERIES.

SAM K. GLADSTONE–FLAKE L—The former handled by D. M. Walters, the latter by William De Motte. A very pretty and exciting heat. Puppies could not well do better. Both dogs under good control. The dog having the better of range and speed while the bitch led him in style. The dog backed well, while the bitch refused to back. Sam K. dropping to shot and proving entirely obedient, as did the bitch for the most part. Both dogs showed fine bird sense and worked over their ground in excellent shape. Point after point was established in quick succession and the work done by these puppies was the wonder and admiration of all who witnessed the heat. The bitch was staunch on her points and many concluded her a sure winner. On points made the bitch had the better, the score standing 10 to 8 for the dog but the final scoring of all points, credits and demerits showed the dog to be three points ahead, 67 to 70 in favor of Sam K., he thus winning the heat. The dogs were put down at 10 a. m. and taken up at 11:15, being down 1 hour and 15 minutes.

ALICE GLADSTONE–RUSH CROXTETH—This brace were cast off at 11:20, William De Motte handling the bitch and Charles Studarus the dog. The dog cut out and maintained the best range and speed and showed good bird sense for a puppy. Style and backing all in favor of Alice. The latter flushed and chased fur. This heat was a long one, being 2 hours and 15 minutes, the lunch hour intervening, the pointer finally winning the heat.

SAM K. GLADSTONE–RUSH CROXTETH—M. D. Walters handled Sam K. and Charles Studarus Rush Croxteth. The dogs were cast off at 2:35, the pointer being a large, soft puppy beginning to show signs of the hard work already done. A number of points were made by each of this brace, each of them showing good nose. The setter had style, speed and range in his favor, the pointer proving indifferent on points. The dogs were ordered up at 3:35, having been down just one hour, Sam K. winning the heat and first honors in the Derby.

DOTTIE DAY–FLAKE S—This brace was called up by the judges and run a side heat to decide which of the two should contest for second honors. The pair were handled by William De Motte. It was now 3:35 and the weather was very warm, regular July New England weather. The puppies were somewhat indifferent at first but soon warmed up to their work. The birds were about but scattered and they failed to locate at once. The heat was transferred to another field where some good work was shown in very short order. The bitches were nearly even on points but Flake L. had a little the best of it in more than one way and she was awarded the heat. It was a pretty sight to see these two beautiful dogs work. Time 25 minutes.

DERBY THIRD SERIES.

Flake L.–Rush Croxteth—At 4:15 this brace was cast off to contest for second place. Each of the dogs flushed, Flake L. established several points and held them staunchly. The pointer followed his birds too closely and flushed them although he made almost if not quite an equal number of points with the bitch. The bitch entirely outclassed the dog in style. The latter part of the heat was very interesting. Ordered up at 4:35 after having been down 40 minutes, the bitch winning the heat and second place.

Del Monte–Rush Croxteth—Third purse and honors was then divided between this pair, the latter having been run practically off his feet by previous work.

MEMBERSHIP STAKE.

Wednesday dawned bright and clear, the sun shone out brightly and soon gave evidence of a warm day. The Membership Stake was drawn the evening before, the result being as indicated below in the order of the pairs mentioned. A rather late start had been allowed as the day's work was to be done on the old grounds which for two years or more past has served the purpose of the Club. A drive of twenty minutes put the party on the ground, but owing to delays from various causes the starting of the first heat marked the hour as that of 10 o'clock, the dogs being:

Solano B–Fanny—The former handled by Mr. W. H. Wallace, of Tulare and the latter by Uncle Robert Liddle of this city. The dogs were cast off at the edge of a depression skirted with cottonwood and filled in with indifferent cover. After passing along the depression for some distance, Solano B came to a staunch point, Fanny running in and flushing. The pointer soon after secured two nice singles. The heat was devoid of special interest and at 11 a. m. the dogs were ordered up and the heat awarded the pointer.

Sirius–Pelham—The former was handled by Mr. J. M. Kilgarif and the latter by Mr. J. W. Harper. The dogs were put down at 11:10, starting along an open ridge where Sirius soon flushed a single. Pelham ranged out farther than the former at the start and soon established a point some two hundred yards down the well-defined ridge among the bunch grass and light sage. The birds flushed Pelham unsteady to wing. Sirius established a fine point and when bird was flushed proved steady to wing. Mr. Kilgarif was ordered by the judges to shoot but he had no cartridges in his gun, when several remarked that it was all the same to the bird, whereupon Mr. Kilgarif assumed the look of a great marksman slandered, then strode on after the grand old dog Sirius, the former look giving way to one of the win-or-die order. Pelham next established a point and Sirius came up to a beautiful back. Pelham then amused himself flushing and chasing, pulling down his credits as fast as he made them, yet showing an exceptionally good nose, finding birds readily. Sirius found and pointed a fine bevy which flushed and settled in the open. Then Pelham got in some more work of above discription, being unsteady to shot. Each dog flushed, when Sirius came to several nice points, over one of which Kilgarif killed a bird which Sirius retrieved nicely. The latter won the heat, time: one hour and thirty minutes.

LUNCHEON.

Luncheon was then spread out under the trees and setting in the shade of the carriages and grove the party partook of the excellent provender furnished for the occasion, most all of them being coatless, the heat of the day being oppressive making the work particularly hard on the dogs.

At one o'clock the third brace of dogs was cast off being:

Solano B.–Queen's Last—The former was handled by W. H. Wallace and the latter presented and run by Joseph M. Bassford Jr. Solano B. located bevy, Queen's Last coming up to a very beautiful back. The former then flushed, one of the birds alighting in a tree, when Solano made a staunch point at the bird when there located. Queen's Last showed marvelous bird sense, hunting over her ground in an admirable manner and using the wind to favor her nose, quartering closely wherever necessary. She is a very stylish bitch and has excellent range, going far beyond the dog.

Queen's Last made a point when Bassford flushed and killed, Solano B. breaking to shot. The bitch showed excellent style good nose, and was in as fine condition an one could wish. After being down one hour and thirty-five minutes the dogs were ordered up and the heat awarded to Queen's Last.

Sirius–Queen's Last—This brace was cast off at 2:55 to contest for the final award of the membership stake.

Sirius immediately located birds and Queen's Last backed him nicely at long range, but investigation revealed no bird. Bird flushed wild, Bassford killed and Queen's Last retrieved in good style. The birds flushed next to Queen's point, she steady to wing. Sirius then located a single and Kilgarif scored a clean kill and was applauded roundly, Sirius coming in for his full share of praise by retrieving in good form.

Sirius pointed again, Kilgarif fired, missed, old Sirius broke to shot. Then each of the dogs drew to a point, the birds flushing wild. Queen then showed some pretty work by roading up a single, which finally flushed wild.

Each dog was staunch; each showed good bird sense, but the dog was not in field condition while the bitch showed the better ranger, being in fine condition. After being down for two hours and twenty minutes, the dogs were taken up and Queen's Last awarded the heat, thus winning the Membership Stake.

ALL-AGE STAKE, FIRST SERIES.

Lady Trippo–Pelham—The former handled by Geo. T. Allender and the latter by R. M. Dodge. The pair were cast off at 9:45 in the open sage brush and soon struck plenty of birds. The bitch showed some beautiful work, ranging and quartering her ground well and showing good bird sense. She established a clean, staunch point, bird flushed by Allender and killed, Lady finally retrieved, but rather indifferently. Pelham pointed a number of times but was hard to control breaking to shot and flush. He showed wonderful nose and good bird sense. Lady was steady to wing and shot and staunch on her points. After being down 20 minutes the brace was ordered up and the heat awarded to the bitch.

Nick White–Petronella—The former was handled by William DeMotte and the latter by R. M. Dodge. It was 10:15 when this brace was cast off the cover being a continuation of that of the former heat. Nick ran over and flushed several birds in which operation Petronella materially aided him. The latter had the best of range and speed while the former showed severe lameness in one of his shoulders, which doubtless handicapped him severely. Nick established a staunch point which he held in beautiful style, bird flushed. Petronella roaded too closely upon a single and it flushed. Each of the dogs in roading birds flushed them repeatedly but the teams were crowding onto the judges and handlers and it would not be just to attribute all flushes to the work of the dogs. Nick pointed and Petronella backed nicely. DeMotte ordered to flush and kill, did so and Nick retrieved in good form. Petronella established a point and the bird flushed before Nick could be brought up. Petronella broke to shot; another point for same flushed, Dodge ordered to shoot but bird ranged towards teams and fire was reserved. Nick White warmed up to his work, improving in speed and range; establishing fine point, bird flushed and killed by DeMotte. At 11:15 the dogs were ordered up, the heat being awarded to the pointer.

Black Joe II–Starlight—The former handled by George T. Allender and the latter by William DeMotte. Owing to the indifferent showing made by the latter in the Derby by advice of DeMotte, Mr. Watson determined to give the puppy another show and his work in this heat proved this action well taken. The black pointer cut out the pace and range, points which he would take from nine-tenths of the dogs in the whole country, while style is an unknown quantity in his construction. This heat began at 11:20, Black Joe establishing several good points, being staunch and firm, steady to wing and shot and a splendid retreiver. The setter showed wonderful speed and splendid bird sense, going like a flash he would come up on his points with a suddeness and dash which captured every one. Starlight steady to shot, but as yet an indifferent retriever and he refused to back, but on the whole is a most wonderful puppy. At 12:10 dogs ordered up, pointer winning.

Rowdy R.–Sally Brass II.—The former was handled by M. D. Walters and the latter by George T. Allender. This brace was put down at 1:35. Rowdy R. proved himself as merry a little worker as one could wish to see. He ranges off like a flash, never tiring, and quarters his ground well, being obedient to hand and voice.

Sally Brass II. is unquestionably the highest type of the pointer for field work ever seen in this section. In style, range, speed and bird sense she has few if any superiors in the country. She is perfectly broken. Several points fell to her credit in quick succession and while Rowdy was hustling about and doing some really excellent work on singles, the bitch pointed a covey and led the dog by several points.

Rowdy backed beautifully and also retrieved, as did also the bitch. At 2:15 the brace was ordered up and the pointer awarded the heat.

Lady Trippo–Nick White.—Lady Trippo was handled by George T. Allender and Nick White by William De Motte. This was at 2:20, and the weather was that of July, instead of January. The ladies had their parasols raised as if 'twere summer instead of January. The bitch roaded nicely to a covey, Allender flushed and killed, the bitch retrieving in good form. The heat told on the dogs and they were watered and refreshed and sent on. Each dog flushed, both steady to wing. The bitch led the dog on points and every other quality save backing and retrieving, the latter being about equal, while the former was in Nick's favor Ordered up at 3 o'clock, the bitch winning the heat.

Black Joe II–Sally Brass II.—This brace was handled by George T. Allender and proved one of the most interesting features of the trials. Point after point was established and held staunchly by each of these dogs. Both were steady to wing and shot, being also good retrievers. The bitch showed some grand work by winding a covey for several hundred yards, pointing staunchly being steady when the birds were flushed all about her. Black Joe has fine nose, good range. but lacks style. The bitch won the heat. Time, 1 hr. 5 min, Lady Trippo–Sally Brass II.—On Friday morning at 9:55 this brace was put down, Allender handling both dogs. The former showed up much better than she had done on the day previous while the latter was decidedly inferior in her work to that shown in the heat with Old Black Joe II. on the evening previous.

The route lay along the willows and high weeds where each established a point on a covey. The birds flushed wild and each dog ran over single birds, flushing them. Point after point was made for each of the dogs, each backing the other in turn in splendid form. After one hour's work Lady Trippo won the heat and first honors in the stake.

Nick White–Pelham—The former was held by DeMotte and the latter by Dodge. They were put down at 11:10 in the timber. Nick pointed, then flushed and chased, for which his handler gave him a reprimand which did him good. Pelham showed a good nose but broke to shot. Nick established two good points which he held staunchly. DeMotte flushed and killed, Nick retrieving nicely. Pelham insisted on breaking to shot and lost his credits as fast as made; too bad, as he has a grand nose.

At 11:45 they were ordered up, Nick winning the heat.

Sally Brass II.–Nick White—The latter was now well worn with his work on account of being lame but he is a game dog and never flinched in his work. The bitch located and pointed a covey and secured a fine single point shortly afterwards. At Nick's first point DeMotte fired and killed, the dog retrieving in good form. Several more points were established by each dog when they were ordered over into an adjoining field, where Sally Brass established a fine point, Nick rushing up, refused to back and flushed the birds, the bitch steady to wing. Sally Brass won the heat and second prize.

Black Joe II.–Nick White—Now came the final heat of the trials for third money between this brace. The dogs were put down at 1:30, and in an incredibly short space of time Joe had established seven points to Nick's two, although it must be said that the latter was in no condition to stand the work. Heat given to Black Joe II thus winning third money.

Some Prize Winners.

In speaking separately of the winning dogs of the late field trials held by the Pacific Coast Field Trials Club at Bakersfield, too much care cannot be used in order that no injustice may be done the several dogs. But if we may be permitted to speak of especial qualities of merit, we could not but select the winners in their classes and treat of them in the order of their honors as given by the judges. In so doing we would first say that in no essential particular could their awards have been different, while in many of the heats there was little or no difference in the merit of pointing, and the decision had to rest on other qualities, which are not observant to the uninformed, hence in some respects the spectators were slow to recognize the justice of some decisions.

Sam K. Gladstone, winner of first in the Derby, is a grand dog, by Gladstone Boy out of Ruby D. Ruby D. is a litter sister to champion Gloster, and by Dashing Rover out of Trinket, bred by Charles Tucker, of Stanton, Tennessee. This puppy did his work well, and in such a manner as to reflect gaeat credit upon his trainer, Mr. D. M. Walters, as well as to exhibit the excellent quality of the family from which he comes. He is a charming mover, and exhibits bird sense to a degree that is worthy of especial mention. Range, style, speed, staunchness in pointing, all backed by good bone and substance, insuring endurance, are some of the essential elements which enabled this dog to wrn first honors. In him Mr. Kirckhoff has a beauty, of which he may well be proud.

Coming next in order and of merit so evenly balanced with Sam K. that there was but a fractional margin between them comes Flake L. Gladstone, owned by Mr. P. D. Linville. Flake L. is by Dan Gladstone out of Florine. A prettier piece of canine flesh it would be hard to find, and to describe her quality and other points would be but a practical repetition of what we have just said of Sam K. We congratulate Mr. Linville upon owning so beautiful a bitch, combined in so eminent a degree with all the essentials for field and bench purposes.

Rush Croxteth, who, with Del Monte, divided third in the Derby, is a large, heavy, awkward pointer, with a very good nose for birds. Del Monte is a handsome little pointer, and will no doubt prove a splendid dog for hunting purposes,

Mr. Joe Bassford Jr., is to be congratulated on owning so staunch and beautiful a hunting dog as Queen's Last proved herself to be in the winning of the Membership Stake. Staunch on a point, speedy, good ranger and showing excellent bird sense in handling her birds, she proved herself a deserving winner, aside from the fact that she beat Sirius, one of the finest field dogs ever known heretofore on this Coast. His being out of condition was against him in this stake.

In speaking of the winners in the All-Age stake there is but little choice. The trio might be transposed in any manner and no injustice be done any one of them. As far as tested numbers considered, the black pointer blood is ahead on this coast. They say that Old Black Joe II is homely. Grant it. They say he has no indication of style. Grant that. Then what do they say of him? They are dumb as oysters. Why? Because every one knows that he has the habit, which with him is chronic, of sticking his nose into every bit of cover that conceals a bird and of holding his birds staunchly. No better field trial ranger ever set foot in California. But why continue? He won second in the Derby and in the All-Age last year and third in the All-Age this year. He is a grand dog of royal blood.

Sally Brass II is, beyond all question, so say the oldest attendants at the field trials of this State, the finest pointer which has ever appeared in any of the events here held. Neat, trim, smooth and well proportioned, with the action of the paragon of her race, she captivated everyone with her wellnigh faultless work in the heat with Old Black Joe II. She is one of the most stylish of movers, an excellent ranger, and shows bird sense in a very marked degree, staunch on her points and one of the most lovely backers and retrievers we have ever seen.

Lady Trippo is a charming little bitch, "beautiful as a picture," as the old saying goes. She is well-nigh infallible in pointing. Not once it is claimed by those who ought to know did she establish a false point during all of her running in the trials. She is quick, speedy, ranges well and is as merry a little worker as one would wish to see; very stylish, and as staunch on her points as any dog can be. In retrieving and backing she shows her only weak features. In winning first she did so clearly and beyond all question, although it should be said in justice to Sally Brass II that the latter named bitch was decidedly off her nose, judging from the work exhibited in the heat with Old Black Joe II on the evening previous. In speaking of the quality of these three winners in the All-Age stake it is but fair to quote Mr. George T. Allender, the able handler of these winners. He says: "They are as near equal as dogs can be, and have repeatedly turned the tables on each other during the entire training season."

They are all grand dogs, and many a good dog was beaten by each of them in these trials.

A "Pointer" on Black Pointers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26, 1892.

KENNEL EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your report of the Field Trials please let it be known that "Old Black Joe II," was bred by Mr. W. R. Pape, New Castle-upon-Tyne,, England.

In the Examiner of Sunday last, is an article which states that he is by "Old Black Joe," out of "Sweep." As "Sweep" happened to be a litter brother of Joe II., it is a puzzler to find out how he can also be his dam. Some of the papers have been kind enough to claim that his pedigree is unknown.

Whether Mr. Pape ever gave me the names of his sire and dam I do not, at the moment, remember but will look through his letters and find out.

For me to know that he was bred by Mr. Pape, who does not pretend to keep any record of his dogs, and also to know there was not a dog in the last trials that has any license to beat him, is sufficient pedigree for me. Mr. Pape has bred these blacks for thirty-five or thirty-six years. If some of the great breeders who go so much on long pedigrees will trot out two dogs and two firsts, two seconds and one third prize with them in three trials in good company, perhaps pedigree may then count for something.

I am willing to run two puppies in the Derby next year, and also two dogs in the All-aged Stakes (all blacks) against any two puppies and two dogs of any other breeder, just to find out whether the black dogs of unknown pedigree are not the equal, if not superior, of the long-pedigreed dogs, and either shut the mouths of the pedigree talkers or give them permission to talk ad libitum. I do not buy pedigrees. I prefer to buy a dog, and if he has got a pedigree so much the better. Should any one desire to accept my offer, I would like to know it within the next thirty days.

The above offer means that four dogs shall be run, and if mutually agreeable, the puppies shall also be run in the All-aged Stakes. JAMES E. WATSON.

Did you never attend a field trial? No! Then you have missed some of the greater trials which occasionally fall to the part of mortals who love the dog and gun. Those just held at Bakersfield were of the genuine stamp. Up early; hasty breakfast; sixteen-mile drive: all day sport in the field; back to town; two hours for dinner and the balance of the night for fun, music and refreshments with a slight snooze before breakfast. One especial musical quartette regularly insisted on singing in the halls of the hotel about one o'clock A. M. a dirge which had something in it about a time long gone by, when the singers lived beside a river and went out musing in the moonlight with a female who had blonde hair and a flexible form, and all such attractions as make the singers weep at the recollection thereof and the auditors cuss.

They had another song about a wood pile which they insisted on "pulling down" about every fifteen minutes and scattering the sticks thereof about the hotel. Then being struck with remorse and casting a prophetic glance forward to the final day of reckoning they would chant the doleful yet anxious query:

"Will de watahs be chilly,
Will de watahs be chilly,
Will de watahs be chilly,
When I be comin' fo' ter cross?"

The San Francisco Gun Club will meet at the Occidental Hotel on Tuesday evening, February 2d, for the annual election of officers and for the transaction of such business as may regularly be brought before the club.

N. P. T. H. B. Association.

The following were the proceedings of the afternoon session of the North Pacific Trotting Horse Breeders' Association:

The convention re-assembled at two o'clock. The chair appointed as the committee to prepare an address to the State Board: T. H. Tongue, L. P. W. Quimby and Jay Beach.

W. W. Baker invited the attention of the association to the Rural Spirit Stakes. The trotting stakes opened this year, he said, would need to be reopened, and it was his wish to see them adopted by the association and made a breeders' stake. He was willing to turn the nominations already made over to the association, with the proviso that the name be retained, and he thought there would be probably fifty entries made. The offer was referred to the executive committee with a favorable recommendation.

Secretary Kerron read a communication from Mr. Baker, reciting the need of authentic horse literature and announcing his intention of publishing a North Pacific trotting and pacing register, the first edition to appear in 1893. Each pedigree so registered he would publish, free of charge, in the Rural Spirit. This was also referred to the Executive Committee to be created by the Board of Directors.

DIRECTORATE ESTABLISHED.

The committee on organization reported names for directors. One may possibly not qualify, and that will leave the requisite fifteen. The gentlemen named were, on motion of C. P. Bacon, declared duly elected, and are as follows:

Mr. DeLashmutt invited the association to visit Witch Hazel Farm. On motion of J. W. Bailey, the invitation was accepted.

DIRECTORS ORGANIZE.

The meeting then adjourned, and the Board of Directors immediately convened. The election of a secretary, treasurer and executive committee devolved upon them. Ernest Bross was chosen secretary and William Kerron treasurer; executive committee, Messrs. DeLashmutt, Beach, Tongue, Galloway and Morton. The secretary's is the only salaried office; its duties have to do with the records, accounts and correspondence of the association and official boards.

INFLUENZA.

Diagonsis and Treatment of This Prevalent Disease.

This is a specific disease and generally prevails as an epizootic, and is characterized by catarrhal and febrile symptoms, accompanied by loss of appetite and great loss of strength, and in severe cases often complicated with diseases of the lungs, liver, kidneys, bowels, and sometimes the heart. The nervous system in all cases is affected, and most of the prominent symptoms may be regarded as results of depression of nervous centres; the cause is due to the presence of the specific poison in the blood.

Causes—Influenza has its orgin in some peculiar condition of the atmosphere, which exercises a specific and injurious influence in the health of animals. The real agents of the disease are generated in the atmosphere, but are assisted by other causes, such as bad or an insufficient supply of nutritious food, or even an excess of good food, combined with an insufficient amount of exercise; cold, damp seasons, especially in spring and fall, also affect the health. The peculiar atmospheric changes which assist in the generation of specific diseases like influenza are hard to account for, as during the warmest months of the past summer the disease was very prevalent, which shows that it is liable to break out at any season of the year.

Influenza is infectious only when horses are closely housed and come in contact with one another, so that the effluvia from the body and the breath of the affected animal when absorbed into the lungs or deposited on the mucuous membrane of other horses, through the medium of watering troughs, buckets and mangers; but the disease cannot be considered highly infectious, because we often find its career cut short at a time when many horses are suffering from it.

Symptoms—Influenza in different years and in different places varies in its intensity and in some of its symptoms. In some seasons it assumes more of an inflammatory nature and in others it takes a low form. In mild cases the following symptoms may be seen: For the first two or three days the horse is seen to be dull, weak and dispirited, generally sweats on exertion, the bowels slightly constipated, the fœces paler than usual, and there may be occasionally a cough. In these cases if the patient is promptly removed to a loose box and carefully treated these symptoms may pass off, probably in the form of catarrh and a disposition to œdema or swelling in the legs, without the necessity of recourse to any active treatment. Plenty of cool water, soft nutritious diet and occasional doses of the following mixture constitute the bulk of treatment: Tincture of aconite, two drams; fluid extract of belladonna, three drams; sulphate quinine, half ounce; spirits of nitre, two ounces; water, one pint. Give two ounces every four hours until ever ceases. Give plenty of fresh air, but do not expose to draughts. When the fever has abated give gentle exercise. In the majority of cases the above treatment has proved very successful where no complications have arisen. But these mild symptoms are often followed by others of a more urgent nature. The horse refuses his food, his coat looks unhealthy, the urine becomes scanty, fœces pale and scanty, the surface of dung pellets is glazed and partially covered with mucuous, the mouth becomes hot and unnaturally dry, or it may be pasty at the back of the tongue and the mucuous membrane around the gums is of a yellowish red hue, and also the membranes of the eyelids. The temperature rises to sometimes as high as 106, the pulse is quick and oppressed from 60 to 80 per minute, governed according to the height of the temperature, pulse at same time is feeble and breathing quick; the animal appears to be suffering from headache and if made to move staggers in his walk. These symptoms show that the nervous system is becoming deranged, especially the brain. These symptoms may remain so for two or three days, except that the pulse may become a little quicker and more feeble, respiration shorter and the temperature higher. Also, in these cases if the animal is well nursed and proper attention is paid to the ventilation and the medicine given, which I have already prescribed, he will most likely recover without much more treatment.

At other times the disease is ushered in and accompanied by weeping of the eyes, swelling of the eyelids, legs and under the belly, and all other usual signs of general debility. I have seen cases in the early stages presenting above symptoms so weak and prostrated that it would require the assistance of two or three men to get them into a loose box. In such cases I have found it necessary to immediately administer stimulants, such as carbonate of ammonia, camphor and ginger, with stock ale and gruel, nutritive tonics, and with care and good nursing the attack will pass off in a few days. In the majority of cases the discharge of water from the nose in the early stage is a good sign and indicates that the disease is becoming milder. In all cases where a favorable termination is taking place they discharge urine more frequently, in larger quantities and clearer in color. The manure becomes of a proper consistency and soft, instead of being expelled in pellets. In this stage a slight swelling of the limbs is a good sign; it is one of nature's ways of giving relief and often prevents the occurrence of mischief in more vital organs, but in the later stages it is a symptom of the inability of nature any longer to continue the conflict with disease. The unfavorable symptoms in the advanced stages are fits of shivering, breathing embarassed and increase in rapidity of pulse. As the unfavorable symptoms advance we have lung, liver, bowel and heart complications set in, the membrane of the nose becomes mulberry and the discharge streaked with blood. The legs sheath and belly swell, also swellings take place around the throat and glottles, and serum is effused into the air cells of the lungs, and sometimes along the spinal cord, or in the ventricles of the brain. The animal also may wander around his box, look at his sides and paw with his fore feet as if in pain. At this critical stage great caution and care are needed. Stimulants and tonics may be given in moderation, but avoid sedatives, such as aconite, belladonna and digitalis, as the nerve centres are already paralyzed; also avoid purgatives. When a bad case survives it often leaves them with chronic cough, defective respiration, skin disease, rheumatism or paralysis. The treatment during convalescence in this case is good nursing and carefully regulated administration of tonics.

The disease called pink-eye is merely a form of influenza, manifested by symptoms of a peculiar marked nature, notably that of a remarkably clear, pink-colored condition of the conjunctival membrane, accompanied by a swollen or œdematous state of the conjunctival. In addition to this peculiarity we have a considerable amount of swelling around the joints and abdomen, pulse ranges from 60 to 100, but as a rule the pulse is less feeble and of a better tone than in other forms of influenza. The temperature is generally very high and breathing quick; the animal is stiff in his gait and troubled with catarrh of a more or less degree, also a cough. The dangerous symptom of pink-eye is the sudden formation of a fibrous clot in the cavities of the heart and in the larger arteries, especially in the pulmonary system. This is due either to the excess of fibrogenous material in the blood or to the weak condition of the heart. This is the cause of occasional sudden deaths in this disease. It cannot be cut short by any special mode of treatment; it has to run its course. Avoid purgatives and strong sedatives; the purgatives are liable to produce purgation, and the sedatives, on account of their paralyzing effect, would be dangerous, and also the liability to the formation of these clots in the heartor pulmonary veins. Diffusable stimulants, injections of tepid water, soft diet, and in the later stages tonics and stimulents. In influenza some of the vital organs may bear the brunt of the disease, from which death might occur. Sometimes it is the lungs and plural, and then we have breaking up of these structures. Sometimes the liver or spleen is greatly diseased; at other times the bowels only are affected and their lining membrane is found of a deep mulberry in parts and almost in a state of gangrene, and in other cases patches of inflammation distributed through the alimentary canal, and on this account a great many cases, which are apparently doing well, suddenly sink away and die.—Dr. J. F. Major, in Clark's Horse Review.

Look Out for Glanders.

The recent announcement that som one in Glenn County had killed twenty head of horses affected with glanders, and disposed of their carcasses by throwing them into the Sacramento River caused no little indignation among the people of this city.

No one is more rampart over the affair than Dr. R. A. Archibald, the well known veternary surgeon. "I was shocked when I read that item," said he to a reporter of this paper yesterday. "To think that anybody could be so ignorant, or malicious, as the case may be, as to throw broadcast the germs of such a maglignant disease as glanders from which thousands of horses are dying, and which has on numerous occasions been transmitted to the human family! These carcasses should have been either burned or buried eight feet under ground. It is shameful—that's what it is. Should we stand idly by and see such crimes—for crimes they certainly are—committed under our very eyes? I say no. And I also say it was the duty of every inhabitant of this beautiful State to see that the perpetrators of such crimes are punished to the full extent of the law.

"Should we stand by and see the germs of microbes of one of the most virulent diseases known to the world sown broadcast over the State? Thousands of people get their water from the Sacramento River. Thousands of horses are daily watered from the same source. Our families and stock are daily drinking water which for all we know is loaded with germs of contagious diseases. I think it is time the authorities had their eyes opened so they will appoint competent persons to investigate and control such diseases, and to see that the carcasses of diseased animals are disposed of in a proper manner. This is an important question to every citizen, whether he owns live stock or whether he has none. If he has any regard for his health or those that are near and dear to him he should bring his influence to bear to have stringement laws made and carried out for the protection of himself and family.

"I have known men who, possessing horses affected with this disease and being recommended by a veterinarian to destroy them, refused to do so, and proceeded to treat them themselves, and who eventually contracted and succumbed to the disease. It is time some one should be appointed to protect those who have some knoweledge of sanitary laws from the mistakes and misdoings of the ignorant.

"Most of the Eastern States have men appointed by the Goverment to investigate and control all contagious diseases, and they are slowly and surely wiping them out, or at least preventing them from spreading. But this, the most beautiful State in the Union, is neglected, and not only neglected but people are allowed to sew the germs of disease broadcast through the country. Again there are lots of horses destroyed in this country by ignorant and uninstructed persons, who try to obtain notoriety by condemning horses promiscuously, because said horses have a little discharge from the nostrils. To the inexperienced it is difficult to diagnose glanders, as there are other diseases which resemble it very closely, as catarrh, ozena, influenza, strangles; and there are cases on record where horses with ulcerating teeth have been mistaken for glanders, but to experienced men the diagnosis is generally very easy: if not, they can always prove whether it is glanders or not by experimenting with the discharge from the nostrils.

"I am not grinding my own ax, now, but my advice to people who suspect glanders among your stock is not to call in your neighbors, or men who pretend to be veterinary surgeons, who will, as I have said before, try and gain notoriety or cause a little excitement, which will eventually cause the owner to destroy his animals in order to hush up matters as much as possible, but to quietly send for a qualified surgeon and have him pass his opinion as to whether it is glanders or not, and act on his advice.

'There is a man who lives in the neighborhood of this city, who but a short time ago destroyed all his horses except one, on the advice of a pretended vetrinary surgeon. The one he did not kill was affected, as he said, the same as the others, but as it was an exceptionally fine animal he delayed destroying it until he had our opinion. The animal was brought to us and examined, with the result that no symptoms of the glanders were seen, and we diagnosed it as a case of chronic catarrh, which later succumbed to treatment, proving our diagnosis to be correct, as no remedy has yet been discovered for the cure of glanders. The owner is now in doubt as to whether the animals he destroyed had glanders or not, and I think he has every reason to be in doubt. Very often a number of horses in a band have an attack of influenza, which as we all know frequently leaves, when neglected, a weakness, as catarrh, for instance. This owing to its prevalence, leads people to believe that glanders or some contagious disease is among their stock."—Sacramento Record Union.

Nintety Years' Improvement.

The following table shows the improvement in the speed of the American trotter since 1800, at which time the trotter, as a distinct breed, was unknown. Not until about 1850 did the trotter begin to be regarded as a breed, and the efforts to breed uniform speed was then attempted in a very crude way. In 1867 Dexter made a record of 2:17¼ and established the value of the Hambletonian-American Star cross, and many animals were bred that way thereafter. It was about this time that George Wilkes, Goldsmith Maid and others began to demonstrate the superiority of Hambletonian over all other sires as a sire of uniform speed.

Hambletonian's reputation was further enhanced by the performances of St. Julien, 2:11¼. and by the sons and daughters of George Wilkes that began to make their appearance on the turf soon after 1880. It may be said that intelligent methods of breeding the trotter came into nniversal use about this time, and it became universally recognized that he was from a distinct family possessing distinct traits that were transmitted from one generation to another and intensified by development. Since that time improvement in speed has been most rapid, as the following tables show:

THE HICKS SALE.

That Dr. Hicks and the weather clerk had an understanding the day prior to the clearing-out sale of the veteran's trotting stock was as plain as Richard's hat-band. Old Sol was out in all his glory last Wednesday, and in consequence of this and the large amount of printer's ink that had been expended in extolling the virtues of the seventy-five horses placed under Killip & Co.'s hammer, a more representative gathering of Pacific Coast horsemen never graced a sales-yard. While some of the horses did not bring the prices expected, others more than did so, hence the sale will go down into history as a very fair one, all in all. There was no hitch in the proceedings, and the silvery voice of Mr. Killip, the old gold baritone of Mr. Chase, the basso-profundo of Dave Eisman and the falsetto of Edwin F. Smith never showed to better advantage.

Among the prominent horsemen and breeders present we might mention G. Valensin of Pleasanton, Gilbert Tompkins of Souther Farm (San Leandro), Wilfred Page of Penn's Grove, Wilber F. Smith, Eugene Elkus, G. W. Hancock and F. P. Lowell of Sacramento, L. H. McIntosh of Chico, F. H. Burke of La Siesta, E. P. Heald, J. A. McKerron, James Dustin, John Layng, Dr. W. Egan, E. I. Robinson, Capt. Ben Harris and J. B. Cole of San Francisco, Ira and Henry Pierce of Santa Rosa, R. Smith of Salinas, C. P. Griffin, Alfred E. Cohen and C. S. Neal of Alameda county, George Bayless of Pleasanton, R. E. de B. Lopez of Australia, William Vioget and Henry Scott of San Jose, H. M. La Rue of Sacramento, S. S. Warren of Spokane, C. W. Aby of Lake county, Sam H. Hoey of Winters, D. J. Murphy of San Jose, Charles Scott of Napa, T. C. Snider and H. C. Goodyear of Yolo county, L. E. Claussen, H. Block and E. D. Dudley of this city, W. B. Todhunter of Sacramento, Dr. Finlaw of Santa Rosa, K. O'Grady of San Mateo, John F. Boyd, proprietor of Oakwood Stock Farm, S. H. Crane of Turlock, Major C. C. Clay of this city, C. A. Hoppin of Yolo, S. K. Trefry, S. C. Tryon, A. D. Miller and T. F. Shields of Sacramento, F. C. Talbot of San Francisco and George E. Guerne of Santa Rosa, Geo. A. Wiley, Oakwood Stock Farm, P. Farrell and J. Hughes of San Francisco.

The highest-priced animal of the sale was Empress, 2:29¾, by Flaxtail, dam Lady Narley, by Mambrino Chief, Charles S. Neal, of Alameda county, securing her for $830. Mr. Neal also paid $750 for the Egmont mare, Flash. Frank H. Burke secured Lady Stevens, sister to the great matron, Minnehaha, for $825, after some lively competition. There was very spirited bidding for the fine yearling colt, Nominee, by Ross S., 2:21¼, dam Pearl, by Blue Bull 75. After starting at a low figure there was some hair-raising tilting between S. S. Warren, of Spokane, and A. W. Foster, of San Rafael, the latter finally securing the little fellow at $330.

The total for the sale was $16,845, an average of $224.59 for the seventy-five head sold under the hammer. The forty-one broodmares brought an average of $327.91 per head, six three-year-olds $143.33, sixteen two-year-olds $80.94, while twelve yearlings averaged $99.60.

Following are the prices paid, pedigrees of the animals and the purchasers:

Baby McKee Sells for $25,000—Sunol's Brother Brings $14,500—A Very Good Sale—Prices Received.

The long-expected sale of Palo Alto stock took place at the American Institute Building, New York City, last Tuesday and Wednesday. There were nearly 3,000 people present each day, among whom were noticed many well-known breeders and representative horsemen from all parts of the United States.

The first day's sale of forty-nine head brought $59,925, an average of $1,202 each. The second day's sale of fifty-six head brought $60,829 making a grand total for the 105 head of $119,735.

The sale of Baby McKee for $25,000 to J. T. Ferguson for Frederick P. Olcott caused much excitement as the handsome youngster stood quietly in the centre of the ring of horsemen, and when he was led away the crowd cheered the buyer for his pluck. Mr. Olcott is president of the Central Trust Company, and is going to join the ranks and breed trotters. He has a farm of 365 acres at Bernardsville, N. J., where mares by such sires as Nutwood, Alcantara, Kentucky Wilkes and other great sires are quartered.

Worth, a two-year-old brother of Sunol, 2:08½, Queen of the Turf, was the bright star of Wednesday's offerings, and there was warm competition for the big son of Electioneer and Waxana, A. H. Moore of the Cloverdale Farm, Colmar, Pa., finally outbidding his opponents and securing the colt for $14,500. Dun Walton of New York, who wanted Baby McKee so badly yesterday, and only quit at $24,000, was a bidder on Worth.

Liston, a handsome son of Electioneer and Lady Ellen, commanded the attention of buyers also, and finally went to W. E. McMillan of Paris, Ill., for $6,400. Maro, another of the dead stallion's sons, brought $4,450, the McCormick Live Stock Company of Bowling Green, Mo., taking him at that figure. A roan filly and bay filly by Electioneer commanded $3525 and $3400 respectively.

Mr. Robert Bonner's Sale.

The first of Peter C. Kellogg & Co.'s sales in New York in 1892 began with a consignment from Mr. Robert Bonner's farm at Tarrytown, N. Y. The group contained fifty-one head and when the last lot had been disposed of it was found that $28,820 had been realized, an average of $555.29 per head. While all of the stock was well bred, a lot of it was off colors. Nutbourne having got a large percentage of grays and then again very little of it had been developed, as Mr. Bonner does not race his stock, buyers had to go it blind, but at that many of them bought prizes in the rough.

The highest priced colt sold was the bay colt Startle Jr., by Startle, out of Daybreak, a sister to Noontide. He brought $4,000. The bulk of the buyers were new men, still a few that wanted good brood mares and fillies stepped up, Robert Steele buying a number for Cedar Park. W. J. White also got a grand mare in Peril. She is a sister to Wyatt, 2:27, while her grandam produced Day Dream, 2:21½, and her great grandam threw Deucalion, 2:22, Scotland Maid, 2:28½, and John Love, 2:28½. This is speed producing blood all the way up the ladder.

The colt, that Geo. E. Guerne sent East with G. & M., has recently returned, he is looking splendid and is now placed in the front rank of the good ones at Santa Rosa.

SENATOR STANFORD refused a $75,000 offer for Advertiser, 2:16, in New York last Wednesday. Dun Walton offered this sum in behalf of Frederick Olcott, it is supposed.

Spare the Brush and Spoil the Sale!

What a lesson many of our prominent breeders would learn if they were to visit the horse fairs in England, Ireland or Scotland and see how well prepared the stock for sale is. The plaited manes, tails and foretops; the clean, sleek appearance of the well-groomed animals, and how much they seem to appreciate it, would indeed be something that might awaken the interest of such spectators. In California, especially, is this lack of taste noticeable whenever horses are offered for sale. The animals are rough-looking; their hoofs broken and flattened; their tails and manes matted with cockle-burrs; their legs covered with knits, and with their long, itchy-looking, hairy appearance it is no wonder that people hesitate about buying, for they are not sure of what they are getting, covered as the equines are by a maze of hair and vegetation.

This is no exaggeration, but the plain truth. After the horses are sold and taken in their starved and lousy-looking appearance and fed, groomed and attended to as they should be, and the seller hears that the colt turns out well, he says: "Well, I just got $70 for that one. I gave him away; he was so poor. I am sorry I did not keep him, for I hear he can not be bought for $500. I never could get that price for him." Perhaps he could not, for he did not deserve it. "Anything that is worth selling is worth a proper wrapper." Who would think of taking a sealskin coat home to his wife done up in a piece of brown straw paper such as is used by the butcher. There is just as much sense in sending an unwashed, uncurried, miserable-looking animal to the auction block as there is in that, and the reception it would receive would be very similar.

A few dollars judiciously expended for a horse-clipper, curry-comb, brush, wisp and a little castile soap, a bucket or two, and a few sacks of carrots, will help the hired man to make a difference of hundreds of dollars in the result of a large sale of horses. To be taken up from the cheerless pasture and carefully fed and bedded for a few months and have the horses' feet attended to, will bring in a greater return for the time and money spent than any like period in the history of the stock.

The day for buying stock in a corral is past. California breeders are away behind the age in this respect. The corrals have gone with the adobes, the riatas, the wild-eyed, black-haired vaqueros. It is about time that some of our breeders realize this fact and stop sitting down and wondering why it is that the large consignments sent East, although not a bit better bred than theirs, bring such large prices. The solution of this problem is, that horses are led into the sale ring in perfect shape; new halters and bright-colored light blankets are ready for each of them, and when they are stripped at the command of the auctioneer they look as though they were waiting for the jockey or are just standing until the bright harness is brought out. The first bid that is offered pays for all that beautiful appearance. Messrs. Rose, Salisbury, Corbitt, Stanford and Burke always received good prices, while the other breeders who thought the pedigree covered all their animals with a halo of glory have returned to California in debt to the auctioneer.

We understand that a large number of horses will soon be sold in this State; several of our richest breeders contemplate thinning their large and increasing bands of mares, colts and fillies, and therefore we beg of them to use a little elbow grease and a curry-comb and brush, on the animals and bring them before the public in such a way that they will find that neither an apology for negligence is necessary nor a long speech regarding the merits of the animals essential. Let the catalogue tell of the pedigree and the animal show for itself whether it is a credit to it and worth purchasing or not.

The Survival of the Fittest.

While columns in Eastern papers have been devoted to a discussion of the kite track problem, its merits and demerits, we have sat by enjoying the battle of words and "sawed wood." And when at length the arms of the writers on this subject have grown tired and the stock of pencils got alarmingly low, we can but exclaim, with the bard of Tar Flat, "Rats!" A mile is a mile, even if traversed at an angle of forty-five degrees, and, if we are not believed, get out your tape-line and measure it. While we do not think that Sunol's performance (2:08¼ on the kite track) is any better than Maud S.'s 2:08¼ on a regulation, if indeed as good, still it is "pretty tollable fair" for a young mare, and we have hopes that she will set a mark of 2:07 on a regulation track.

Some well-bred horses are not capable of trotting a mile in 3:00 on a track down hill all the way and greased for the occasion. Just so with the success of members of the human race in any given calling. Start three young fellows out in life, and it is seen every day where one gets to the top of fame's ladder, notwithstanding the fact that others have hold of one leg and are trying to pull him down. His brother may meet with a friend who gives him a boost just as he was about to commit suicide in his despair. The third brother topples over into the mud from the first rung, and never fairly gets out of the slough. Is not the second brother entitled to some meed of praise for reaching a high standard, even if he did get a little assistance? This is the way with the kite-shaped track business. One performer would have made a great name on any kind of track, and would trot about as fast on one as another, with his frictionless gait. The next brother has a high and mighty stride and don't like the turns of a regulation, but given a kite-shaped course to show himself on, and he is fairly "in the swim" with the best of them. The third member of the family is a rattled-headed fellow who can never, under any circumstances, be any thing but a hoodlum. He has no particular gait, makes a certain poor mark, and will quit on any sort of a course and never get in the list of notables—except of the notably bad.

Quite a number of trotters have failed to make even as good a mark on a Gilderoy course as on an elliptical. The long stretches broke their tender hearts. And of those who did make low records, and who will be on the circuit this season, who will get the worst of it? The owners, who are required to enter them among high-class animals, for the most part against those who have made their marks on "regulation" tracks. If the animals who made their records no kite tracks are not worthy and are "counterfeits," on one loses except the owner who fails to get some of the stake money, and surely no one will deny that a man has a perfect right to send his horse for a low record, get it, and then finish last with him in his class races. In the course of a few years the getting of "tin-cup" records will be confined to a class of horses that are about to be retired to stud or harem, and their owners are anxious that they shall go there with a "list" mark, at least. No one will deny that their records are correct, when at an ordinary "record meeting" a couple of hundred watches are held on each performer.

Do not alarm yourselves, gentlemen. No injury can possibly be done—except to the bank account of the owner of the race horse who gives his flyer such a low mark on the kite that he cannot be made to keep up with the procession on the regulation. A mile is a mile, for a' that. Kites will come and kites will go, but steadily the trotter will march on to a warm corner in the heart of the true American who loves a sure-enough American institution, which the trotting horse is in every sense of the word.

Prices for trotters with low "tin-cup" records were never so high as at present, and it looks to us as if the opponents of trials against the watch were in the minority when we take into consideration the prices brought for Arion, Axtell and many others whose records were made opposing Father Time. When fast watch trials lower the price of a horse, then will the kite tracks grow moss-covered, but until that time comes we cannot see where any appalling disaster has befallen the trotting horse.

Mid-Winter Training.

The month of January, 1892, ends to-morrow, and it is with sorrow we hear from several portions of this glorious State that three-year-olds and four-year-olds are trotting "terribly fast quarters." We say to the owners of these youngsters, STOP SUCH WORK IMMEDIATELY, and if you have a "killer" of a trainer or driver (he must be an amateur, anyway) make him stop driving so fast, if he does not, discharge him immediately.

There will be no races trotted for months, and the man who gets his horses trotting wonderful miles in April will not appear in the circuit in August with them. There is reason in all things but in the training of young trotters, it seems. If the science of breeding is to be killed by the ignorance of trainers, then farewell to the hopes of the horsemen of the future. There are "horse-killers" in some parts of this State that delight in getting a string of trotters going fast trials and winning wonderful fast miles against the watch, an instrument that never needs rest nor bandaging; it has neither lungs, muscle nor brains, and is only used to cover its face with its hands, and offers neither glory nor prizes to the victims.

The Winter is the time for rest, not absolute rest either. Horses that trotted inside of 2:30 last year should never be jogged on a track a fast mile; they should be worked slowly, fed carefully and kept healthy; in fact, their muscles must have just enough to do to keep them from getting flabby and soft. When it is time to prepare them for the circuit, the amount of work they will then have to do will not harm them, and at the close of the circuit they can retire again to winter quarters without being burnt up or track-soured.

"All work and no play" is an axium that is as true of horses as it is of humanity, and perennial training will break the heart, weaken the courage and turn the brain of any colt. The strain is entirely too severe. It is a question whether the system of training hard the year around is conducive of successive years of campaigning. How is it that the annual appearance of Goldsmith Maid, Lucy, Ethan Allen, Dexter and the many other old time trotters is not repeated now-a-days? They appeared for years in hard-fought battles, while, to-day there are very few trotters that have been three successive years on the turf. Of course the time made is much faster, but are the races more exciting or harder to win, we may ask? Are we to ever have a number of turf performers that continually train on for six or seven successive years? Surely we will not if owners of promising colts tell about their youngsters trotting fast quarters and halves over muddy tracks in the month of January. Therefore, by way of impressing it upon the minds of these gentlemen, we say: "Go slow, be careful and do not commence to give your colts any fast work until winter is over."

Are They Worth the Money Paid?

"Not a horse in the world is worth $100,000," is an expression you can hear almost any day. It is a thoughtless remark yet we have heard it more than one hundred times. Let us look into the matter and see for ourselves what a first-class stallion, with a reputation like Arion, Axtell or Anteeo, is really capable of earning.

Arion's owner can get at least twenty-five mares during the coming year at $2,000 per service, and this represents $50,000. As a four-year-old forty mares at this figure would not be over-taxing the horse, and if Mr. Forbes would open his book to this extent, that it could be filled within thirty days is reasonably certain. This would mean $80,000 more, or a total of $130,000 for the two seasons. As a five-year-old, the horse could be allowed to serve fifty mares, representing $100,000 in coin. Say that Arion was insured for $100,000 all this time, and allowing $8,000 a year for expenses and $1,000 for feed and attendance, if he lives to the age of five years and has three such seasons in the stud as we have named he will have paid for himself ($150,000) and leave a balance to Mr. Forbes' credit of $53,000, outside of the insurance money. Axtell, at the end of the stud season of 1891, had more than paid back the sum given for him —$105,000—according to his honorable owners. The sale of Anteeo yearlings and the sum the horse earned outside of this will doubtless make his present owner safe on the $65,000 paid for him, if he died to-morrow. The owner of the stallion St. Blaise, a thirteen-year-old horse for whom $100,000 were paid, is taking not a little risk with him, still Mr. Reed has had a chance to book over thirty outside mares to the horse at $2,500 per service, representing $75,000. If he is given twenty mares at Fairview and even dies the first of next April, his owner will, with the insurance on his life ($100,000) and what the yearlings will bring at auction in 1893, have at least doubled the money expended for the purchase, attendance and amount paid to insure him.

We have rather underestimated than inflated the sum such horses are capable of earning, therefore our readers will see that, with the insurance and opportunities for coining money for their owners possessed by any one of these horses, the risk assumed is very small, and as a business proposition a horse that will bring $100,000 or over at any kind of sale is nine times out of ten worth more than the price paid for him. Whether the purchaser of Bell Boy ever got his $51,000 back before the horse met his death in the flames we do not know, but that there is little chance to quit much loser on a gilt-edged stallion these days is certain. If Stamboul were to cease to live to-morrow Mr. Hobart has colts that will bring at auction more than the amount the great horse is said to have netted Mr. Rose—$50,000. Therefore, there are few safer investments possible than in a horse of recognized ability or in the business of breeding gilt-edged trotters or thoroughbreds. Mr. C. J. Hamlin, of Buffalo, said recently that he had averaged 20 per cent. per annum on the great amount he had invested in trotting horses, and few lines of business offer like monetary inducements. That Senator Stanford's Palo Alto ranch property has paid far better dividends than his railroad stock we feel quite sure. We believe that breeders of great horses like William Corbitt and Giulio Valensin would also find, on figuring up, that their dividends have surpassed their expectations and that the business of breeding first-class trotting stock is full of profit as well as pleasure

THERE were thirty-nine entries paid up on the fourth payment of Golden Gate Futurity of 1893.

The Spread of the Flaxtails.

The late sale of M. W. Hicks' stock will prove a blessing to the Flaxtail family and do more to substantiate the theories advanced by this deep thinker than anything could have happened. Heretofore the descendants of this family have been mated to but one great Hambletonian sire, and that was Sidney. All other breeders who owned sons and grandsons of Hambletonian were afraid to buy mares and breed their stallions to them. The knowledge that Mr. Valensin and Dr. Hicks has forced upon these timid bidders has awakened them to a realization of the fact that the Flaxtails as an outcross for stout-bred Hambletonians have not been equalled in the past seven years.

The numerous breeders that attended the sale are all anxious to have the names of their sires appear in the great table with as long a list as possible, and although Mr. Hicks did not receive the prices expected, it is hoped he will live many years to see the little collection of Flaxtail mares extolled by every owner of trotting horses in the United States. All of the Hicks brood mares and fillies are now scattered on many of our leading stock farms. They will be mated with such grandly bred sires as Eros, Eclectic, Silver Bow, Arthur Wilkes, Dexter Prince, Steinway, Charles Derby, Prince Red, Elector, Almont Patchen, Boodle, Billy Thornhill, Nutwood Wilkes and others, and their produce will startle the trotting world. They may not be as finely-finished as the types of horses we have been used to seeing, still they will combine all the qualities that are needed, added to that of being able to trot or pace fast without making any attempts to run.

Everyone who purchased colts and geldings for road purposes received their money's worth, and, after they have had the youngsters trained, they will hold them at exorbitant figures; for no nicer roadsters can be driven than they.

The outlook for the success of the Nebraska Futurity Stake is bright in the extreme. The Syracuse, Neb., track, over which the horses will contend for this princely stake, is declared to be the fastest mile course west of the Mississippi river, while the training-grounds cannot be excelled anywhere. Breeders should address D T. Hill, Secretary, Syracuse, Neb., without delay, and enter their horses in this and other stakes of the association.

"Comstock" and His Comparisons.

PLEASANTON, JANUARY 28, 1892, 10 A M., BEFORE THE NEW YORK SALE.

I read with interest in the Spirit of the Times, issue of January 23d, the article "Sidney as a Sire of Trotters," and it seems like "Electioneer as King" would have been a more appropriate heading. Mr. P. C. Kellogg, the able writer, refers in the commencement to a conversation I had in New York with two friends, Mr. R. Steel and himself, quoting me with great exactitude. He at the time asked me: "Will you send me your colts to sell this spring?" to this I said: "Yes, if you give my horse recognition according to his merits." He promised to do so. I took his word, sent the colts, and this article is the result. Had some green writer composed the here-referred-to article, it would have caused me to think of the fable in which the donkey, trying to fondle his master by mimicking the endearing ways of the favorite dog, only caused bruises for his master and knocks for himself; but the able Hark Comstock does not make such mistakes, he drives at an object and drives straight. If he wanted to draw a truthful parallel between Electioneer and Sidney without embellishment and excuses for either, why take Electioneer's start from when he arrived in California and not from when he served his first mare? Because during his career in the East he got no trotters? Why, even after that time, embellish Electioneer's tables with the work of seven years more than the comparison asks for? So as to get a long table on his side and a short one on the other! Why all these able remarks about the training-on qualities of Electioneer's get, when, as Hark Comstock says, they only show in the last part of his life? Why give him credit for facts happened in a period of seven years later than the comparison calls for? After all the juggling, after cutting off the commencement of Electioneer's stallion career and adding to it at the end what should not be there, nothing but blind enthusiasm can make the comparison stand. Let the world see and pronounce! To please Hark Comstock I will forgive Electioneer his first obscure years, and take him in hand when managed by the greatest of all breeders, Senator Leland Stanford. I want to state here that I am sorry to be compelled, in self-defense, to apparently detract from the greatness of Electioneer. I think he has completed the greatest career ever gone through by any stallion, but I also think that Sidney, age and time considered, has surpassed him. I must praise Electioneer for his greatness, and feel profound admiration for Senator Leland Stanford, for whom Californians owe so much in so many ways.

My tables, taken from Hark Comstock's, have no trade marks or stars to distinguish what should be in this comparative study and what should not be in it; they contain just what should be in and no more. Mr. Kellogg tries to deceive the public by stating that he makes a study of the production of the two stallions covering seven years only, and instead of that he gives a full list of Electioneer's performers, with a liliputian star attachment to the performers who should not be counted in the seven years following; thus the reader has a long list of SEVENTEEN two-year-olds, FOUR of which only should appear, against a short list of three on the Sidney side, followed by a blank space; the reader is impressed at the first glance, and unless he hunts up the star appendix, does not detect the deceit.

I have left out Lady H. in the above, as I think she is a pacer. Consider the difference in the ages of the best ten performers. Thus it appears that Electioneer has only one yearling with a record of 2:36½, against five of Sidney's, still Hark Comstock says: "It may readily be seen that with seven years before him Sidney may augment his present position so materially in regard to the yearling class as to leave Electioneer far in the rear." I suppose Electioneer is not far enough behind yet for Mr. Kellogg to see it, as when he wishes not to see he wears leather goggles. To prove my argument I have used Hark Comstock's tables; had it been his desire to eulogize Sidney instead of Electioneer, how he would make able mention of Adonis, 2:11½, Goldleaf, 2:11¼, Hummer, 2:18, Longworth, 2:19 and Thistle 2:19¼, and accidentally Fausta, 2:22¾ at one year old, a production that has not been duplicated ad nauseam yet. As Electioneer has only one pacer and a slow one he prefers dropping the pacers out of the question, still the general average of speed is in Sidney's favor, the training-on capacity the same way. Electioneer to a corresponding date, or to this date, has never produced a race horse three years old like Faustino, 2:14¾, nor such progressive training on as this fellow exhibits; he went in 2:35 as a yearling, 2:24½ as a two-year-old, 2:14¾ as a three-year-old. Nor did Electioneer produce any two-year-old up to 1884, who took a race record of 2:24½, was shipped from California through the Eastern circuit and never beaten. These facts have been well forgotten by Hark Comstock, for in his enthusiasm for Electioneer he had to keep himself up to fever heat, so as to continue his brilliant biography. Never a word was said to explain the difference between a horse backed by a millionaire and a great breeder, and one backed by a beginner and a man who could not do what he wanted to if he knew how. That was not the position taken by Hark Comstock, and still this article was written for my sole and at my expense.

I read once of a lawyer who got up to address the jury on behalf of his client, whom he disliked, got carried away by his feelings and thundered with all his eloquence against him. Does not this remind one of Hark Comstock's article in behalf of my sale? He commenced well by relating facts, but second thought made him think of the hundreds of colts Palo Alto sends to his 10 per cent. mill against the few sent by the Valensin Stock Farm, and he had to go back to his old allegiance. Still all his clients' interests should be as sacred to him as they are to the lawyer who has in charge the fortunes of his employers, be they rich or poor. I expect to suffer much from this imprudent letter of mine, for the wrath of Peter C. Kellogg is to be feared, his pen is a strong weapon in his able hands, not so is mine, but as I am right and as no one can rub out records, I will rely on them to be my defense for past events. For the future I trust in the prepotency of my horse to prove itself more and more in such splendor that its rays will go through the leather goggles of enmity or prejudice. Through this comparison of seven years, Sidney is on top. Will he continue so in after life? I hope so. Time will tell. G. VALENSIN.

Antevolo As a Sire.

Joseph Cairn Simpson always will have it that Antevolo must achieve greater fame as a sire than his brother, Anteeo. So far, it seems as if ill-luck has followed most of his progeny that have been trained; but from the young stallions that are now becoming old enough to handle we believe that the prediction of this gentleman will prove true. The stallion Marks L., which is advertised in another column, has shown his ability to trot in 2:30, although he has received no training. He is making his first season in the stud. and his owner intends to prepare him immediately after the first of July for the races. A glance at his pedigree shows that he has a perfect license to trot fast and trot all day. For his breeding and appearance, the service fee is remarkably low.

A Fair Question.

I see Senator Stanford announces in print that Electioneer stands ahead of all stallions in every respect. I think he forgets one important qualification—that is, the money-winning capacity of Electioneer and his get.

Yesterday's morning paper states that Sidney is the greatest living sire in California. Where do the stallions of Mr. Salisbury, Mr. Corbitt and others come in?

Would it be asking too much for all these great breeders to set opposite the get of their great sires the amount of money won by the representatives of their stallions, and demonstrate which stands the highest in this most important qualification? QUERY.

PROF. E. P. HEALD'S young bay stallion, Pilot Prince, by Dexter Prince, has entirely recovered from the accident that happened to him last fall, and will be sent to his owner's place near Napa in a few days. He will be a valuable addition to the horse interests of that beautiful valley.

THE STANDARD.

As Revised and Adopted by the American Trotting Register Association, May 19, 1891.

In order to define what constitututes a standard-bred horse, and to establish a breed of trotters and pacers on a more intelligent basis, the following rules are adopted to control admission to the records of pedigrees. When an animal meets the requirements of admission and is duly registered, it shall be accepted as a standard-bred animal.

FIRST.—Any trotting stallion that has a record of two minutes and thirty seconds (2:30), or pacing stallion that has a record of two minutes and twenty five seconds (2:25), or better, provided any of his get has a record of 2:35 (trotting, or 2:30 pacing, or better; or provided his sire or dam is already a standard animal.

SECOND.—Any mare or gelding that has a trotting record of 2:30, or pacing record of 2:25, or better.

THIRD.—Any horse that is the sire of two trotters with records of 2:30, or two pacers with records of 2:25, or one trotter with a record of 2:30, and one pacer with a record of 2:25, or better.

FOURTH.—Any horse that is the sire of one trotter with a record of 2:30, or one pacer with a record of 2:25, or better, provided he has either of the following additional qualifications: 1.—A trotting record of 2:35 or a pacing record of 2:30, or better. 2.—Is the sire of two other animals with trotting records of 2:35, or pacing records of 2:30, or one trotter with a record of 2:35, and one pacer with a record of 2:30, or better. 3.—Has a sire or dam that is already a standard animal.

FIFTH.—Any mare that has produced a trotter with a record of 2:30, or a pacer with a record of 2:25 or better.

SIXTH.—The progeny of a standard horse when out of a standard mare.

SEVENTH.—The female progeny of a standard horse when out of a mare by a standard horse.

EIGHTH.—The female progeny of a standard horse when out of a mare whose dam is a standard mare.

NINTH.—Any mare that has a trotting record of 2:35, or a pacing record of 2:30, or better, whose sire or dam is a standard animal.

Vineland Stock Farm.

The simple and comprehensive advertisement of this famous farm, famous for the number of young stallions and fine broodmares there, as well as for being the late home of the great Whippleton, whose name will live as long as trotters are handled, appears this week. Mr. Loeber has proven that his judgment in selecting stallions and broodmares is correct, and proved his assertions regarding their worth by showing that they were not over-estimated. He has Alcona 730 (sire of three in the list, and grandsire of three others that are race horses); Grandissimo, 2:27¾, a very promising son of Le Grande, one of the best-bred Almont sires that ever left Kentucky; Caducas, a grandly-formed and exceedingly well-bred young stallion, and Alconeer (full brother to Alcona Jr., 2:24, sire of Silas Skinner, 2:17), by Alcona. Mr. Loeber has reserved for a private stallion the stylish son of Whippleton which he calls King Whippleton. His long list of fine mares, colts and fillies is one that every horseman would delight to select from were he to see the individuals. The names of a few that have had their produce handled will soon appear in the great broodmare table, and a look at their colts will prove all that is claimed for them. They are large, well-formed, stylish, solid colors, beautifully gaited, speedy, game and perfect in disposition. For roadsters they are valuable, even if they are never given track-work, for which they are in every way adapted.

Happy St. Louisans.

That there will be some grand racing at St. Louis during the coming spring and summer meetings is now certain. The St. Louis people are more than pleased at the outlook, and the large number of entries from this coast attests more than any words the value of the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN as an advertising medium, for this paper was the only one the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association advertised in on this coast. Below will be found a telegram we received from Mr. Bellairs, the able and wide-awake Secretary of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association, which speaks volumes:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., January 25, 1892.

EDITOR BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—For the St. Louis meeting, eighteen stakes closed with 1,464 entries, an average of over 81; last year, average, 59. Details: Inaugural, 95; Directors', 92; Memorial 90; Street Railway, 96; Merchants', 43; Real Estate, 92; Hotel, 90; Bankers', 76; Jockey Club Handicap, 87; Cyclone, 99; Missouri, 69; Brewing Association, 78; Mississippi, 60; Gasconade, 88; Debutante, 74; Meramec, 61; Osage, 105; Kindergarten, 69. Among the California owners entering horses are Baldwin, Winters, Shippee, Dickey, Harmon, Herzog, F. L. Whitmore, Harrison and Flitner. Oregon Eclipse is also entered. It is the highest all-round class ever entered here.

BELLAIRS.

Arthur Wilkes.

There are but few sons of Guy Wilkes, 2:15½ in the stud in California outside the San Mateo Stock Farm that have attracted more attention than the one above mentioned. He is a typical Guy Wilkes in color, form, disposition and gait, and, like his sire, he transmits all these qualities to his progeny. He has never been bred to but a few mares, consequently he has the name of being the surest foal-getter in Butte county, and his colts are all strong and vigorous trotters. No pacers are to be found among them. His oldest colt, Wayland W., is too well known to need any meed of praise; suffice it to say, that "money will not buy him" from his present owners; and, if all goes well this year, he will make a low record for himself and prove conclusively that he is a race horse. The most fashionable family to-day in the Eastern States is the Wilkes family, and when it is backed up by the good, stout blood of American Star 14, it is esteemed as most precious to have and a privilege to breed to. Mr. McIntosh has a number of royally-bred colts and fillies at his new place near Chico. He also has the finest French coach stallion in that portion of the State. Like all good horsemen, he indulges his taste for Durham cattle, and has some splendid young bulls and heifers by his Kirklevington prize bull, which are a credit to his judgment and will win prizes wherever exhibited.

Nashville Nuggets.

The horsemen who will go "'way down to Nashville," this year with their strings of horses to compete for the "nuggets" that are offered by the Cumberland Fair and Racing Association will not only be well treated and have a fine time, but they will also return with a share of the money and have lower records for their trotters than they ever had before, because the track has proved itself to be the greatest and the fastest in the trotting world. All horsemen who returned to California are unanimous in the praise of this battle ground for turf honors and are going to be there this year.

Election.

This elegantly-bred son of Electioneer should have had a record last fall, but was not taken in hand early enough in the season. This year, however, it is his owner's intention to have him get a low mark—one he need not be ashamed of. Every horseman who has seen Election pronounces him a perfect type of his sire, and his progeny, from all classes of mares, are spoken of highly by their owners, as well as others who are disinterested, but willing to give credit where it is due. His breeding, on his dam's side, is worthy of looking into. His dam, Lizzie H., is by Hambletonian 725, second dam, Lizzie Harris (dam of Lancelot, a very promising sire), by Comus, 2:35), own brother to Iowa Chief), by Green's Bashaw (sire of seventeen in the 2:30 list), by Vernol's Black Hawk, out of Belle, daughter of the Kent mare (dam of Hambletonian 10); third dam by Arnold Harris, he by Whalebone, out of the famous broodmare Sportsmistress by American Eclipse, etc. The high finish, even conformation, well-set, strong limbs and perfect head and neck can easily be traced to such a grand foundation, while to his immortal sire, Electioneer, no further praise can be added.

Foals Reported.

The above are from Palo Alto Farm.

Name Claimed.

Please allow me the name RIVAL, for my bay filly, foaled 18th inst., sired by Dawn, 2:18¾, by Nutwood, 2:18¾, first dam, Freena Froman, by Adventure; second dam Bluegrass, by Hambletonian 10. BEN E. HARRIS.

J. A. MCDONALD, of San Rafael, has sold the Mambrino Wilkes colt, Chaldean, to Monroe Salisbury. This gentleman has also leased the trotting qualities of Almonition, the wonderful Alcona colt that Thomas Murphy has had at Petaluma for the past six months. Too much credit cannot be given to this painstaking trainer for the manner in which he has brought this young trotter out. When he first took hold of him he could not trot in four minutes, but it was not long before he showed that an artist was behind him, and gradually trotted faster and faster, until to-day he is considered one of the most promising of trotters. Thomas Murphy was for years with Orrin A. Hickok, and is considered by that well-known knight of the sulky one the best men he knows to work and condition horses. Before engaging with Mr. Hickok he achieved quite a reputation as a horseman in New York State.

The Souther Farm rasp is just pushing itself into popularity and rubbing out many old ideas and bringing new ones to view. Every stock farm, livery stable, horsamen and horseshoer should have one. A trial will convince the most skeptical that it is all that is claimed for it.

ATTENTION is called to the advertisement of the Two-Minute Stock Farm in this issue. The offering of mares, colts and fillies presented is worthy of the attention of all breeders and horsemen.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

To C. P. C., Tacoma: Capri was bred and foaled the property of Daniel Cook at his breeding farm in Contra Costa County, Cal. He is now in Whatcom, Whatcom County, Wash., the property of A. J. Zane. As for James Lick or Homer, I know nothing of them.—A. J. Zane, New Whatcom, Wash.

G., Sacramento, Cal.—Will you furnish in your next issue the breeding of the dam of Billy Hayward, also his record, and what representatives he has in the 2:30 list. Answer.—Grey Lize (Old Peanuts), by Morse Horse, dam untraced. Billy Hayward's number is 189, his record 2:31¼. His representatives are Alonzo Hayward, 2:30; Poscora Hayward, 2:23½; Setting Sun, 2:29¼, all trotters.

H. K., Riverside, Cal.—Give the full list of Robert McGregor's get in the 2:30 list, and the get of his sons and daughters, also the breeding of Little Arthur, said to be by Glencoe, in full. Answer—The Year Book for 1891 has not reached this city yet. Little Arthur was foaled in 1851, was by imp. Glencoe, dam Blue Bonnet, by imp. Hedgeford, second dam Grey Fanny, by Bertrand, third dam by imp. Buzzard, etc.

J. B., Anaconda, Mont.—Give breeding of Nancy Harris, when foaled, breeder and any other information you may have about this mare, in order to settle a dispute. Answer—On page 219, volume 5, of Bruce's Stud Book, appears the breeding of Nancy Harris. She was foaled in 1880, sired by Brigand, her first dam Cricket, by Virginian, second dam Flora, by imp. Ambassador, etc., and while the breeder is not given, she was owned by John A. Logan Jr., of Youngstown, Ohio.

C. H. B. L., Santa Rosa, Cal.—Is not the appellation thoroughbred confined to running horses? I noticed the term thoroughbred used with reference to Clydesdale mares advertised in a column of your paper. Please explain. Answer—The term thoroughbred should never be used except in speaking of running horses with five uncontaminated crosses of thorough blood. The advertisement should have read "pure blood" in speaking of Clydesdales.

P. C. B., Grass Valley, Cal.—Kindly give pedigree of Abdallah Mambrino 3715, Edwin Forrest 49, Elmo 891. Answer.—Abdallah Mambrino 3715, sired by Almont 34, dam Lyd (dam of Lady Majolica, 2:25), by Brown Chief 1445; grandam Fanny (dam of Dolly), by Ben Franklin, son of Hozrack, etc. Edwin Forrest 49, by Young Bay Kentucky Hunter; dam Dolly by Highlander (Watkins), etc. Elmo 891, by Mohawk 604, dam said to be by Sir Richard.

F. E. S., Albany, Or.—Please state through your paper if Iodine did not run nine-sixteenths of a mile in 54¼ seconds. I see the Chicago Horseman has got Tulla Blackburn credited with the fastest on record, 53 seconds. Does not this record belong to the Golden State? 2. Did not Jim Miller run a quarter in 21¼ seconds, also Bob Wade? Answer—1. Iodine ran nine-sixteenths of a mile, 119 pounds up, in 54¼ seconds at Fresno Fair in October last, and the record belongs to this State most assuredly. 2. Jim Miller's time was 21¼ seconds, made at Deer Lodge, Mont., August 16, 1888. We do not know whether Bob Wade ever did such work or not.

E. J. O., Oakland, Cal—Will you please give in the columns of your valuable paper the standard rules by and under which a horse is eligible to registration; also a description of the famous running horse, Ten Broeck, size, color, etc? Answer—See rules in another column. Ten Broeck was about sixteen hands high, bay in color, with good, strong legs, clean-cut head, neck of good length, well-rounded barrel: in fact, a horse of great substance, of long body, extremely racy-looking and every inch a turf monarch. He was by Phaeton out of Fanny Holton, by Lexington, and was foaled in 1872. Frank B. Harper, Midway, Ky., owned the horse when he died not long ago.

P. S., San Francisco—1. Please give me the pedigree of Gen. McClellan Jr. 2. Is he standard-bred? 3. Give pedigree of the late Whipple's Hambletonian, and if standard? 4. Is a mare by Gen. McClellan Jr. out of a road mare by Whipple's Hambletonian standard bred? Answer—1. By General McClellan 144, dam by George M. Patchen Jr. 31 2. He is standard and eligible to registration, under rule 4 of the standard. At the time of foaling he was not standard, but the work of his produce made him so. He is not really "standard-bred," we believe. 3. By Guy Miller (son of Hambletonian 10), dam Martha Washington, by Washington 332. He was made standard by his produce, and his register number was 725. 4. She is.

L. P. S., Chicago, Ill.—I wish to ask for the pedigree of the horse now in California called Applause; also all of his performances, and who he was bred by, and what the opinion of him is in California. I also wish to ask for information regarding Alice N. and her performances, and where she was bred, if she has ever run and how many colts and daughters she has ever had. Answer—Applause is by Three Cheers out of Alice N. by Norfolk; second dam, Kitten, by imp Eclipse; third dam, Pussy, by Diophantus; fourth dam, Agapemone, by Bay Middleton, etc. Applause was foaled in 1884. As a two-year-old he did not start as far as we can find out; at three he started seven times, but did not win, but was second to Kenny, beating Triboulet, Lizzie Dunbar and other good ones; also second to Ninena, beating Moonlight and four others, unplaced in other races. At four years Applause started seven times and won once—the Alameda stakes, defeating Not Idle, Daisy D. and four others, was third three times, unplaced in six races. At five years won six races out of sixteen starts, was second four times and twice third. At seven years he won several races, but as we have not the records at hand now [the horse was on the Montana circuit], we cannot say how many races he won or lost. Applause is considered a very good horse when in proper racing trim, but last season he was campaigned very hard. It takes a very fair-class animal to beat him up to a mile and a sixteenth when he is right. Alice N., Applause's dam, foaled 1880, is royally bred, but must have been retired to the stud early, as she was only four years old when Applause was foaled. She is also the dam of Cheerful, and in 1886-88 foaled fillies by Joe Hooker. Write to Theodore Winters, Reno, Nev., regarding the mare since 1888.

FIXTURES FOR THE FUTURE.

May 30—Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, second annual out-door championship meeting at the O. A. C. grounds.

SUMMARY.

In a couple of weeks the out-door season of 1892 will open up and it is hoped that the athletes will not be as backward as they were during the season that has just ended. So far we have had but little rain and the ground will probably be in first-class condition around Washington's Birthday. There will be several new men in the field on May 30th, and the old-timers cannot afford to lose time if they have any desire to see their names still remain on the championship list. The cricketers will soon commence practice, and during the coming season the Pacific Club will make a big fight for the championship. The other clubs from across the bay will also be strongly represented in the field and the chances are that some genuine playing will be witnessed as soon as practice is renewed. The out-look for the oarsmen is not as encouraging as it might be, but if some of the Eastern and foreign professional oarsmen should visit California before the spring is over, the local men may take courage and help to boom aquatic sport in this city and across the bay. The wheelmen are already preparing for the opening of their season and the boys across the bay are forming into line as fast as they can so that when the racing season arrives the Bay City Wheelmen, of this city, will have a very dangerous opponent in the Alameda Bicycle and Athletic Club. Handball, football and lawn tennis are the only out-door games practiced at the present time, and the lovers of these pastimes are singularly fortunate in having such splendid weather in which to enjoy themselves. A summary of the O. A. C. wrestling tournament is given below.

THE AMATEUR ATHLETES, WHEELMEN, OARSMEN, CRICKETERS, ETC.

Percy O'Brien, of the U. A. C., is a very promising young walker and he is liable to win a couple of medals on Decoration Day.

The Stanford University Tennis Club is trying to arrange an intercollegiate tournament.

The U. A. C. football team has been practicing very regularly of late, and before the season is out the members are likely to give a good account of themselves.

Captain E. Williams, of the American Bicycle Club, has been too busy lately attending to his duties in the Post-office to call a run of his club. Now that the holidays are over he will have more spare time and Sig. B. Morse, C. U. Brewster and other sleepy members will soon be aroused from their slumbers by the shrill toot of their captain's horn.

President George P. Wetmore and his fellow officers are at present engaged in compiling a very useful hand-book for use of the members of the Bay City Wheelmen. The volume will contain a history of the club, its constitution and by-laws, the names of the members, several photographs taken by the club's photographer, together with other valuable information.

Whist and billiard tournaments, for members only, are now going on in the clubhouse of the B. C. W., and other games are being planned for the future. The membership roll is growing very lengthy and the officers of the club are thinking about making further improvements for the comfort of the members. The parlor is splendidly furnished with the latest style of furniture, and several easy chairs are in readiness for the use of tired riders, billiard or whist players. The library is stocked with a fine collection of books, and on the tables may be found all the leading papers and magazines. The billiard and card-rooms on the first floor are also comfortably fitted-up and on the whole the Bay City boys may congratulate themselves on having such a cosy home.

The directors of the Olympic Club have decided that they will give no more games on holidays, for the reason that too many counter attractions prevent the sport-loving public from attending. Previous to the championship games, which will be held on May 30th, a handicap field day will be given on a Saturday afternoon.

Walter A. Scott has resigned as field captain of the O. A. C., and John Elliott has been appointed to fill the vacancy. A more popular as well as enthusiastic athlete could not have been chosen.

The South End Rowing Club will get a benefit at the Alcazar Theatre, on the evening of February 24th.

A general meeting of the Alpine Amateur Athletic Club will be held on Monday evening, February 8th, at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium of the Verwart Verien on O'Farrell street. Officers will be elected and arrangements made for the holding of field games and indoor exhibitions in the near future. After the meeting an exhibition will be given by the members and the principal event will be a scientific boxing match between W. H. Dooley and Hon. ["Spider"] Gallagher.

The cricket season will open up about March 1st.

Most of the athletes have resumed training at the O. A. C. grounds and it looks as if the coming field-days will attract large entry lists.

A very successful "Ladies Night" exhibition was given by the Acme Athletic Club of Oakland on Thursday evening last. The attendance was large and very select and many of Oakland's fair daughters graced the athletes with their presence. The entertainment was held in the gymnasium and this, as well as the parlors and other club rooms, were tastefully decorated for the occasion. Some very clever work was done on the horizontal and parallel bars by the turning members of the club and the performers were loudly applauded for the finished manner in which they went through with their feats. G. W. Andrews, the young wrestler who recently won the light-weight championship at the Olympic Club tournament, wrestled two lively bouts with Connie Lutgen of the O. A. C., each man winning a fall. Champion Jack Kitchen and his club mate, Willis Sharp, boxed three rounds and their quick and scientific sparring brought down the house. There was a fine wrestling exhibition between Genie Van Court and William Hallet and the two Knights of the mat were honored with much applause from the ladies. Dewitt Van Court and J. S. Fox followed in a glove contest which was both scientific and amusing. The Acme Mandolin Club were present and performed several very delightful pieces during the evening. They were encored after each piece. A quartette composed of members of the club rendered several popular selections and their singing was a credit to the club. A tenor solo, a soprano solo, selections on the piano by Miss Gussie Fuegel and club swinging were also on the programme, and on the whole the exhibition was well worth witnessing. The officers of the club deserve much credit for the excellent manner in which they carried out all the arrangements. During an intermission the medals which were won at the Thanksgiving Day out-door tournament of the club were distributed to the differ-winners who were well pleased with the handsome and costly prizes.

THE WRESTLING TOURNAMENT

The annual wrestling tournament to decide the championships of the Pacific Coast began in the gymnasium of the Olympic Club on Thursday evening, January 14th, and ended the following Saturday night. On the first night of the tournament at least 1,200 ladies and gentlemen were present, and judging from the applause bestowed on the knights of the mat, wrestling is a very popular branch of athletics. The arrangements were perfect and the officers performed their duties in a very satisfactory manner. The following bouts were decided on the first evening: W. T. Haberly, O. A. C, 158 lbs., defeated G. W. Mertes, S. F. A. C., 145½ lbs.; time, 6:50. H. B. Graham, O. A. C., 158½ lbs., drew a bye with Mertes and also defeated the S. F. A. C. man in 2:10. Gus Ungerman, of the Verein Eintracht, 148 lbs., was defeated by Graham, O. A. C.; time, 12 minutes. C. E. Cutter and R. C. Jones, both O. A. C. juveniles, met and the latter won a fall in 15:20 C. Son and E. P. Kennedy, also Juvenile wrestlers, and the bout was won by Kennedy in 16 minutes. Gus Ungermann defeated C. Addington of the Acme Club in 5:50. C. E. Wilson and S. Vincini both of the O. A. C. tried conclusions but neither man could secure a fall and another bout was ordered. Again the limit was reached before a fall could be gained by either athlete, and the men were ordered to meet again the following night. W. Hawks and John McCullough, both O. A. C. men wrestled, and the victory was won by the latter after two bouts had been wrestled. Time 8:25. E. B. Partridge and E. Bedfield of the O. A. C. juvenile class exhausted the limit of 15 minutes without either man gaining a fall.

The attendance on the second evening was not as large as on the previous one but those who did attend were just as interested in the proceedings. The first bout was between S. Vincini and C. E. Wilson. The decision was given in favor of Wilson. Chas. Andrews of the Acme Club and S. Vincini, O. A. C. wrestled two bouts without either man securing a fall but the referee awarded the victory to the former, he having done the best work. The heavy weights, Graham and Harberly, appeared on the mat four times but as they were so evenly matched the bouts were finished without either man being thrown.

E. Bedfeld and E. B. Partridge met in the second preliminary bout and gained a fall. The referee decided in favor of Partridge. C. Krelling defeated Bedfeld in three minutes.

Eckhardt, O. A. C. and his club mate, C. E. Cutter, wrestled and the former secured a fall in 13: 35. Jones and Eckhard met for the final bouts, but neither won a fall within the limited time.

There was an increased attendance on the third and last evening, and as the championship for each class was to be decided on this night, the interest in the proceedings was greater than on the two previous nights.

In the feather weight contests R. C. Jones won first and George E. Eckhart second.

In the light weights Charles Andrews won first and C. E. Wilson second.

H. B. Graham and W. T. Haberly wrestled for the first and second prizes of the heavy and middle-weight classes. Haberly won.

The tournament was not brought to a close until midnight, but so interesting were the bouts that scarcely fifty people left the hall before the last decision was given.

From the tabulated pedigree appended, it will be seen that the breeding is of the best kind.

SANTA CRUZ has a remarkable pedigree, two Bonnie Scotland and three Lexington crosses. Her sire stands very high in the list of successful sires, and the sire of her dam, Three Cheers, is the sire of Acclaim, Almont, Cheerful, Applause and other good racehorses, and her grandam, Lady Amanda, one of the very fastest from half a mile to two miles, and she is a half-sister to Malcolm, Regent, Ontario et al., and a full sister to Lady Middleton.

These mares are at Gov. Stanford's Vina Ranch, have been stinted to Whips, and the prospective foals are reserved, and the purchaser will be required to take proper care of them and permit them to suck until five months old, when they will be taken away.

DESCRIPTION.

BOODLE is a magnificently formed stallion; in color, he is a beautiful seal brown; he stands 15.3 hands and weighs 1,100 pounds. He has splendid limbs, a kind disposition, and is, in fact, a perfect horse in every respect. His pedigree needs no words of praise, for no better-bred stallion stands for public service in California to-day. He is only six years of age, and has not been bred to many mares, yet all of his progeny show that they are destined to be great performers. BOODLE was never handled for speed until very late last year, and many who saw him get his record believe he will trot below 2:20 this year.

TERMS, $50 FOR THE SEASON,

RECORD, 2:28.

DESCRIPTION AND PEDIGREE.

Abdol was foaled in 1883, bred by John Watson, Oakland, and is one of the finest sons of the Grand Moor. He is a handsome black in color, stands 16 hands high, and weighs 1,200 pounds. He is a horse of splendid proportions, exquisite style and perfect trotting action. He is remarkably level-headed, intelligent and of kind disposition, and possesses the qualities of speed and gameness to a remarkable degree. His record is no mark of his speed. When it was made it was the intention to keep him in the 2:30 class. He has shown in his work last quarters in 31 seconds—a 2:16 gait—and can get away equally fast.

RAPID TRANSIT is a fine-looking bay horse, stands 15½ hands high. He is by DIRECTOR 1989, dam Lida W., record 2:18¼, dam of Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20½ at 2 years. (See above tabulated pedigree.) He is a horse of splendid individuality and excellent blood lines.

LONG BRANCH.

Limited to Fifteen outside mares at $50 for the season.

LONG BRANCH is a magnificent bay horse, 15¾ hands high, sired by Antevolo, 4-year-old record 2:19½ (brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, sire of seven with records from 2:17¾ to 2:30), by ELECTIONEER 125 (sire of 100 trotters with records from 2:08¼ to 2:30, 22 of which have records better than 2:20), dam Vola (dam of Maud C., 2:19), by Steinway, 3-year-old record 2:25¾ (sire of seven with records from 2:10 to 2:28¼, including the dam of Maud C., 2:19, and Bourbon Russell, 2:30), second dam Fanny Malone (grandam of Charles Derby, record 2:20, and Maud C., record 2:19).

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD.

Limited to Fifty outside mares at $50 for the season.

CALIFORNIA NUTWOOD is a handsome chestnut horse, stands sixteen hands one and one-half inches high, and is the sire of Maud C., 2:19, Annie C., 2:25, Albert H., 2:27¾, and several others with trials from 2:37 to 2:50. He is by the greatest living sire, Nutwood 600, record 2:18¼ (sire of 77 with records from 2:11½ to 2:30; 17 from 2:11½ to 2:20, and half-brother to Maud S., 2:08¾, the fastest trotter in the world on a regulation track); dam by Geo. M. Patchen Jr. 31, record 2:27 (sire of ten with records from 2:18 to 2:30; the best son of Geo. M. Patchen, record 2:23½, made in 1860; the fastest and gamest representative of the Clay family). This pedigree demonstrates that California Nutwood represents the best strains of Hambletonian and Clay blood, a combination that cannot fail to produce fast and game race horses as well as great broodmares. He is a horse of splendid conformation, stylish, level-headed, pure-gaited, speedy, game and intelligent, qualities that he transmits to all of his get. He gets bays and chestnuts from all kinds of mares. He is just the kind of a horse that a poor man can make no mistake in breeding a good mare to, as he will get a horse large enough for work on the ranch or road, besides a chance of producing a very fast and valuable race horse.

NOTICE.

The great blood lines represented in the four above stallions, GUY WILKES, NUTWOOD, ELECTIONEER and DIRECTOR, are, as all horsemen will agree, the best race horse strains the greatest producers of extreme speed and gameness to be found in the trotting families. NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT are the two greatest representatives of developed race-horse speed there are to be found in the stud to date. This is a broad assertion, but it can be demonstrated by anyone who will take the trouble to look it up. Their sires, Guy Wilkes, 2:15¼, and Director, 2:17, were two of the fastest and most consistent race horses on the turf in their day, and about as safe horses as a man ever placed his money on, for they would gamely fight a race out to the bitter end, almost invariably scoring a victory. The dam of NUTWOOD WILKES and RAPID TRANSIT is Lida W., record 2:18¼, made after raising five colts, the last one last spring, her record being made on the 20th of October last. She is one of the fastest daughters of the great Nutwood 600, 2:18¼, who, besides being a great and game race horse himself, is the greatest living sire. Among the produce of his daughters are to be found Arion, the phenomenon, two-year-old record 2:10¾, and nineteen others from 2:18¼ to 2:30.

Mares not proving in foal may be returned the following season free of service fee. Parties desiring the services of any of the above horses must send the mare or ten per cent of the service money with the engagement. Excellent pasturage at $5 per month, and when the condition of the animal requires it, hay or grain or both will be fed at $10 per month. The best of care will be taken of mares, but no liability will be assumed for accidents or escapes. Mares may be shipped direct to me at Irvington, Alameda Co., Cal., via Broad Gauge Railroad.

All bills are due at time of service, but must be paid by August 1st. No stock will be allowed to leave the place until all bills are settled. Season from February 1st to August 1st, 1892.

Delwin has the same blood lines as the handsome grandson of The Moor, Stamboul, 2:11; he has two crosses of American Star 14, also of Clay, one of Hambletonian 10, sire of the dam of Stamboul, 2:11; one to Mambrino Chief, sire of the dam of Director, 2:17, and two of the great Pilot Jr., sire of the dam of Nutwood, 2:18¾; combining altogether the same blood lines that lay in the grandest stallions, living or dead Arion, 2:10¾, Stamboul, 2:11; also the first yearling to beat 2:30, and who trotted the fastest last quarter in that mile than was ever trotted by any yearling, 34 seconds Freedom, 2:29¼.

Del Sur, 2:24, sire of Don Tomas, 2:20, and Cousin Joe, 2:20¼, being a full brother to the dam of Sable Wilkes, 2:18, sire of Freedom, 2:29¾, and two others better than 2:28. Delwin's colts all show the trot out of any kind of mares.

DESCRIPTION AND TERMS.

Not only is Memo full brother to Frou-Frou, the champion yearling trotter in the world, but he is also one of the very best-bred young stallions in service, having three crosses of Rysdyk's Hambletonian, one of Harry Clay, sire of Green Mountain Maid (dam of Electioneer, etc., and Long Island Black Hawk. Through Flaxtail he traces to Canadian Pilot (sire of Pilot Jr. 12), through Bull Pup, sire of Rowdy Boy, 2:13¾, and two others. Sidney, Memo's sire, is universally known and recognized as the best young sire in the world, as a producer of extreme speed at an early age. The average speed of his progeny is lower than that of any of the get of the twelve leading stallions of America.

Memo trotted in public in his two-year-old form, obtaining a record of 2:49, though he was close to Grandee in a race on the Bay District Track, the second heat of which was made in 2:31½, the first in 2:32. He exhibited phenomenal speed when three years old, for on the Oakland track he was timed a mile in 2:20¼, and frequently trotted quarters in from 32 to 34 seconds.

He is sixteen hands high, and of powerful build throughout. His color is a glossy black, with both forefeet white. His disposition is all that could be desired, and his action superb. He is a sure foal getter, only one mare being reported not in foal during his last season.

Terms—$100, with usual return privileges, for a limited number of mares. Season to close JUNE 15th, when he will be prepared for track purposes.

Good pasturage at reasonable rates. No responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes. For further particulars, address

THE BEST-BRED AND FINEST-LOOKING WILKES STALLION IN THE STATE.

No. 8707. BILLY THORNHILL Rec. 2:24 1-2

By BEVERLY WILKES, Brother of PROSPECT MAID, 2:23½, WALSINGHAM, 2:19¾, GEORGIA WILKES, sire of VALENTINE, 2:18½, BASBLEN WILKES, 2:24½, BILLY WILKES, 2:29½, BESSIE WILKES, 2:31½.

Dam EMILY, Dam of FORTUNA, 2:21¼, BILLY THORNHILL, 2:24½, COL. YOUNG, 2:30.

Second dam SUE STOUT,

Third dam LEER MARE, Dam of JIM IRVING, 2:23, and YOUNG JIM, sire of BUTTERFLY, 2:19¾, GARNETT, 2:19, and twelve other performers.

By GEORGE WILKES, Sire of GUY WILKES, 2:15¼, HARRY WILKES, 2:13½, and seventy-four others in the 2:30 list, and seventy-five sires of 249 trotters.

By GEORGE WILKES, 2:22, Sire of Seventy-five producing sons and forty-six producing daughters.

By SURPLUS (son of ASHLAND), Brother to LADY LIGHTFOOT, dam of LADY THORN, 2:18¼.

By LEER'S KING WILLIAM, Son of HOWARD'S ST. CHARLES.

BEVERLY WILKES was out of Neilson, by Mambrino Pilot, 2:27½ (sire of Hannis, 2:17¾, and others), out of Juliett, by Pilot Jr. 12; second dam by Webster, son of Medoc; third dam by Blackburn's Whip. Surplus was out of a daughter of Eureka, by Long Island Black Hawk. Ashland was out of Utilla, by imp. Margrave; second dam Too Soon, by Sir Leslie, etc.

The above extended pedigree needs no further comment. That it is bristling with the names of some of the greatest trotters, as well as most prepotent sires, none will deny, but a description of the representative that has such a royal lineage is much more difficult to give. In color he is a deep mahogany bay, no white markings; he stands 15.2½ hands, and weighs 1,100 pounds. He represents the highest type of a trotting horse. He has a faultless head and neck, well-sloped shoulders, magnificent back and loins, remarkably well-built across the coupling, well-rounded barrel, muscular arms and thighs, well shaped hocks and good joints, fetlocks strong and elastic, the best of feet, and he stands with them well placed under him. He is a perfect line trotter, and can trot in 2:40 without boots of any kind. His oldest colt will enter the 2:20 list. He is a sure foal-getter, and all of his progeny are bays or browns, without white, and they inherit his excellent disposition and intelligence to a remarkable degree.

He will make the season of 1892, commencing February 1st, at Milpitas, Santa Clara Co., Cal.

TERMS, $75 WITH USUAL RETURN PRIVILEGE.

The best of care taken of mares, but no responsibility assumed for accidents or escapes.

TERMS AND DESCRIPTION.

SILVER BOW is a handsome bay, no white; stands 15.3; weighs 1,150 pounds; was foaled June 26, 1887. A glance at his pedigree will show that he is bred in the purple and inbred to Hambletonian 10. He will make the season of 1892 at our farm, one and a half miles from Milpitas, on the Oakland road. Season from February 1st to June 1st, at which time all bills are due and payable in United States gold coin. Limited to fifteen outside mares.

SERVICE FEE, $150 for the season. Last season we did not give him a fair show; he served thirty nine mares and did service up to June, and was compelled to start in races in July against the best horses in Montana, being very short of last work. At Butte, Montana, he won the $2,000 purse, Free For All, defeating Faris, 2:18¾, Steve Whipple, 2:23, Ida D., 2:25, and Frank M., 2:18. Faust winning the first heat in 2:20, Silver Bow the second in 2:22¼, Frank M. the third in 2:22, and Silver Bow the fourth and fifth in 2:24¼ and 2:24¼. He won nine races in all last season, and had it not been that he was troubled badly with a tender mouth, he would not have lost a single race.

With his speed he will make a wonderful record the first time he starts on a good track and in perfect condition. His oldest colts are yearlings, and are very promising animals. We have one of his colts foaled May 23, 1891, which is a wonder, showing a burst of speed and perfect trotting action surpassing anything I have ever seen except in a carefully trained colt. I have also three others by SILVER BOW which are marvels of beauty and speed. We have reserved one hundred and fifty acres for pasturage for mares, and give the best of feed at $5 per month and the most careful attention, but no responsibility for accidents or escapes. By THORNDALE, 2:24½, Sire of EDWIN THORNE, 2:16¾, DAISYDALE, 2:19¾, and two others in 2:30 list, by ALEXANDER'S ABDALLAH, sire of GOLDSMITH MAID, 2:14, ALMONT, etc., out of DOLLY, dam of DIRECTOR, 2:17, ONWARD, 2:25½, THORNDALE, 2:24½, and CZARINA, 2:21, by MAMBRINO CHIEF.

Second dam BRIDESMAID, Dam of
THORNDALE MAID, 2:30, and TRIXIE, (trial,) 2:25½.

By RYSDYK'S HAMBLETONIAN, Sire of

WILKESDALE is a seal brown, sixteen hands high; bred at Highlawn Farm, Mass. He very closely resembles his sire, Alcantara, four year old record 2:23 (trial 2:17), and a study of his pedigree will convince anyone that if there be anything in inheritance, we may expect extreme speed from his produce. His sire, Alcantara, at fifteen years old has forty-seven in the 2:30 list, and has five producing sons, two of whom have sired two-year-olds that entered the 2:30 list this year. His full brother, Alcyone, died when only ten years old, yet he is the sire of twenty-five in the 2:30 list, among them being McKinney 2:12¾, fastest record for a four year-old stallion. Another half-brother, out of Alma Mater, is the sire of Strong Boy 2:12, the fastest recorded four-year-old trotting or pacing stallion. Wilkesdale's dam is herself a trotter, record 2:30, and is in the list of great broodmares, being the dam of Miss Alice 2:17¾, who was shown trials the past season in 2:14; Thornton, 2:25½, and Wilkesdale 2:29, all sired by Alcantara. Thorndale 2:24½, the sire of his dam, is also the sire of Sue, the dam of Lucifer 2:12¼, one of the sensational trotting stallions of the past season.

ALMA MATER, his grandam on his sire's side and Dolly, the dam of Director 2:17, etc.) on his dam's side, are among the few of the great producing dams. Wilkesdale was taken out of the paddock the 1st of October last, stiff and in poor condition for trotting, yet in less than two months he gained a record of 2:29 in third heat, trotting the second heat in 2:29¼. After his stud season closes he will again be placed in training, and under favorable circumstances will no doubt trot under 2:20.

TERMS: He will make the season of 1892 at Wolf's stable in Stockton, Cal., at $75, for the season, from February 1st to July 1st, with usual return privileges for mares that fail to get in foal this season.

Record 2:15.

Will make the season at Oakland Race Track beginning February 1st. But a limited number of mares will be accepted, in order that he may be prepared for the great contests of the year. He reduced his record, 14¼ seconds, in nineteen days last fall, and as he is perfectly sound there is every assurance that he will be able to compete with the fastest, especially at two-mile heats.

DESCRIPTION.

Seal brown (no white) with black points, 16 hands 1¼ inches in height, beautifully proportioned and elegantly finished. Balkan is the one horse whose limbs are so correctly formed that a plumb-line from the shoulder drops through the center of the arm, the knee, the cannon-bone, pastern and hoof; consequently his action is straight forward without the slightest side swing, making a pure, frictionless gait. His style and carriage are so lofty that it is universally admitted that in these respects he has no superior on the turf. In a race he is as steady and level-headed as possible, and trots his last quarter the fastest.

PEDIGREE.

By Mambrino Wilkes, son of George Wilkes, sire of Harry Wilkes, 2:13½, and 74 others in the 2:30 list, grandsire of Allerton, 2:09¼; Axtell, 2:12 (three years), and hosts of other noted race horses, dam Fanny Fern by Jack Hawkins, son of Boston, sire of second dam of Maud S., 2:08¾, and Jay-Eye-See, 2:10, and grandsire of second dam of Sunol, 2:08¾. The dam of Jack Hawkins was the famous Keenon mare, the great grandam of Sunol, 2:08¾. Jack Hawkins sired the second dam of Direct, 2:06, so that Balkan, while by a son of George Wilkes, is closely related on the dam's side to the fastest horses of the times. His sire, Mambrino Wilkes, by George Wilkes, dam Lady Christman, by Todhunter's Mambrino, son of Mambrino Chief 11, grandam by Pilot Jr., has produced Gus Wilkes, 2:22, Bay Wilkes, 2:25, Alpheus, 2:27, Clara P., 2:29½, Balkan, 2:15, and numbers in the thirties. His dam, Fanny Fern, produced Mollie Drew, 2:27, Balkan, 2:15, Fred Arnold, trial, 2:27, and several in 2:40 and better. If there is anything in the science of breeding, Balkan, coming from a producing sire and a producing dam, should be unexcelled as a producer. He is just seven years old.

RESUME.

Considering the size, style, beauty, gait, speed, endurance and unexceptionably fashionable breeding of Balkan, it is respectfully submitted that he offers as great attractions to breeders as any of the horses that get a service fee of $500 and $1,000, and his service is offered at $200.

Good pasture and excellent care guaranteed for mares sent to him.

HURRAH, sire of Three Cheers, produced the great winners Bonnie Lizzie, Chaquita, Ohio Boy, Nellie Peyton, Little Buttercup, Red Fox, Medusa, Brad, Referee, Monk, Hostage, Lady Middleton and many others.

NEWMINSTER, grandsire of Three Cheers, won the St. Leger at Doncaster in 1851. His dam, BEESWING, was the winner of fifty-four races out of sixty-four starts, among them being the Doncaster Cup of 1837, 1840, 1841 and 1842, the only horse that ever accomplished that remarkable feat. Her sire was DR. SYNTAX, a famous race-horse.

THREE CHEERS combines, in addition to the above, the great strains of Bay Middleton (winner of English Derby, St. Leger and Two Thousand Guineas) and the blood of the wonderful producing families of TOUCHSTONE, imp. TRUSTEE, EMILIUS and SIR CHARLES.

As can be seen by the above, Three Cheers is bred in the speediest and stoutest lines. His dam, Young Fashion, was the dam of Surprise, Scotland (the only horse that ever beat Asteroid a heat), Liverpool, Columbia and Bonnie Kate, the dam of Little Buttercup and the flying Bonnie Lizzie. His grandam, Fashion, was the greatest race mare of her era, defeating Boston in that historical match at four-mile heats that is recorded as one of the greatest events in the annals of the turf.

THREE CHEERS is a beautiful bay in color, perfectly sound in wind and limb, his family on both sides being noted for their exemption from curbs, spavins, roaring or any other hereditary unsoundness. Horsemen who can appreciate the highest type of the thoroughbred are especially invited to inspect Three Cheers. He has already sired the splendid performers

Acclaim, Almont, Mystery, Cheerful, Applause, Ignacio and Royal Flush,

AND THEY SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

Fifth dam Mary Howe, by Tiger.
Sixth dam Lady Robin, by Robin Gray, sire of third dam of the great Lexington.
Seventh dam by Quicksilver, son of imp. Medley.
Eighth dam by Meades' Celer.

El. Benton's breeding is of the best. The Electioneer-Benton and Electioneer-Norman crosses are deservedly famous, and El Benton combines them all through grand individuals. His dam, Nellie Benton, trotted a trial in 2:18 and went East with the Palo Alto string, but broke down before starting (Marvin's "Training the Trotting Horse," page 102). She is now in foal to Palo Alto, 2:08¾; El Benton is her only living produce foaled before 1891. He is a born race horse and a most worthy member of the greatest trotting family the world has seen.

GLEN FORTUNE

$100 for 1892, usual return privilege and free keep and care from March 1st to July 1st, 1892.

As the dam of Green Mountain Maid and grandam of Electioneer, Shanghai Mary may be called the foundation stone of the Electioneer family, which now holds practically every best on record. Glen Fortune is inbred to this great old mare once through his sire, Electioneer, and again through his dam, a granddaughter of Shanghai Mary.

Glen Fortune's oldest colts were foaled in 1891, and show up splendidly in the kindergarten, where they may be seen any week day.

MOORLAND, $40.

First dam Lady Budd, dam of Capri, sire of Clara Z., 2:26¾.
Moorland's colts show speed. His dam, Lady Budd, was a wonderful road mare; nothing ever beat her in an all-day tussle on the Cliff House road.

The training department is very complete, and curing faults in gait is a specialty. The Souther Farm system of balancing was used most successfully during the past season on several well known horses, of which one took a record of 2:16 1-2, another 2:22 3-4 with several other creditable records and trials.

An entirely new and original system of balancing and conditioning will be shown in a few weeks. Visitors welcome any day except Sunday.

WHEN YOUR BLACK SMITH TELLS YOU

That he doesn't need a SOUTHER FARM RASP, that he can level a horse's hoof for the shoe with the common rasp, he is gloriously mistaken. However, don't point out the error of his ways too suddenly, but merely tell him to go ahead with his old rasp.

When he pronounces the foot level, use the file side of the SOUTHER FARM RASP as shown in adjoining cut, and all hands will be astonished to see how uneven a bearing surface is made by the common rasp, even when handled by a first-class workman. When used by any sensible man, the SOUTHER FARM RASP does perfect work, and leaves the bearing surface absolutely level; and it is the only tool on earth that will give a perfect bearing on both heels and the entire wearing surface.

Training The Trotting Horse

BY CHARLES MARVIN.

This great practical horse book is a handsome, three hundred page octavo, bound in cloth, elegantly printed, superbly illustrated, and explains in every detail the remarkable success of CHARLES MARVIN and the whole plans and methods pursued at Palo Alto as to breaking, training, shoeing, gaiting, driving, keeping, racing and breeding trotters.

Read what J. C. Sibley, the owner of St. Bel, says of this book: "In this work Marvin has let out all the mysteries of the craft, and it is so simple and plain that any breeder, owner, trainer or rubber who has any relish for his business can take a colt as a yearling and develop to the highest and fullest extent that colt's capacity as a trotter. The work impressed me so strongly that I have ordered twenty copies, and shall place one in the hands of every rubber on our farm." Mailed postpaid for $3,50.

WINWOOD, BY ANTEVOLO, 2:19 1-2, DAM DAISY MAY BY NUTWOOD, 2:18 3-4.

WINWOOD.

One of the Most Promising of Our Well-Bred Stallions.

In this progressive age of breeding trotting horses, nearly all of the most liberal-minded breeders have come to the conclusion that there is such a thing in breeding as the "nicking" or "blending" of blood lines with a positive and beneficial result. In olden days it was customary to breed the old farm mare that had merit to the first stallion that came that way. Pedigree he might have, but she, poor thing, might have a known sire and dam; beyond that, she traced to the "great unknown." The question of size, strength and high, lofty knee action was all that was sought for, but the evolution of the American trotting horse of to-day has changed all this. Owners of mares are more careful of selecting mates for them, and the better the stallion is bred the more anxious are they to have a foal by him. The result of these advanced ideas has proved most beneficial to the owners of all mares and stallions, for the colts and fillies have always proven that wisdom was well used in the choice, and they trotted faster than either of their progenitors.

The man who owns a first-class mare to-day reads the advertisements of stallions that are published in the horse journals, and, upon making what he considers a good choice, he immediately communicates with the owner or agent, and if the answer he receives is satisfactory, he forthwith books his mare and feels that in the prospective colt or filly he will have a world-beater. Such men are observant enough of the demands of the general public, and seek to get an animal that will be up to the standard of excellence, which experience has taught them will fulfill every requirement. They demand first of all breeding, then individuality, size, color, disposition, speed and soundness. There are few stallions to-day that are standing for public service that can better "fill the bill" than the fine

Winwood is by Antevolo, 2:19¼ brother to Anteeo, 2:16¼, out of Daisy May, by Nutwood 600; his second dam was the Ralston mare, which the late William C. Ralston purchased of Kentucky parties for $5,000; she was said to be by Alexander's Abdallah, out of a mare by Abdallah 1, but until all the evidence which is now being secured is authenticated, it would not be fair to claim any such breeding for the dam of the wonderfully fast and game trotting mare Daisy May, the dam of Winwood.

Of Antevolo, his sire, what more can be said than what has already been spoken in praise of this, the handsome and game son of Electioneer and Columbine. Electioneer has left a name upon the temple of equine fame that will remain perfect and clear as long as trotters are known, and, as in life he was invincible, his name for all time shall remain imperishable. The greatest living sire of trotters, Nutwood, 2:18¾ (sire of Winwood's dam), which has seventy-seven in the 2:30 list and seventeen in the 2:20 circle, will yet approach Electioneer, and his greatest success as a sire will be by mating with Electioneer mares. How much does the trotting world owe to Nutwood? His California sons have held aloft his crown, and every year have added new strength to his growing fame in his declining years. There is the great Hawthorne, the handsome Dawn, Judge Salisbury, California Nutwood, Baywood, Jim Mulvenna, Brown Jug, Lynwood, El Capitan, Antelope and Woodnut, that will carry on the good work long after he has passed away.

The greatest and most successful cross that Electioneer met with was the Nutwood cross, and the greatest two-year-old on earth, Arion, 2:10¾, is a living monument of the virtues of that great blending. The breeding of Winwood is akin to that of the fleety Arion, for he is by an Electioneer, out of a Nutwood mare; and the same cross that produced Myrtle, 2:19¼ as a three-year-old, is traceable to Winwood. The Nutwood mares have proven invaluable in the stud harems in this State, and the more they resemble him the faster and better the progeny were. Commencing with Arion, 2:10¾; Cæsar, 2:16; Myrtle, 2:19½; Vida Wilkes, 2:19¼; Nutwood Wilkes, 2:20; Maudee, 2:24¼; Lottery Ticket, 2:25; Macleay (at two years), 2:22¼; Hattie D., 2:26¾; Bridal Bells, 2:27½ at two years, Dashwood, 2:29; Oro Fino, 2:29; Electwood, 2:30, and six others in the list. Whenever an Electioneer stallion has been bred to a Nutwood mare, a fast trotter has invariably been the result, so Winwood has a right to be placed among the chosen ones.

Winwood's dam was a Nutwood in every respect. She was a fast, game and untiring trotter, and every one remembers how easily Mr. Requa of Piedmont, her gentlemanly owner, passed everything on the road with her.

Antevolo, the sire of Winwood, is acknowledged by all horsemen to be one of the highest formed types of a trotting horse in America; so far his progeny have not verified the statements so often made of him—that he will prove a greater sire than his brother—but, from present indications, his progeny will come into the charmed circle, not singly and alone, but by platoons. His lovely disposition, strong limbs and level head he transmitted to his progeny to a remarkable degree. All of them trot, and trot fast, but very few have had a trainer's guidance or a breeder's care.

A description of Winwood calls forth all the language of the pleased spectator. In height he is 16 hands exactly, and weighs 1,100 pounds; his color is a beautiful shade of bay that changes its bronze-like shadows and shades with his every movement in the sunlight. In conformation he does not resemble the paternal as much as the maternal side of his ancestors; that is, he is more of a Nutwood than an Electioneer. He is a model of a trotting horse in every way. His head is fine and bony, with great width between the large eyes, showing plenty of brain room; the head tapers symmetrically toward the muzzle; his neck is a royal one, and the elegant way it is set onto his shoulders is noticeable immediately. He is upheaded and of grand natural style, with a bold, courageous and intelligent look; his shoulders are not too slanting; his back is short and strong; from the coupling to the base of the tail he resembles the Belmont family strongly. He has powerfully-muscled quarters, good, deep barrel, splendid limbs well set under him. His pasterns, like his sire's, are long and springy. In front his breast is deep and his arms are heavy. His gaskins are broad and strong; the muscles running well down to the well-shaped hocks; his knees are broad and the cannon bones heavy; the tendons distinct and clear; his feet are most excellent. Taking a comprehensive view of Winwood either in front or from the side, he presents a more striking picture of a well-developed trotting horse than many that have been lauded to the skies as models of symmetry, strength and beauty.

In disposition he is perfect; a child can lead him with a thread of silk; he has no vices that any one has ever seen. Mr. Josiah White had him at his breeding farm at Lakeville, Sonoma county, when he was a three-year-old, and he became enthusiastic over him, and says that a more promising young stallion he never saw.

Winwood has never been handled for speed; he is pure-gaited, and a perfectly smooth trotter, and moves with the elasticity and ease of all of the Electioneer family. He was jogged late last fall, and trotted quarters at a 2:20 clip; this convinced Mr. John A. Codey, his owner, that Winwood is well worthy of being handled for speed, and as he intends to stand him for a season at the Oakland track for the modest sum of fifty dollars, it is his intention to have the season close June 15th, so that he can prepare him for the fall races, where he will prove that the expectations of every one who has seen him move will not prove in vain.

Winwood, although but five years old, has colts and fillies that are, like himself, solid in color, perfect in form, faultless in action, and gentle in disposition, and are the kind that all horsemen are seeking. The great combination of blood lines he represents, Electioneer–Nutwood, has proven of intrinsic value, and left an indelible mark on the annals of breeding that time will never obliterate.

A Very Old Timer.

The appearance of the veteran race horse Hickory Jim in a race at Guttenburg a few days ago has started old-timers guessing as to his age, but the longest-memoried one of the old guard didn't appear to be able to answer the questions satisfactory. The old man Davis, who has owned him for about twenty years, isn't sure as to his age when he got him.

In those twenty years Hickory Jim has been on every race track in the United States. He has raced against the Indian ponies in the Northwest and against cow-boys' bronchos and half-breeds in Texas and Mexico. He has gone all distances and won at all distances, from quarter-mile sprints, with a pile of skins and blankets as high as a house at stake, to mile and a half races for cups. He has run on the flat and gone over hurdles. He has been cheered by excited Indians on the banks of the Upper Missouri, and applauded by hardly less excited crowds at Eastern tracks.

"I raced him for many years against the Indians," said old man Davis the other day, looking at Jim affectionately," and I reckon he won more rifles and blankets and skins than a ship could carry. Didn't we, Jim?" Jim replied with a glance that said plainer than words: "We certainly did. But what is the use of talking to these people about our affairs? What do they know of life?" "Look at him," said the old man, triumphantly; "he understands every word we are saying."

For years Hickory Jim kept the Indians broke. Time and again they would discover some horse unbeatable, only to see him hopelessly defeated by Old Jim. Once the Sioux found a horse they thought invincible, and the whole nation assembled to see Jim beaten. Davis and his friends were on hand to take their bets, and when Jim won there was not a blanket left in the tribe.

Hickory became so famous through all that region that Davis could find no one willing to bet against him. He determined to change the horse's name. After much thought he decided that Red Mike would be a suitable title. Shortly afterwards Davis entered the horse by that name at a thriving mining camp where Butte City now stands, and where a little race track had been laid out in the wilderness.

Unfortunately for Davis' plans the camp was composed exclusively of Irishmen, and the name Red Mike appeared to recall patriotic memories to them. They all plunged on Red Mike, and Davis could not get a bet down. The horse has been Hickory Jim ever since.

After running Jim at every race track in the far West, Davis went South with him, and raced him against the Mexicans and Indians of New Mexico and Arizona, and there, too, he was always successful. Then after years of this kind of racing Jim was taken to Galveston, New Orleans, and at length, about 1879, he first appeared on the big tracks. It was eight years ago that the writer first saw Hickory Jim. It was at the Lexington, Ky., race track. Bonnie Australian was an overwhelming favorite in the race. Frank Harper had a mare called Josie Carter entered, and Colonel Frank Waters had Vanguard. There were half a dozen other starters. In the pools Bonnie Australian was barred, and Hickory Jim sold for a trifle in the field.

There is always sentiment in Kentucky racing, and when the horse came out on the track the grand stand applauded them enthusiastically. Suddenly there came out of the paddock a weather-beaten, angular, rugged old horse, with hair all over him two inches long, and altogether the most extraordinary spectacle ever seen at that aristocratic track. He gave every indication of feeling keenly his humiliating position. His head drooped dejectedly between his knees, and all about him there hung an atmosphere of profound gloom. As he galloped solemnly around the track with a little jockey on his back, such a roar of laughter went up from the crowded grand stand as never was heard before. Everyone asked who the gaunt and woeful stranger was, but no one knew aught of him except that his name was Hickory Jim.

He remained perfectly quiet at the post while the gay thoroughbreds about him were prancing about as full of little airs and graces as a ball-room belle. The gloom on his scarred old face was every moment deepening. He got off badly when the flag fell, and passed the stand lengths away. The crowd cheered him derisively. He did not heed their insults, however, but continued on his way with his head down, looking neither to the left nor to the right.

He gradually closed in on his horses, and as they rounded into the homestretch some one yelled: "Why, Hickory Jim is winning!" And sure enough he was. With long, steady, resistless strides, he was sweeping through the field, and before the final furlong was reached he was leading by daylight. He won without being urged, without even quickening those long, swinging motions, as regular as a pendulum.

The crowd, with characteristic fickleness, gave Jim a great ovation; pretty girls clapped their gloved hands, and big men threw up their hats and shouted till they were red and hoarse. But Jim scorned their tardy applause. He went off to his stable with an expression of even greater gloom upon his face, and never once even looked toward the grand stand. In 1883 Hickory Jim started forty-five times. He was first seven times, second seventeen times and third nine times. This was his banner year on the big tracks. He won in purses alone $3,200. He started thirty-two times in 1884 and won seven times. He has faced the flag nearly 250 times since 1881, and it is a fair estimate to say that he has run at least 500 races in his life, the greatest number of races probably ever run by any horse in the world.

Davis has won enough money with Jim to make him a rich man. He estimates his winnings at $250,000, but the money won by staunch old Jim went on handsomer, but more worthless horses, and in his old age neither Jim nor his master have much to show for what they have made. They live together in a little stable and kitchen near the Guttenburg race track—Jim and the old man—and share good luck together when it comes. Jim is raced seldom these days, just enough to keep in sound health. He is in good condition, and, although in poverty in his honored old age, he is not neglected. Any morning or afternoon Hickory Jim and the old man can be seen walking together under the stable sheds in all kinds of weather, the old man's hands stroking Hickory's neck and Hickory rubbing his nose softly against the old man's cheek.

Those Flaxtail Mares.

The following letter from L. B. Hicks, son of Dr. M. W. Hicks, will explain a mistake made in the communication of G. H. Nelson of La Harpe, Illinois, referred to in our last issue. Beneath if will be found a list of dates of the breeding of the mares sold at the Hicks sale:

Editor Breeder and Sportsman: Dear Sir:—I send you the time the mares were served. Head it to suit yourself. In last week's Breeder I notice a card from G. H. Nelson of La Harpe, Ill., saying that he once owned Flaxtail. He leased Flaxtail, but never owned him a day in his life. Flaxtail died the property of M. W. Hicks.

Brasfield's Kentucky Sale.

Lexington, February 3, 1892.

Editor Breeder and Sportsman:—This was the third day of Brasfield & Co.'s sale of standard-bred trotters. The weather was raw and the bidding was not as spirited as yesterday; still the sixty-two head sold realized $12,620—an average of $668.

The prize of to-day's sale was the splendid bay mare Morea, by Electioneer out of Maria Pilot, with a race record of 2:24¼, and the winner of sixteen hotly-contested races. She showed speed in the trial ring, and the competion for her was of the liveliest sort, John E. Madden, of Lexington, finally securing her for $3,125.

Woodard and Shankin's sale, consisting of Barnhart, full brother to Allerton, and many others of the Williams lot, begins here next Monday, and the horsemen to-day were astonished when the following telegram from Monroe Salisbury was read:

"To Woodard and Shankin Margaret S., 2:12¼, May Day, her dam; Roxana, by Gibraltar, dam May Day; Nellie R., 2:17, and Erector, by Director, dam Millie D., leave here to-night for your sale. All mares, save Margaret S., in foal to Director."

It was thought Salisbury would keep Margaret S. for a broodmare. She will be sold Saturday, the 13th.

Montana Raker, c f, by Red Wilkes, dam Milliner by Harold; H. M. Jones, Winchester, Ky., $1,125.

Mrs. Ten Broeck proved that her husband was at times extremely cruel as well as insulting to her guests. Richard Ten Broeck has owned in his time Lexington, Le Compte, Prioress, Optimist and many other horses famous in both America and England.

THAT LOS ANGELES FREE-FOR-ALL.

Communications Regarding the McKinney-Frank M.-Wanda-Silas Skinner Race.

The following, received from Louis Thorne, Secretary of the Sixth District Agricultural Association, and bearing the seal of that organization, will be interesting to our horsemen, as it has reference to a dispute over a race that has attracted attention and been discussed from one end of the country to the other. We have published the version of one side, and now give "the other side's" version:

OFFICE OF THE 6TH DISTRICT AGRICULTURAL ASS'N.
LOS ANGELES, January 28, 1892.

EDITORS BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—In your issue of January 9th, under the heading of "Paid Judges," you say, among other things: "That the action of the judges in the McKinney race in the City of Oranges will do more to prevent trotters from going there than anything that could occur, etc." And again, in another article, we are told that the action of certain judges on the circuit, and especially those at Los Angeles, has disgusted this well-known breeder with the way the races were managed, alluding to Mr. Burke's contemplated sale of stock, etc. There is no doubt that the articles were written by one who did not witness the race, but was hundreds of miles away, and whose only information in relation to it was gained from Mr. Burke, and perhaps a few others mutually interested with him in its termination. That Mr. Burke should feel so disgusted is passing strange. Wanda did not win a heat, nor did her driver claim one. She was given the position she won in the previous heat in every instance, and we see no reason why, on account of this race, Mr. Burke should sell out or have such a disgust on, unless it may have been that he was terribly interested in Frank M., that did win a heat, but was unable to win the race with the help of the speedy Wanda. Frank M. won the first heat in 2:18 without much of a contest. McKinney won the second heat, passing Skinner on the home turn, Wanda at the seven-eighths pole and Frank M. at the drawgates, in 2:17¼. The scoring for the third heat was tedious; the drivers of Frank M., Wanda and Silas Skinner were fined for persisting in coming down in advance of the pole horse. The driver of Frank M. refused to pay his fine, and declared he would take his horse to the stable, showing conclusively that he ignored the rules and would treat the judges with utter contempt. Mr. Burke paid the fines for the trio, and finally they got off. Frank M. took the pole on the first turn, lapped by Wanda and Skinner, McKinney trailing around the turn. On the backstretch he made an effort to pass, was carried out in the weeds and broke, caught quickly, and again on the lower turn, in attempting to pass, was held between Wanda's wheel and the outside rail; the wheels were locked for one hundred yards, but after the most gallant and determined drive ever seen on a race track McKinney passed Wanda, and in the stretch Frank M., and won the heat in 2:17. The driver of Wanda claimed that the driver of McKinney forced Wanda into Frank M.'s wheel, but he did not complain of the driver of Frank M. for forcing him out there—of course not—for 'tis said the three made an agreement the night before the race in a saloon on Second street that whatever happened they would not complain of one another. Be that as it may—it is certain that if they did make that agreement they lived up to it religiously—the driving in the third heat was conclusive evidence to ten thousand people that witnessed the race that the three up-country drivers had formed a combination to beat McKinney by fair means if they could, and foul means if they must. The second heat demonstrated that it could not be done by the former means, so the latter alternative was adopted, and played for all it was worth. In the fourth heat Frank M. took the pole going around the first part of the turn, Wanda and Skinner lapped on, McKinney trailing. At the three-eighths pole Wanda and Skinner were in the lead, head-and-head, Frank M. two lengths back, and trotting ten or twelve feet from the pole. McKinney coming up rapidly on the inside position, the driver of Frank M. pulled in front of him, causing the driver of McKinney to pull back, shortening his stride perceptibly. Durfee then attempted to pass on the other side, and was carried by the driver of Frank M. to the extreme outside (in the weeds, the Patrol Judge said). On the lower turn they closed on the leaders, Frank M. was allowed to pass next the pole, but McKinney was carried out and held up by the drivers of Wanda and Silas Skinner. In fact, from the start to finish of this heat it was driven by the combined forces of the Northern horses with a desperation that completely ignored rules and judges. Frank M. passed the wire half a length in advance of McKinney. All the drivers came into the judges' stand, and the three from the North were unanimous in the opinion that Frank M. should be given the heat. Durfee claimed his horse was made to go a mile and a quarter, etc.

The Patrol Judges reported, and the judges awarded the heat and race to McKinney, basing their decision upon the American Trotting Association rule in relation to crossing, setting down in front of, or doing any act popularly known as helping. And right here let us assure you that harness racing is as popular in the "City of Oranges" as in any part of the State, brought about mainly by the judges enforcing the rules and endeavoring to give equal justice to all, that the public may see a genuine contest and the best horses allowed to win, and the people appreciate it.

The judges are directors of the Association and guard its interests to the best of their ability, and feel assured that on general principles one will look after his own business quite as faithfully as one employed to do so.

[Seal] L. LICHTENBERGER, President.
L. THORNE, Secretary.

EDITORS BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN:—Three months have passed since the much-talked-of and grossly misrepresented "Free-for-All" trot between McKinney, Frank M., Silas Skinner and Wanda was trotted over the track of the Sixth Dist. Ag. Ass'n. at Los Angeles. We had hoped that after the parties interested had seen themselves in print they would cease their misrepresentations, but have been disappointed.

Knowing that the decision of the judges was an honest one, so long as the lying statements were made only by the baffled conspirators we have permitted their childish whinings to pass unnoticed, but when the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN, the turf and sporting authority of the Pacific Coast, editorially asserts that "the action of the judges in the McKinney race will do more to prevent trotters from going to the 'City of Oranges' than anything that could occur there," then forbearance ceases to be a virtue. We have looked upon the BREEDER AND SPORTSMAN as the unflinching friend of honest racing, the uncompromising foe of job and jobbers, and were naturally surprised and aggrieved to see that your paper condemned the action of the judges in that race for having defeated one of the most barefaced conspiracies to capture the race by foul means that ever was known to have taken place on any track. There was not less than eight thousand spectators, thousands of Los Angeles money went into the pool box on Frank M., and yet there was no kick except from Mr. Burke and Mr. McGraw; and why should they do all the kicking? Neither Silas Skinner nor Wanda were "in it" at any stage of the race. From start to finish their driver neither tried, hoped or expected to win a heat, and were satisfied to act the contemptible part of obstructing the only horse that was trying to win an honest race. We allude to McKinney.

The three gentlemen who acted as judges are directors of this association. They are breeders too, and quite as much interested in honest racing as Mr. Burke. They have been residents of this county for more than twenty years, and none who know them will accuse them of anything dishonest or dishonorable. Their only mistake was an earnest desire to treat those gentlemen who had brought their horses from San Francisco not only with fairness, but with leniency. Had they been actuated by any desire to favor McKinney after the second heat had been trotted they would have removed the drivers of Silas Skinner and Wanda and replaced them with men who would have driven those horses to win rather than act as helpers to Frank M. Therein lies their mistake, and their only one. The third heat exposed the conspiracy in all its deformity. Rules 72, 73, 74 and 75 of the A. T. A. were repeatedly violated by the drivers of the Northern horses, and still the judges, owing to their wish to be lenient with their visitors, did not rule them out, as they might and should have done. No such barefaced attempt at bulldozing has ever occurred on any track, to our knowledge, as that attempted by the drivers of Frank M., Silas Skinner and Wanda. They made no effort to conceal their job, relying on their barefaced effrontery to carry it through. No wonder that the spectators picked Durfee up and carried him to the scales. They would have done the same with McKinney, if it were possible, nor need this ebullition of enthusiasm be attributed to any personal friendship for Durfee. He had driven hotly contested races many times on this track, and no such demo stration ever occurred before. No, sir; it was the American love for fair play, coupled with admiration for the brave man who dared to risk his life in defeating the disgraceful combination which had been put up against him and his lame horse. Even those who had put their money on Frank M. took part in it.

If Mr. Frank H. Burke has determined to sell his horses, mares, colts and fillies and retire from the business because he would not be allowed to job that race, let him go. It is better for the interest of honest racing that a hundred such as he should retire from the breeders' ranks than that an association should countenance the perpetration of one such fraud as that attempted in the 2:17 trot at Los Angeles on the 24th of October.

We have no fears as to being able to procure horses to take part in our meetings. Honest horsemen, knowing that they will be protected on our track, will come whenever it is made worth their while to do so, and we hereby give notice that none but honest racing will be permitted on the track of this association.

L. THORNE, Secretary.
